BIG SCHOONER A WRECK, CREW HELPLESS; 2 DEAD

Wireless Message Tells of Disaster to Gloucester Boat Cavalier, 300 Miles East of Cape Ann—Sixteen Men on Board.

Revenue Cutter Androscoggin Picks Up Damaged Craft While Looking for Derelict; Message Sent Through Halifax

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 18.—The following message was received here to-night via wireless to Halifax, N. S., from the revenue cutter Androscoggin:

U. S. CUTTER ANDROSCOGGIN, Feb. 18.—While searching for a derelict saw the Gloucester fishing schooner Cavalier this afternoon about 2 o'clock about 300 miles southeast of Cape Ann, dismaster and in distress. Jib boom gone, flying signal of distress. Sixteen men on board. In this condition for eleven days, during which they lost two men overboard at sea.

The Androscoggin, after some difficulty took her in tow in a gale of wind and rough sea without injury to either. She is now steering towards Cape Ann with the schooner in tow against a heavy wind and sea. Towing at rate of about four knots per hour.

The Cavalier, one of the fastest of the Gloucester fishing fleet, left Gloucester port a little over a month ago, in charge of Captain Robert B. Porper, considered one of the most able commanders around the fishing banks.

Spoken Off Green Banks.

The Cavalier was spoken by several fishing vessels off the Green banks. The last heard of her was when her rudder was turned in the direction of the Grand banks.

The Cavalier specialized in halibut fishing. It was one of the newer of the Gloucester craft. Captain Porper made several record trips home from the banks in the sturdy boat. By fishermen the schooner was regarded as one of the trimmest and speediest to be found along the coast.

The Cavalier was owned by the Canning ham & Thompson Company of Gloucester. Captain Porper has a daughter in Boston. Mrs. James Porter. Her husband was formerly well known in yachting circles in South Boston.

The schooner Cavalier is a boat of 135 tons and is one of the newest types of fishing vessels.

Carried Eighteen Men.

Frank C. Pearce, a member of the firm of Conningham & Thompson, owners of the Cavalier, said early to-day:

"I do not recall the names of the crew of the Cavalier. The captain, Robert B. Porter, was one of the best men that ever sailed a fishing vessel. It was none of his fault that the ship was in distress. The Cavalier carried eighteen men all told. I would not be able to tell their names until morning.

"I think the wireless must be wrong in regard to the loss of the jib boom. The Cavalier had no jib boom. The boysprit is probably meant in the dispatch.

"The Cavalier was one of the best craft on the coast, was built five years ago, at a cost of about $18,000. Her tonnage was 140. She left for the Grand Banks five weeks ago for fresh halibut. She was in all likelihood the only vessel on the bank at this time. She was last reported off the Banks of Pangreeway a little over three weeks ago, I should judge. That was soon after she sailed away from Gloucester."

Ames Gets a Seat On Lodge Bandwagon

Insurgent Republican Lets Bygones Be Bygones and His Secretary Will Be Lowell Postmaster.

Word came up from Washington last night that Butler Ames, who ran away from home more than a year ago to shoot Indians, had shinned up the water-spout, climbed in a back window and was hiding under "Papa" Lodge's bed.

Men who had seen the Ames aeronautical shoes and the Ames spindlehanks sticking from under the bed told everybody in Washington about it.

Exactly when the prodigal got back is not definitely known. There are, however, two facts available

Senator Lodge has agreed to support the nomination of Joseph A. Legare, Congressman Ames' secretary, to be postmaster at Lowell.

Congressman Ames has accepted an invitation to the dinner that Senator Lodge is soon to give the Massachusetts delegation in Congress.

"I am willing," Congressman Ames said over the telephone last night, "to let bygones be bygones."

The orchestra will please oblige with "We Are All Little Pals Together."

3,100 AT THE OPERA.

Largest Crowd on Record Sees "Girl of the Golden West."

Thirty-one hundred spectators, the largest crowd that has ever attended a performance of any opera at the Boston Opera House, heard Constantino and Carmen Mells sing in the first performance at popular prices of "The Girl of the Golden West" last night. For the first time in the history of the Opera House, standing room was sold and two extra chairs were placed in every box for the accommodations of the hundreds of opera lovers, who wanted to hear Puccini's latest opera at popular prices, which prevail on Saturday nights only. Fully 600 people were turned away because of lack of room. Constantino, Carmen Mells and Polese were cheered and applauded for many minutes.

"SPECS" ON THE KAISER.

German Emperor for First Time Wears Glasses in Public.

BERLIN, Feb. 18.—For the first time in his life the Kaiser has appeared in public "wearing specs." The occasion on which these eye glasses were worn was he delivery by the Emperor of an address to the German Agricultural Congress.

CATS IN A SUIT CASE.

Roxbury Man Produces Five Live Ones When Arrested.

Five live cats constituted the contents of a dress suit case which William Hanrahan of No. 66 Batchelder street, Roxbury, was carrying on Dudley street last night when stopped and questioned by a patrolman of Station No. 9. The suspicious actions of Hanrahan led to his arrest.

When questioned at the police station Hanrahan informed the police that he was taking the cats to the Animal Rescue League, but his explanation did not satisfy the officers and he was locked up on a charge of cruelty to animals. His story still be investigated.

TILLMAN BREAKS DOWN.

Sinks Weeping Into Seat While Paying Tribute to the Dead.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—So affected by the illness with which he was stricken during the last session of Congress as to be unable to continue, Senator Tillman of South Carolina to-day sank sobbing into his seat shortly after having begun a speech in eulogy of the late Senators Alexander S. Clay, of Georgia, and Jonathan P. Dolliver of Iowa.

SEND AIRSHIP TO BORDER.

Collier's Biplane Shipped to Army Near Mexican Line.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Robert Collier's biplane, the first of the aeronautical reserve air scouts to be accepted by the War Department for patrol duty on the Mexican border, has been shipped from New York and was due to arrive at San Antonio, Texas, to-night. Orders have been issued to Parmalee, the Wright aviator, who will operate the machine, to report to Lieutenant Foulois at San Antonio.

MASCAGNI SUIT OPENS.

Composer Asks Damages From New York Managers.

MILAN, Italy, Feb. 18.—The trial of the suit instituted by Pietro Mascagni, the composer, and Eduardo Sonzogno, the music publisher, against Liebler & Co. of New York over the cancellation of a contract for the production of the opera, "Yasbel," was begun to-day. The defendant firm was not represented, and the plaintiff's lawyers asked that they be awarded damages.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN SEE FAIRY OPERA

Appreciative Audience From St. Botolph School Attend "Hansel Und Gretel."

BOX-HOLDERS GIVE SEATS

Crutches and Wheel Chairs Seen Where Silk Hats and Furs Generally Are.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

GRAND OPERA never had a stranger audience than peered from the boxes at the Opera House yesterday afternoon, at the performance of "Hansel Und Gretel."

Tiny hollow-eyed children from the North End occupied the chairs in many of the boxes usually filled with gay society people, and when the lights in the house were turned on, crutches, wheel chairs and other means of locomotion for cripples could be seen in the rear of each box where silk hats and opera cloaks are usually placed.

Fifty-four crippled children from the school for Crippled Children in St. Botolph street were scattered about in the boxes and orchestra stalls.

They were in charge of Miss Margaret Lang, music teacher at the school, who had persuaded the holders to give up their boxes and seats for one occasion, that the children might see the fairy opera.

Children Roam in Foyer.

The boxes of Mrs. E. D. Brandegee, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Mrs. Oliver Ames, Mrs. George Weld and Mrs. H. L. Slater were entirely given over to the children, while other box holders took two or three children in with them.

During the intermission many of the children were allowed to roam about in the foyer and the tap-tap of their crutches on the stone floor was an unfamiliar sound in the Opera House.

The wonder and delight of these children at the big theatre, at the music and the scenes on the stage, was indescribable.

Hansel and Gretel are two little German children, the offspring of Peter, a broommaker. The first act was a scene familiar to most of the little visitors, poverty. There was no food in the cupboard. The mother wept with hunger and misery and sent the children out to pick strawberries so that they shouldn't starve.

But when the fairies and angels appeared in the second act all the juveniles enjoyed themselves. There are few things more beautiful in grand opera than the fading of the forest and the appearance of the gleaming golden stairs, down which come many winged angels to guard the children while they sleep.

Oh, the Wicked Witch.

And then the third act. From Heaven they travelled to fairyland, where a wicked old witch lived in a hut made out of gingerbread. The old witch took the two children and put Hansel in a cage, while she threw a spell upon Gretel. But the youngsters in the audience were not afraid, for they had been told the Grimm fairy tale the day before, and knew that the children would push the old witch into the furnace and burn her up.

So when she went riding around on her broomstick they laughed with glee and shrieked with delight when she was finally dumped into the furnace she was beating for Hansel.

Miss Lang conceived the idea of taking the poor children to the opera and solicited the seats by advertising in the newspapers asking subscribers to donate their boxes and seats for one matinee. She was successful to the extent of fifty-four seats, mostly in boxes."

INSANE PATIENT ESCAPES.

Police Hunting for Fugitive From Mattapan Hospital.

Fred Krauss, an inmate of the Boston State Hospital for the insane at Mattapan, escaped from the institution last night. He was sent to the hospital from the People's Palace of the Salvation Army in June. Krauss is thirty-five years old, five feet seven inches tall, and weighs about 111 pounds. He has blue eyes, smooth face and light complexion. He wore a regulation gray hospital suit, and either a black stiff hat or a cap. The physicians at the hospital do not regard him as being dangerous.

BIG DECISIONS AWAITED.

Supreme Court May Settle Important Cases To-morrow.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The United States Supreme Courts meets on Monday next, after its recess, and official Washington believes that the long awaited decisions in the four big cases now before the court will be handed down. These are the Standard Oil, Tobacco Trust, Corporation Tax and Gompers and Morrison Mitchell contempt cases.

SOCIETY SCRAMBLES EGGS IN ODD RACE.

Mighty Smashing of Shells as Boys and Girls Gallop Around Riding.

ANNUAL GYMKHANA OPENS.

Everybody So Pleased All Will Attend "Mother Goose Masquerade" on Horseback.

NINETEEN eggs, on nineteen spoons, held by nineteen boys and girls on the backs of nineteen horses, started around the ring of the New Riding Club in Hemenway street at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, while a large and representative gathering of Boston society looked on in fear and trembling. Some of the eggs never came back alive, and all the king's horses, and all the king's men, couldn't have put one of them together again.

The game was to carry the egg once around the ring in the spoon, prizes being awarded for the best time. Entries were restricted to boys and girls under eighteen, and the first prize, a silver cup, was won by Miss Isabelle Lee of Chestnut Hill. Miss Lee brought her egg back safe and sound in fifteen seconds. The second prize, a brass cup, went to Miss Olivia Ames, whose time was seventeen seconds.

The egg-and-spoon contest opened the annual gymkhana for the young people of society. It was an afternoon of merriment

Miss Thorndike a Winner.

A dozen girls were entered in the mallet and ball race, which was won by Miss Alice Thorndike, with Miss Natalie Thayer second. Starting their horses from one side of the ring, and carrying mallets, the trick was to knock three polo balls from the other end of the ring into a basket at the starting point.

William Homans fairly walked away with the silver cup, in the stocking and garter race, with John Simpkins a fast second. Stockings and garters were provided for the young contestants by the committee. The youngsters rode the length of the ring, dismounted, removed their stockings and garters, put said stockings and garters on the horses' fore legs, mounted, and rode back. The boys seemed to understand the requirements exactly. Occasionally, however, a horse would put his foot in it; and occasionally other accidents.

One of the liveliest events of the afternoon was the "suffragette" race for couples. Nobody could quite explain why "suffragette," unless because the women led the man around on a string.

At one end of the ring the boys stood waiting with their saddles. From the other end the girls approached, mounted, each leading the bareback pony of her partner. The task for the boy was to saddle his pony, mount, and be led back. It was very largely up to the young man in the case, which probably explains why Miss Dodothy Forbes had to be content with second prize. Miss Forbes' partner was Gordon Prince. Mr. L. Means and Miss Little more quickly than Mr. Prince, and to Mr. Means and the fair Miss Sylvia Warren went first honors.

Tandem Obstacle Race.

Miss Evelyn Thayer proved an adept at saddle tandems in the tandem obstacle race for girls, racing her ponies through obstacles like a perfect little horsewoman. Miss Natalie Thayer again took a "second."

The most uproarious laughter was caused by the "shirt waist" race for boys, in which every contestant was compelled to ride across the ring, dismount, don a shirt waist and a skirt, mount, and ride back to the starting point. It was quickly evident that young William Homans had been studying Julian Eltinge. Mr. Homans performed the quickest feat of dressing ever seen west of Arlington street. John Simpkins was not at all a bad second.

Miss Anna Agassiz, Miss Isabella Lee, Gordon Prince and Henry Guild won the relay race each of the four, in turn, driving a team of four over the course. Then there was a special relay race, for three men and one pony, over hurdles. The winners were Dr. Reginald Fitz, Gibson King and L. Means.

The judges were W. H. Seabury, Francis W. Lee and George S. Mandell. Among the contestants were many members of the Vincent Club and younger girls not yet "out." The participants included the Misses Alice and Olivia Thorndike, Dorothy Forbes, Rosamond Bradley, Eleonora Sears, Dorothy Mandell, Alice De Ford and Clemence Crafts.

It was all so splendid that everybody made a firm resolution, right there on the spot, to let nothing keep them away from the mounted "Mother Goose" masquerade, on Saturday, March 4.

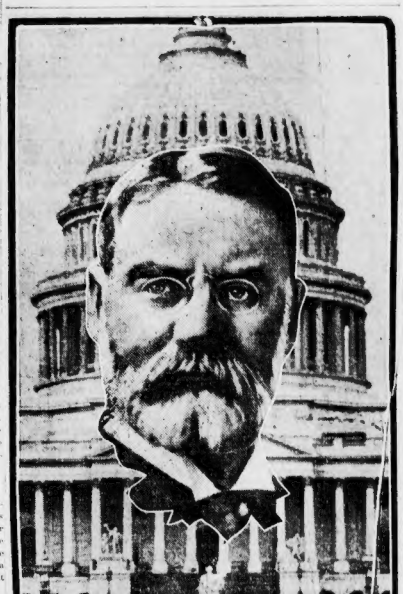
FILIBUSTER IN CONGRESS TO HOLD UP RECIPROCITY



Representative James R. Mann of Illinois, who is engineering a filibuster beneath the dome of the National Capitol which may make an extra session of Congress necessary.

MANN OF ILLINOIS KEEPS HOUSE IN ALL NIGHT SESSION

Cannon's Lieutenants Opposing Omnibus Claims Bill, Believed to Have Conspired to Block Canadian Legislation

Senate Finance Committee Aids in Delaying Action by Giving Hearings; Extra Session, With Democrats in Control, Likely

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—With but ten legislative days remaining of this session of Congress, and much important legislation, including several appropriation bills, to pass, the House is tied up in a filibuster conducted by Representative James R. Mann of Chicago, chief lieutenant of Speaker Cannon.

An all-night session was held to-night. Mr. Mann says the reason for his course is his opposition to the omnibus war claims and overtime navy claims bill, which he charges contains many items drawing money from the treasury that should not have been allowed.

He is laying saddled in his fight by the New England contingency, which is incensed at the action of the House Committee on Claims in throwing from the bill the French exclusion claims.

It is clock-room gossip about the House, however, that other reasons lie back of the filibuster. It is asserted there is a concerted movement on the part of the Republican leaders in Congress to force an extra session and thereby require the Democrats to take responsibility for the passage of the Canadian reciprocity treaty or its failure.

Hope to Trap Democrats.

There is a Republican belief also that the Democrats are not ready to present their tariff revision bills and cannot be ready for an early date. Should an extra session be called the Democrats would have to take on the question of a general revision of the tariff and an ill-considered and hurriedly planned revision would work to their discomfiture.

Whether or not the Mann fight has back of it the purpose of clogging the house wheels and thereby preventing the passage of necessary legislation at the regular session, the talk of an extra session has grown insistent since last night.

It is possible for both House and Senate to accomplish much in the way of Legislation in the closing hours, and this is now the only argument advanced against the extra session talk.

Mr. Mann began his fight against the omnibus claims bill shortly before noon Friday. There was a recess at 10 o'clock last night until 11 o'clock to-day, and the fight went merrily along under the parliamentary tuition of a continuous legislative day, with the reading of the bill and amendments and many calls for a quorum.

No Way to Escape.

Last night it was thought Mr. Mann had won his fight when he accepted Mr. Underwood's motion to take a recess because the hour at which the recess was to end was the same hour as fixed under a resolution of the House for the House to meet on new legislative days. Speaker Cannon ruled, however, that while the House had no authority to do what it had done it had taken certain action with reference to the recess and there was no way to escape such action.

Representative Mann at 11 p. m. was still conducting successfully his filibuster against the omnibus claims bill. He was having trouble in keeping a quorum, and the sergeant-at-arms was busy rounding up absent members at the leading hotels and clubs.

Gridiron Dinner Raided.

Three members were taken from the gridiron club dinner, much to their disgust. They were James A. Tawney, chairman of the House Committee on appropriations; William McKinley, of Illinois, and George Malby of New York. Representative Clayton of Alabama offered a resolution that the fight be carried over until Monday without prejudice, and a debate ensued over the proposition.

Clayton's resolution to postpone action

MAYOR BUSIEST OF ALL IN WASHINGTON

Calls on Taft and Congress, Works for Ship Subsidy; Hustles for Palm Beach.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston spent some time here to-day en route South, where he is going to take a vacation. He did not register at any hotel. He was not in one place long enough to do so. Washington is used to hurry-up visits, but she has never entertained a visitor who keeps as busy as the Mayor of Boston does on his periodical visits to the National Capital.

Some Heavy Work.

Mr. Fitzgerald covered an enormous amount of ground during his stay here. He took in the White House, the Capitol and several government departments. He called to pay his respects to President Taft. At the Capitol he saw Senator Lodge briefly, as well as some other members of the Massachusetts delegation. He did not call on Representatives Keliher and O'Connell of Boston.

As an ex-member of the House, the Mayor has the privilege of the floor in both House and Senate, and he exercised it to-day for the purpose of renewing old acquaintances. He shook hands all around and for a time watched the filibuster in the House.

Works for Ship Subsidy.

The Mayor put in some good licks for the ship subsidy bill while at the Capitol. He advised Democrats to vote for the Gallinger bill, which appears to be buried beyond the hope of resurrection.

"Subsidy legislation would be in the interest of Boston," said Mayor Fitzgerald. "Our port has a large business, but it would be increased if we had adequate steamship connection with South America."

At the War Department, Mayor Fitzgerald took up with the army engineers the question of raising the Chelsea bridge.

"I am for reciprocity with Canada," said the Mayor. "We should have lower tariff. Governor Foss is making good, splendidly."

Mayor Fitzgerald got in touch with his confidential secretary, Richard Field, at 1 p. m. and dropped the telephone only ten minutes before his train left the Capitol for Palm Beach. The Mayor will not be in the zone for telephone communication with City Hall again for two weeks.

SHOT BY COUSIN IN DUEL OVER WOMAN

Malden Man Badly Wounded and Police are Looking for Relative Who Fled.

Antonio Scibelli, aged twenty-five was shot in the mouth and then in the chest late yesterday afternoon in a duel with pistols in front of the house at No. 5 Ilsley court street, Malden. As a result of the shooting the police are looking for Paul Scibelli, twenty-five, Antonio's first cousin, who is alleged to have been the other man in the duel.

According to the wounded man's brother, Raffaello, with whom the cousins lodged at the Hubbard street house, the two men had quarreled over a handsome young widow to whom each was paying devoted attention. Raffaello and his wife witnessed the shooting of their relation by another blood relation.

Antonio dropped to the street. He was later carried into the house. A physician was summoned. He is expected to recover.

Paul took to his heels, and was chased by three police officers of the Malden department into Charlestown. It was said he had escaped into Boston.

Raffaello Scibelli, the lodging house keeper, told the police his brother had drawn his pistol first. He said it failed to go off. Then Paul fired, he declared. Raffaello said the two men had been quarreling all day as to which should be permitted the monopoly of the pretty widow's affections.

AFTER BIG LUMBER TRUST.

Federal Prosecution Is Planned Against Monopoly.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The Department of Justice is preparing to prosecute the so-called lumber trust, consisting of interests that have combined to control timber in the United States. Federal action will be based on information in three reports coming from the commissioner of corporations. One will deal with manufacture; the second with the cost of production and the third with existing competitive methods.

RECIPROCITY WILL NOT AFFECT TARIFF.

Col. Sprague, of the Executive Committee of the Republican City Committee and President of the Ashcroft Ventilating system, says that his company will not be affected in reciprocity, as all their different kinds of ventilating devices are manufactured in Canada as well as in the United States.

FILIBUSTER HOLDS HOUSE ALL NIGHT

Cannon Lieutenants Plan to Force an Extra Session; Reciprocity Delayed.

The reciprocity agreement was delayed under the prote tive tariff are choosing what they consid r the lesser of the two evils, rather than free trade with Canada than more or less unlimited free trade with all countries. They do not doubt that President Taft will make good his threat to call an extra session of the new Congress if the Senate fails to vote on the reciprocity agreement during the remaining days before the sixty-first Congress expires on March 4, and they fear what the next Congress may bring forth.

The Democrats will be in unquestioned control of the new House. In the Senate there will be many new faces, some belonging to Democrats who will replace Republican old guardsmen. A poll of the present Senate showed sixty-five members in favor of reciprocity. The terms of about thirty Senators expire March 4, so the AMERICAN telegraphed to the incoming Senators to ascertain their attitude toward Canadian reciprocity, should an extra session be called. Here are some of the replies received:

Mostly for Reciprocity.

A. J. Gronna, North Dakota: "I suppose the Canadian reciprocity agreement at this session and the extra session unless radical changes are made in it."

G. M. Hitchcock, Nebraska: "I voted for Canadian reciprocity in the House, and in case of an extra session I would vote for it as before."

W. E. Chilton, West Virginia: "The Legislature of West Virginia has instructed the Senators from this State to vote in favor of Canadian reciprocity. My situation would be to obey their instructions even if my own views inclined me otherwise. I know of no reason why I should differ from the representatives of the people in the Legislature."

John W. Kern, Indiana: "I am in favor of all measures looking to a reduction of tariff taxation."

Charles F. Johnson, Maine: "While I favor the widest reciprocal agreements with other countries, and in favor of the spirit and general purpose of the present reciprocity agreement with Canada, I am not willing to be committed to any plan without fuller investigation and information."

James E. Martine, New Jersey: "As I now look at the matter, I am in favor of Canadian reciprocity."

The House went into general debate on the omnibus canal bill, to end at 2:30 p. m. At that time J.M. Mann was to present his substitute for the bill, and the five minute debate rule. It is said he has 100 such amendments. The advocates of the bill said they would not let it out with Mann.

Canadian reciprocity received a setback at the hands of the Senate Finance Committee to-day. After deciding to give hearings on the McCall bill, the committee reconsidered its action and decided to grant hearings on Monday next instead of next Wednesday the committee will meet for final action. This decision was as a result of many calls from those who favored the hearings, and who feared that delay final action on the bill.

The committee came to the conclusion that changes and other ratifications and the similar interests. There are now two bills pending affecting the matter into the Senate before Wednesday and a report from it is now made, would go over until Thursday. That will leave only seven legislative days during which it can be considered along with many other important matters.

Look for Extra Session.

In view of the action of the committee Senators are more than ever inclined to believe that a vote cannot be reached on that an extra session is necessary if the President insists upon action upon the Canadian reciprocity measure in December. The only chance of getting the bill through at this session is an agreement on the part of obstructionists not to filibuster against it.

There is unquestionably a majority of the Senate in favor of the reciprocity bill if it can be brought to a vote, but it lies within the power of two or three Senators to defeat it by talk if they see fit to do so.

Pressure is being brought to bear to induce them not to do that, especially to carry in an extra session, and they are conquering it will be Democratic revision of the tariff.

This is the only thing that will force them to yield, but they think the situation doubtful, and most Senators look for an extra session.

Several amendments will be submitted, but they will be in the nature of free gifts to Canada and are not expected to nullify the negotiations, they added, being to appease the Senators from the middle West.

Unusual activity in the matter of legislation, demanding attention and with the session only rapidly drawing to a close is the while the power of three or four determined men to thwart any attempt to reach a vote on the agreement. There are now ahead of it the constitutional amendment, the Lodmer case, the postal pay pension bill, the tariff commission bill and a number of important appropriation measures.

ROSE TARDIFF, SHOE STITCHER, INJURED IN FACTORY IN SALEM

ROSE TARDIFF

Rose Tardiff, an employe of Jonathan Broten & Co., shoe manufacturers at Salem, was partly scalped by one of the machines while at work yesterday. The girl is a stitcher, operating a machine in a large room where many other girls work. The machine became clogged, and she started to clean it. Miss Tardiff leaned over the machine, her hair caught in the shaft which transmits power. At her scream every girl in the room sprang towards the spot. Her head was drawn against the shaft, and before the power could be shut off she was pitifully injured.

As the girls fell unconscious on the floor several of her shopmates minded, others ran screaming for help, and for a time there was no a inside. Miss Tardiff was removed to an hospital, where an attempt will be made to graft the piece of skin back on her head. She is eighteen years old, and is a prominent church worker and one of the most popular girls in the factory.

$100,000 IS ASKED IN A HEART SUIT

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—"Do you think I would suffer all I have suffered for $100,000? No, a thousand times. What can money do for a broken heart?"

So spoke the beautiful twenty-three-years-old girl who will face William English Walling, millionaire suitor, socialist, at settlement hearing Monday before Justice Giegerich in the Supreme Court to tell her story of unrequited love.

Walling is the husband of Anna Strunsky, the noted Russian author and the grandson of William H. English, of Indiana, a former candidate for Vice-President of the United States. The girl who is suing him after an alleged promise in half a dozen European capitals is Amelia R. Winnaught. The charges that he broke his promise to marry her.

Miss Winnaught, who was born of Russian parents in Paris, is now living with her mother and brother at No. 245 East Thirtieth street. Until to-day when she talked to an American reporter she kept the place of her residence a secret. She was educated in a French convent and is a beautiful brunette of five feet and figure.

"How can I speak of things which are near and dear to me?" Miss Winnaught said. "Indeed, I wouldn't go into court at all if Mr. Walling hadn't compelled me to do so. I met him in Paris in 1905. I had just come out of the French school and I was eager to study and see the beautiful world. He was older than I was, and I seemed to be so much interested in he and in my studies. I loved the languages. I loved to be study of society.

"He asked me to marry him, and I promised to do so. I told him it must be after I had finished my studies. I have been engaged to Mr. Walling ever since, and 'educated' me. It is true Mr. Walling paid for some lessons for me when I was studying the English language. But that was, so he told me, because I could speak English as his wife in America. But in less than a year I left his home—he went away."

HOPE TO STOP MERGER.

Osceola Stockholders Meet to Protest Calumet Deal.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Feb. 18.—A meeting of the stockholders of the Osceola Consolidated Mining Company at Hancock to-night to protest against the Calumet and Hecla proposed merger, took no definite action. Secretary Shelden of the executive committee of the stockholders reported that the majority of the executive committee were of such importance was received to greatly cheer the opponents of the merger. He was not prepared to make it public, but he expressed the firm belief that the merger would not receive the support of the majority of Osceola stock. The meeting had been called primarily to solicit financial support for the opposition, but was so poorly attended that the plea was not made. Additional interest was given to the fight on the merger by the presence of a number of Centennial Mining Company stockholders. This mine is included in the merger plan.

GRIDIRONERS HAVE FUN WITH MR. TAFT

Champ Clark, Too, Made Target for Burlesque at Dinner of Washington Club.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—President Taft, Champ Clark and Richmond Pearson Hobson were the favorites to-night at the dinner of the Gridiron Club.

They were present, but their doubles from the staff of the club took the parts, made speeches and turned out the fun. The leading motive of the plot in the Champ Clark comedy was the trouble he is to have with the committee of fifteen. The skit in the Hobson case turned on his vigilance in the far East.

The President, the Vice-President, former Vice-President Fairbanks, Andrew Carnegie and other notables, got in for a share of the fun and every Champ Clark's famous committee of fifteen raised a terrible din in its efforts to run the next house, but was pleased by being resolved into a "big committee," which they thereupon exhibited Speaker Clark in shackles.

A "Spy" Arrested.

When order was restored, a "spy" was arrested. Papers of the most compromising nature were found secreted on his person, such as a diagram, showing Cummins with a stepladder on the back porch of the White House.

Blue print of "Hon. Taft's" mind when "Hon. Hitchcock" refused to be removed with ten of best out of Republican National committee; phonograph record showing long intervals of silence at Oyster Bay and measurements of "Hon. Hole," into which Congress throws billion dollars each year. Just when the excitement was at its height it was discovered that the pseudo spy was Richmond Pearson Hobson, the "Japanese war seer."

Many New England Men.

Besides the President, who boasts that New Haven is his adopted home and Beverly his Summer home, the 275 guests included the members of his Cabinet, Secretary of the Navy George von L. Meyer and Postmaster-General Frank H. Hitchcock, both Massachusetts men; Representative David J. Foster of Vermont; Charles S. Mellen of Boston, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad; James H. Hustis of Boston vice president of the New York, Boston & Albany Railroad; Robert S. Peabody of Boston, a member of the Tariff Board; Elmer P. Howe, Walter L. Pierce, and John Shepard, prominent Boston men; Frank J. Chappel of New London; Frank G. Allen of Richfield Springs, and George L. Shepley of Providence.

There were also present the participating in the fun, several prominent New England newspaper correspondents, who are members of the club.

Wise Chimpanzee Present.

Joyous St. Valentine contested with "Sonny Jim," the educated chimpanzee, presented by her owner, Professor Gartee, and with the spirit of insurgency for hostility in the breaking. The President arrived about eight o'clock and mingled with the other guests in the club parlors. When he was escorted to his seat at the gridiron-shaped table he found himself almost concealed behind an immense mound of Spring flowers, while at his back flushed a great electric gridiron.

Nobody ever eclipse the gridiron dinners more than the President. He came prepared for a good time, and he had it. He was expected to be "roasted," but he was not disappointed. He saw his personality caricatured to a "T" by Augustus Saengay band. He heard himself buriesqued in an American reporter and kept even a pleasant carried by a band of alleged insurgents bearing on their backs with speakers and presidents. We want our rights," and "Standpatters must go," received news over the ticker spotting political ratings, that his administration had gone to smash, and a telegram from the political fortune telling for "Senate."

He witnessed his White House reception, his secretary, his military aide, his physician, his stenographer, his messenger, his custodian, lampooned and knocked and "roasted" to a turn.

Taft Makes a Speech.

Through it all none laughed heartier than the chief executive and when, well along in the course of the dinner, he found himself the object of a great caricature searchlight while the gridiron quartet sang "I love the same old Willie," the opening of which the whole gathering joined, Mr. Taft was introduced to be about to speak which, for vim and high spirits, has never been excelled in the annals of the famous gridiron speeches are never published, so Mr. Taft will have to go down in history unrecorded.

Postmaster General Hitchcock came in for a joke or two, but he was in a forgiving mood, which recited a sad song about his troubles with Congress. Then the first four could appeared with a sheaf of valentines for the guests of honor, showing that the "leader" missives had been delivered between midnight and 7 o'clock, which has been too busy lately.

Another feature of the skit showing the discovery of the Japanese "spy" more than the President and Secretary Meyer. One of the secret papers taken from the "spy" was labeled "Panama Canal Tariff Commission business building lying with silt cut it by Senator Bailey." It depicted Chamber of Commerce, who is stated for a job on the commission if it be over created and John G. Coon of Boston, chief tariff commission boomer, with others in the gridirons attitude of "Hands Off." Taft was asked to hold the sack on a midnight "pulpe-hunting" expedition.

Senator Aldrich Missed.

The diners missed Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, who is seeking to recover his health in the South. He has attended almost every gridiron dinner in recent years.

President Mellen, of the New Haven, was thrown into the limelight at one stage of the proceedings, and in the course of her remarked that "there is at least one man who is glad that somebody else is not railroad regulation, occupies the boards in Congress this year."

Each of the new Englanders and other guests received a souvenir of the dinner, a four-inch pen embossed with a silver gridiron.

TREADWAY OUT FOR DIRECT NOMINATIONS

President of State Senate Surprises Friends With Speech to Commercial Travelers.

President Treadway of the State Senate delivered the principal address last night at the annual banquet of the United Commercial Travelers of America, at the Quincy House. President Treadway dealt his hearers a full hand of progressive legislation. In ringing words he sounded the call for some laws which he himself has opposed in the past.

He declared in favor of an amendment to the Constitution permitting the direct election of United States Senators. He said Massachusetts should accept the decree of a majority of the States upon this question.

Favors Eight-Hour Bill.

Referring to the eight-hour and fifty-four-hour bills, the speaker declared that both will doubtless become laws at this session of the Legislature. He said he felt it was the duty of the Legislature to pass a satisfactory eight-hour bill. In regard to the fifty-four-hour measure, Mr. Treadway declared for a readjustment of the temporary compromise of 1908, when the number of hours of employment for women and children in factories was fixed at fifty-six. He said he had voted against the attempt to change the number of hours to fifty-four last session, but that he did this because he felt that the manufacturing interests had not sufficient time to adjust themselves to the change of hours.

Mr. Treadway argued for prompt legislation in the matter of workingmen's compensation. He said a beginning should be made even if a perfect compensation act cannot be obtained without future amendments.

He came out strongly in favor of extending the power and duties of the Board of Conciliation and Arbitration so as to require it to investigate and make public its report in all questions in disputes between employer and employe, particularly in the case of large public service corporations or large manufacturing establishments.

Talk by Mr. Walker.

Speaker Walker of the House of Representatives delivered a bill for direct nomination and also reciprocity with Canada in his address, which followed President Treadway's. He said:

"The people cry that they are not represented by honest and independent representatives. If they could go to the polls and vote daily for their representatives, they would take more interest in politics, and also get better men. We need men who are honest and independent in politics. But we can never have a good government until the ordinary citizen takes more interest, attends the caucuses and sees personally that better men get into office."

HORSE BREAKFAST FOOD.

Cocoanut and Peanut Meal to Supplant Oats.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—To provide a cheaper food for horses, and a munitions for the army, the Bureau of Animal Industry has developed a sort of equine breakfast food composed of cocoanut and peanut meals. A bulletin issued by the Department of Agriculture describes the results obtained by trying the mixture on ten Morgan yearlings and four workhorses on the bureau's farm near Middleburg, Va. At the conclusion of the test, all the horses were reported in good condition. During the test they were fed on the different between $43.15, the cost per ton of whole oats, and $28, the price per ton for the nut meal mixture.

BOY SCOUTS' MAGAZINE.

The new magazine for Boy Scouts, known as Boys' Life, came out yesterday in its second issue and is quite creditable. It is a creditable number, showing plenty of evidence that it is prosperous. The March magazine is a forty-eight-page publication in the form of the current fifteen-cent monthly publications, instead of patterned after the size of the paper originally issued.

It is published by the George S. Barton Company of No. 200 Summer street. S. Burton, the editor and originator of this magazine, has been connected with the matter, was one of the first scout masters of the American Boy Scouts in Somerville, and is now a director of the New England Boy Scouts. Associated with him is Major Edwin B. Short, formerly a scout under General Custer. The new magazine has a friendly prospects of success, as it already has thousands of subscriptions assured and will undoubtedly take on the proportions of a big publication.

The features of the March number are several excellent stories for boys, whether Scouts or not, and an excellent collection of Scout material. Mr. Burton is the best-informed authority on Boy Scouting in this country.

BOSTON AMERICAN $35,000 PRIZE COUPON DISTRICT 10 VOTES

NAME

ADDRESS

TOWN AND STATE

VALUELESS AFTER MARCH 5, 1911.

WINNERS OF FEB. 15 SPECIAL CASH PRIZES

By the CONTEST EDITOR.

The winners of the five cash prizes offered to the five candidates turning in the most votes by subscription on February 15 in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest, are as follows:

First Prize—$20 in gold.
Dennis J. Murphy, Randolph, Mass. District Two.

Second Prize—$15 in gold.
Frank E. Day, No. 11 Lexington street, Everett, Mass. District Two.

Third Prize—$5 in Gold.
R. L. Melzer, No. 273 Chelsea street, Everett, Mass. District Three.

Fourth Prize—$5 in gold.
Thomas F. Burke, No. 210 Kilton street, Dorchester, Mass. District One.

Fifth Prize—$5 in Gold.
Mrs. Joseph Benoit, No. 42 Main street, Webster, Mass. District Three.

Those are the hustling five candidates who turned in the most votes BY SUBSCRIPTION last Wednesday, February 15, up to 10 o'clock at night. The Contest Department was open to that hour that Wednesday to receive votes. All votes turned in that day, up to 10 p. m., as shown by the postmark, were likewise accepted for that special contest. After all votes were counted, including those coming by mail, for that day, it was found that the five polling the highest for that day were as given above.

The Contest Editor congratulates the five winners on their good work. By turning in the highest votes by subscription for that particular day they not only have won the cash prizes but they also have boosted their standing just so much in the main $35,000 Prize Contest and in the special February Contest.

So they have benefited themselves beyond the intrinsic value of the cash prizes.

The Contest Editor has another important announcement. The winners of the Five Extra Prizes in the special February Contest will be announced in the Sunday AMERICA of March 12.

The final standing of contestants by districts will be announced in the Sunday AMERICAN of March 12. Only votes up to and including February 28 will be included in the first announcement of standing of contestants.

Photographs of candidates continue to come into the Contest Editor. But he wishes to get more photographs. If you have not sent in or brought in your photograph, please do so as soon as possible.

Pick out a good photograph of yourself and send it in. If you do that will look well when printed. Don't forget to write or typewrite your full name and address plainly on the back. Give your town and street number. Don't omit town and street and number. Don't mark it simply "John Smith, Boston." That means nothing. There are scores of John Smith's in the Boston Directory. Not even "Old Doc. Cook" himself could discover which particular John Smith you are.

Get Busy! Get Busy!

Having attended to this photograph matter, get busy again with your field work for getting votes and subscriptions.

Take a few minutes to think over your campaign. Are you getting all the votes and subscriptions that you can? Have you seen or notified All of your friends. You can't expect a friend to hustle for you when you don't hustle yourself.

Explain to your friends the importance of getting subscription votes as well as votes BY SUBSCRIPTION. It is votes BY SUBSCRIPTION which count in the special February offer of FIFTY-THREE PRIZES. Those prizes are to be awarded to the fifty-three candidates polling the most votes BY SUBSCRIPTION on Wednesday, February 15 and February 28 inclusive. And you want to be one of the fifty-three! Don't lose sight of that.

Keep in mind also that every vote you turn in during February BY SUBSCRIPTION counts not only in the special February contest but in the main contest.

If you are one of the fifty-three February winners, you have all the better chance to be one of the winners in the $35,000 contest. And you have a chance to win both. Then, for that capital prize of an $8,000 automobile, or $4,000 in-the-Charles or for one of the 999 other prizes.

Chance to Win.

Do you live in District 5? Then you have a chance to win the $8,000 house and two lots or a superb Maxwell automobile, or a piano, or a Camden-Rockland motor boat, one of the best motor boats made. There are only four of the opportunities open to you in District 5.

Suppose you wish an auto, but live in District 3. Then you can hustle for that fine-State automobile, a splendid machine, which will carry you safely and smoothly.

The same chances apply to other districts. ...e prizes, as shown in the long a wonderful discovery which she is made. In a short time she began to receive letters from all parts of the country making inquiries regarding it. It was finally forced to write a book describing her wonderful system, and it will be pleased to send this book to which tells how she became thin in few weeks, to any one interested. Her method of treatment is entirely differ from anything ever before used for a purpose. There is nothing to take internally, no dieting or exercising is us. You use what you like, drink what you like, still your superfluous flesh rapidly disappears. Many others who have followed her after her system even more wonderful results than she obtain. Some report as much as from six to ten pounds per week. Others have had the double chins completely removed in a few days. Any lady interested in the treatment and in obtaining a beautiful figure of her free book, and it will be sent to her by return mail, free of charge. Miss Frances Wilder, Dept. 744-D, Rochester, N. HYPNOTISM IS PLEA IN DIVORCE ACTION

Mrs. Helen Moineau of Marlboro Declares Husband Compelled Her to Marry.

MARLBORO, Feb. 18.—The monotony of making shoes in the shops of this place to-day was relieved by the speculation caused by the marital entanglement which was disclosed at East Cambridge when Mrs. Helen I. Moineau's application for a divorce was called for trial Friday. The woman charges that she was virtually hypnotized into marrying.

Long known as one of the prettiest and most affable of Marlboro's many shop girls, Mrs. Moineau has always been a great favorite. Everybody supposed she was surely going to wed Edward J. Murphy the foreman of one of the shops. Had not Father Kane published the banns as long ago as June 5th last? And did not everybody know that Ned Murphy had the house all furnished, and wasn't it just the coziest place ever?

Then came the surprise. One day Miss Gaucher left town and when she got back it was with her husband, Eli J. Moineau, a fine-looking young man and steadily employed. No explanation of her change from Murphy to Noineau ever was made until it came out in court.

Judge Bell, who presided at the session in the East Cambridge Court House, said he had seldom heard a stranger story and ordered a thorough investigation.

Mrs. Moineau said she had never meant to marry Moineau at all. He had met her one day in the street, had commanded her to go with him to Worcester and there under his domination she participated in a ceremony, which, when it was concluded he told her was that of marriage. They returned to Marlboro after a few days and one day he came home and found his wife missing.

Murphy is Sad.

"I do not know what Helen means when she says I forced her to marry me," he said to-day. "I've tried to be a good husband and I thought a lot of her. But she's gone away. I don't know why. Nobody who knows me will believe her story of being forced into marrying me. A fellow could hardly do a thing like that these days, do you think so? Love her yet? Well, maybe. But a fellow who gets such a deal don't feel much like talking."

Miss Gaucher, as she again calls herself, insisting that she never lived with Moineau as his wife, declined to say anything more. In the meantime Murphy, who was sure he would long before this have had his home established and life's real journey begun, is all broken up.

ENGLISH HIGH REUNION.

District Attorney Pelletier Speaks to Class of '99.

The twelfth annual reunion of the English High School, Class of '99, was held at the Copley Square Hotel last night. District Attorney C. Pelletier was the principal speaker. The entertainment consisted of "Chalk Pictures" by Sid Greene, a cartoonist of Providence, and class songs. Walter Clapp was toastmaster and introduced James E. Thomas, Charles P. Lebon and Harry C. Shaw, who represented the school.

At the business meeting the following officers were elected: President, Frederick Ballen; second vice-president, Joseph F. L. Wilder; first vice-president, Samuel L. Clough; secretary, Charles Gilman; treasurer, Harold W. Eaton. The members of the executive committee are Walter Clapp, chairman; William B. Garvin, Dr. Joseph T. Kendricken, Leo F. McAleen.

MISS MABEL WHITE OF SOMERVILLE, TO WED E. K. SAWYER

MISS MABEL EVELYN WHITE

ART INSTRUCTOR TO WED FORMER MAYOR

Miss White of Somerville Bride-to-Be of E. K. Sawyer of Franklin, N. H.

A ROMANCE has just been revealed in the coming marriage of Miss Mabel Evelyn White of Somerville, a teacher of drawing, painting and designing, to Enos Kittredge Sawyer, former Mayor of Franklin, N. H. The wedding is to take place at the Winter Hill Universalist Church on February 28. Mr. Sawyer is the youngest man who ever served as Mayor of Franklin. He is a Democrat and was Mayor during 1909 and 1910. He was born and reared in Franklin, graduated from Phillips Andover Academy and Dartmouth College.

The young people met two years ago while on a vacation at Webster Lake, N. H.

Following the marriage at the church, there will be a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. White, parents of the bride-to-be. The maid of honor will be Miss White's sister, Miss Ruby White.

Miss White was reared and educated in Somerville. She graduated from the grammar school and the high school, then the Massachusetts Normal Arts, where she ended her term in 1905. A course at the Rhode Island School of Design followed.

The couple will make their home in Franklin, N. H., where Mr. Sawyer is engaged in business.

ACTRESS PREFERS COOKING TO VOTING

Mrs. Roberts Finds More Joy in Housework Than the Ballot; "Business Women Slaves."

The suffragette says that man is to blame for the world's wrongs, but man is merely a by-product of woman.

The crying need of the modern home is an assured financial basis. That is a "right" which every woman should demand.

The home woman is the one who is most happy, most comfortable, most serviceable to the world.

The woman without a home is an anachronism for which the home without a woman is responsible.

These are four planks in the platform of Mrs. Theodore Roberts, actress, artist, author and lecturer, who is much more concerned about the best method of cooking a pot roast than the relative merits of men and women.

Mrs. Mrs. Roberts is for the home woman first, last, and all the time—and she assures the modern "progressive woman" the hybrid whose bid for with all its so-called independence, is not to be compared with that of her happily married, home-keeping sister.

Slave to Business.

"The business woman is a narrow-minded slavish dependent creature who has a home and knows what to do with it," says Mrs. Roberts.

"Specialization and system are doing their best to destroy the individuality and independence of our women," she went on. "There is much talk about the wonderful freedom of the 'new woman,' the self-supporting business woman. She is anything but free, in the great majority of cases. In shop or office she is dominated not only by her employer but by her employment. She has to come one way of adding up the column of figures or sewing on the shirt-band or selling gloves. And for each woman there's but the one kind of work. She is bound to specialize in it, if she hopes for success."

"But isn't the housekeeping woman frequently chained to her cook stove?" was asked.

"She need not be. The girl stenographer cannot roam out into the manufacturing department, or take her place among the designers.

"But the woman in the home can cook, sweep, dust, wash, iron, sew, design decorations, practice hospitality, play the piano, read, cultivate flowers—there is simply no limit to the scope of her activities. And she can do everything in her own way.

Joy of Housework.

"I have yet to experience a wilder thrill of exhilaration than that I have known in constructing my dinner menus," added Mrs. Roberts. "There is no riotous joy to be found in choosing curtains and carpets. There is a sense of sovereignty supreme in hossing the dumb-waiter.

"Then the real home woman is usually fortunate enough to have children to care for. She can perform no greater service for the world than that of supplying it with fine men and women. The suffragette points out numerous social and spiritual wrongs against women committed by the men. Personally, I believe these to be greatly exaggerated. I think the great majority of men are extraordinarily decent to the great majority of women.

"But, granted the evil, how can it possibly be suppressed—every mother's son of the oppressors is, literally, his mother's son. Then whose the fault? She had her chance to mould him and she failed.

"Because women have failed so grievously in their great natural business of the home in their broader conception of children, it seems to me that they show a wonderful audacity in wishing to take up other business, such as that of legislating.

"Many of the women of to-day, through ignorance, indolence or, commonest of all, a false sense of responsibility, are chronic shirks in the performance of home duties.

"Why do we have so many restaurants in this great city? Every woman ought to do her own cooking. It's no excuse to say she wasn't brought up to do it. I was on the stage before my marriage, and consequently had only boarding-house experience. But I found no difficulty in taking up the domestic roles. I began with ham sandwiches and progressed by way of the chafing dish to the gas stove and pot roasts and spaghetti and pies and all the modern forms of nectar and ambrosia.

"The woman in the most unhappy, the most ignorant, the most neglected home, has always a greater opportunity than the woman outside."

HELPING HAND CONCERT.

Home for Jewish Children to Benefit by Function.

The proceeds of the concert to be given at the Colonial Theatre on Sunday evening, April 2, will be devoted to the Home for Destitute Jewish Children, now being built at Canterbury and Austin streets, Dorchester. It will cost about $100,000 and provide quarters for between 200 to 300 boys and girls. The concert will be under the auspices of the Ladies' Hebrew Hand Auxiliary of the House, and many of the best artists who will appear on Boston theatres during the week of April 2 have volunteered. More than $50,000 has already been raised for the institution and old is asked without regard to denomination, as Jewish charity knows and has no distinction as to creed when asked to aid a charity. Tickets may be had through committee members and the officers of the society, who are: Mrs. Harry Fish, president; Mrs. George S. Wyner, vice-president; Mrs. Herman Cohen, second vice-president; Mrs. Louis H. Levenson, treasurer; Miss Henrietta Stone, secretary.

EXHIBIT RARE STAMPS.

Philatelic Society Celebrates Its Twentieth Anniversary.

The Boston Philatelic Society, whose members have collections of stamps of every denomination and issue from all of the countries of the globe, celebrated its twentieth anniversary with a banquet held in Tremont Temple yesterday afternoon and a banquet at the Boston City Club last evening. The exhibit was valued at many thousands of dollars.

Several prominent philatelists were present, among them being H. L. Mudge of Lexington, president of the American Philatelic Society, and W. H. Barnum of Cleveland, the secretary. Dr. Green, a former president of the Boston society, was the toastmaster at the banquet.

The officers of the Boston society are: W. G. Wylie, president; Fred S. Bullion, vice-president; C. A. Howes, secretary; J. B. B. Smith, treasurer.

HARVARD STROKE OF '09 TAKES A BRIDE

William R. Severance and Miss Susan Grinnell Are Married in New Bedford.

NEW BEDFORD, Feb. 18.—William Reich Severance and Miss Susan Williams Grinnell were united this afternoon in the Unitarian Church, by the Rev. William B. Georghegan. Mr. Severance is the son of Mrs. Pierce C. Severance and the grandson of the late William J. Reich, one of the early settlers of New Bedford. He was the famous Harvard stroke on the varsity crew of '09.

Miss Grinnell is the daughter of Mrs. Edmund Grinnell, of No. 6 Maple street. The family is very wealthy. She is pretty and has a fine voice. She was for a time the soprano soloist in the Universalist Church. The wedding took place followed by throngs of guests from the leading families of the city.

Mrs. R. S. Merrill of Westwood was the matron of honor. The maid of honor was Miss Clara G. Bourne of New Bedford. The bridesmaids were Miss Molly Hall of Milton, Miss Helen Duncan of Detroit, Miss Helen Reich, Miss Ellen Bush Hussey and Miss Anna Plummer, all of New Bedford.

Francis Shone of New Bedford was the best man. The ushers were Francis Grinnell of the bride, John Bullard of New Bedford, Richard Faulkner of Keene, Francis Weatherbee of Melville, Jr., Irvan A. Sargent of Brookline, George P. Kenney of Chestnut Hill and Leander Plummer of New Bedford.

MONEY BLAMED FOR ELOPEMENT OF GIRL

Wealthy Farm Hand and South Woodstock School Miss Disappear From Home.

HARTFORD, Feb. 18.—"It's all the fascination of that roll of wicked money he carried with him," exclaimed Mrs. C. F. Wilcox of South Woodstock to-night, when asked if she or her husband had received any word from their seventeen-year-old daughter Mabel, who eloped from Putnam last Wednesday, with Robert Briggs, son of Henry Briggs, a capitalist, who lives in Miami, Fla. Briggs is believed to have married Miss Wilcox in New York, and called for his Florida home yesterday.

Mr. Wilcox has brought the aid of the State police and has employed private detective agencies, but he has received no tidings of his missing daughter since she was married. Mrs. Wilcox said Wednesday and boarding the New York train with Briggs.

The distracted father declared that this maid was bewitched and explains her infatuation by saying that she frequently spoke in admiration of Briggs who went to work on a neighboring farm for fifteen dollars a month and his board.

The wealthy young man who always had plenty of money was not afraid of hard work made a big hit with the girl, who had just finished school.

Briggs, who is but twenty-three years old, is reported to have come North because of unpleasant circumstances in Florida.

Mme. Eames To Marry Gogorza Next July

Brother of Baritone Denies American Song Bird Paid $100,000 to Wife to Release Claim to Groom.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Emilio de Gogorza, the operatic baritone, and Mme. Emma Eames, the prima donna, will wed next July. It is understood that the wedding would have been consummated earlier but for the many difficulties the famous singers have had to encounter. It has been reported that the former Mme. de Gogorza demanded $100,000 for this Mrs. Ernest de Gogorza, sister-in-law of the singer, denies.

"The exact date of the wedding has not yet been set," said Mrs. de Gogorza, "my brother-in-law, that it will positively take place some time in July. There is also nothing of any foundation in the report that Mme. Eames is supposed to have agreed to pay to the husband of Gogorza $100,000 as the price of the withdrawal of all opposition to the marriage. I am sure no such agreement was made."

HUNT POISON SUSPECT.

Scotch Police Start Search After Double Tragedy.

EDINBURGH, Feb. 18.—An international search will be instituted to find John Hutchinson of Dublin, who is wanted here, and solve one of the most baffling poison mysteries ever known in Scotland. Hutchinson, his wife, father and a friend were poisoned after a dinner at the home of the latter's father-in-law, Mr. Mendelsohn, in Dublin, last week. Mrs. Hutchinson and her father died, and Hutchinson, Mendelsohn and the friend are to-day a warrant charging him with the double murder and attempted murder of the others.

It is believed he has taken refuge in Dublin, and will be arrested on his arrival in Ireland.

TANNER FASTS 11 DAYS; AIMS AT 80

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 18.—Dr. Henry S. Tanner, eighty-one years old, the well-known advocate of prolonged fasting as a cure for disease, celebrated the eleventh day of the fast which he will endeavor not to break for eighty consecutive days.

"I am going to try to show the American public the way to settle once and for all the Beef Trust and the high cost of living," said Dr. Tanner.

Symptoms of Eczema

The most form of eczema is most common. The affected parts are swollen and tender, with a reddened, raw appearance, covered with a thin, dark crust, through which a gummy liquid appears. Itching is nearly always present. The treatment is to stop the itching, exclude the air and germs, and set up the healing process by applying Cadum, the new skin remedy. You can see and feel a marked improvement after a single application, and the surface of the skin rapidly resumes a healthy condition. Cadum is also remarkably effective in other skin troubles such as redness, pimples, rash, blotches, roughness, scaly skin, chafings, acne, sores, ulcers, eruptions, hives, tetter, itch, herpes, psoriasis, itching piles, etc. Trial box, 10c.

PHILIP KRATZ.

Doylestown, Pa., Feb. 16, 1902.
S. B. Hartman, M. D.

Dear Sir: I have been thinking of writing to you for some time, to let you know what Peruna did for me.

I am 57 years old. I lost my health about six or seven years ago. I first had dyspepsia and employed different doctors.

Last year I injured one of my kidneys. I had one of the best doctors for that. He put me to bed, not to move for two weeks.

I slowly recovered, but was so weak and prostrated that I could walk but a short distance. In fact I had to keep quiet.

I took several remedies, but obtained no relief. I also had catarrh in some form.

My wife advised me to take Peruna, and it is with pleasure that I can say that by taking one and one-half bottles of your Peruna, it cured me and I feel all right. I send this with many thanks to you, as I enjoy life again.

My wife has also been taking your Peruna for asthma, and it helps to relieve her. We keep your Peruna in the house constantly. Again I say I thank you for Peruna.

Sincerely yours,
PHILIP KRATZ.

Doylestown, Pa., Nov. 9, 1903.
Dr. S. B. Hartman.

Dear Sir: I have good health now, and your valuable medicine gave me good health. I have had no doctor for some time, as I do not need any. When I take cold I take Peruna, and in a short time I am all right. My wife is subject to asthma. She takes Peruna at that time, and she has had no need for a doctor for some time. With many thanks for your medicine, we remain,

Sincerely yours,
PHILIP KRATZ.

Doylestown, Pa., April 16, 1906.
Dr. S. B. Hartmann.

Dear Sir: We have Peruna in the house all the time, and when we think we need it, we take it. We are about sixty years old and we have not called a doctor to our place for some years.

We go out in all kinds of weather, and sometimes when we go on a trip we take Peruna along. A preventive is better than a cure. That has been our experience.

I had poor health some years ago and when I found your medicine I hit the right thing. We both thank you for your good medicine.

Sincerely yours,
PHILIP KRATZ.

Mayor Witness to Signatures.

I, John Donnelly, Mayor of Doylestown, Pa., have been acquainted with Mr. Philip Kratz for 25 years. I know him to be an honorable and useful citizen. He, in my presence, signed the above statements concerning Peruna, which I have every reason to believe are true in all particulars.

Signed, JOHN DONNELLY, Esq.

MANICURE PARLORS.

New Department Added by Wm. S. Butler & Co.

Hair Dressing, Facial Massage and Chiropody Are Also Carried On.

The latest progressive move by William S. Butler & Co. and the long list of patrons have been taught to expect innovations at this popular Tremont street store—in the opening of manicuring parlors on the third floor.

Although in operation only a short time the parlors have been crowded to their capacity, the ladies having to wait their turn in attending to the wants of their customers. The parlors have been fitted up in a manner most where the utmost privacy could get the very best service of regular customers. The suite of three large rooms, recently painted, has been carpeted and furnished in dainty fashion, but not to such an extent as to detract from the business-like appearance of the parlors. Toilet articles, hair brushes, hair dressing, facial massage and the like are also carried on here.

The rooms themselves are a delight to the eye. The color scheme is green, ivory and soothing tints. Pretty curtains adorn the windows and pile rugs the floors. The furniture is of the latest design. Electrical massage has been installed.

The tables and furniture are green. The former being glass-topped, and every effort possible has been made to secure perfect sanitary conditions.

At present there are six skilled girls to look after the wants of the women customers. In this new department, hold by Wm. S. Butler & Co., the long list of patrons are equipped in artistic fashion. Predictions are, the managers of the Butler store say, that this department will soon become one of the most popular in the big store.

PROF. JAMES IN NEW SPIRIT MESSAGE SAYS 'ALL'S WELL'

Harvard Savant Walks and Talks with Old Friends, Quotes Ayer Temple Medium.

MEN and women live beyond the grave and have the same corresponding forms as on earth, according to the latest spirit message from the late Professor William James of Harvard. The message was received at the Ayer Spiritual Temple through its regular temple medium.

Following is the message received by the Ayer Temple:

Prof. James' Message.

For the first time since leaving the material form and joining the great throng of immortals on the other side of life, I am enabled to express my thoughts through lips of one acting as a medium between this world and the land of the soul.

I am awake at last, and oh, such an awakening. To know that death is not the end, to feel more truly alive than we have ever been before and realize there is still work for us to do, still something to live for, something to strive for, understanding not, yet knowing that all is well.

(Message broken off February 6 and continued February 13.)

You upon earth who imagine that I have emerged into a state of rest and peace are very far from the truth, for, although at first, when I realized that the great change had taken place, I did seem for a time to leave passing all understanding, it was not for long, for, although I had lived a useful life while a dweller upon earth, yet I found many pages in the book of life not fair and spotless, and these all lie before me now, bringing remembrance and remorse and no intense desire to rewrite them and undo the evil which defaces the fair scenes.

For I have learned that it is given to me here and now to atone for all the errors of my past life, and that I may undo only by striving as far as possible to right the wrongs that I may have caused, whether intentionally or otherwise, and so I am not idle, for none of us have lived such perfect lives that there are not some dark pages that we may sometime wish had never been.

I know that many, near and dear to me on earth, are patiently waiting, hoping to receive some message from that bourne from whence, they believe, no traveler can return, and I have this to say:

Death Not the End.

Yes, I have found that undiscovered country far beyond anything of which I have ever dreamed in life, and I have walked and held communion with those passed on before, have held their hands, looked into their faces, and realized with a thrill of joy that death does not all.

Open your hearts to receive, place yourselves in a receptive condition, and down through the corridors of time messages of joy and consolation shall come unto you, and when at last you, too, have rent the veil, and when at last free from the material form, and with mine shall ascend into heights divine, then shall you realize, and no doubt shall be sown away, and you shall know, and I say unto you that I now see, and realize this great and wonderful truth—that death is but the beginning and not the end of life and that the gateway to the tomb is not the entrance to life eternal and everlasting, forever and forevermore.

JAMES.

Will Talk on Palestine.

Bernard Wise, noted as a Hebrew lecturer, will give an illustrated talk in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple on ancient and modern Palestine, next Wednesday evening. Wise will also be a guest at the Halevy Singing Society. Arrangements are in charge of the Tifereth Zion Society.

Guests at MacVeagh Ball Dance In Dark

Electric Lights Go Out and Miss Taft's Heedless Sends a Hurry Call for Family Candlesticks.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh proved herself a tactful hostess and also a champion of Cupid tonight when the electric light plant failed to work in her new house, at the dance given in honor of Miss Helen Taft.

The marine band was playing a lively tune for the dancers. The lights are all placed on the ceiling back of a moulding, so that only the glow of the lights is seen. Suddenly the brilliantly illuminated ballrooms were in darkness. Secretary MacVeagh and several guests and servants tried to bring the lights back into use again, but to no avail. There had been a defect in the installation which could only be fixed in the day time by experts.

Mrs. MacVeagh ordered the band to continue playing, and for hours the guests danced with only the moon and stars shining at the windows. Servants were dispatched to the old residence, where the MacVeagh's are still living, for candles and candlesticks. The President and Mrs. Taft and the other distinguished guests also supped off the famous Napoleon china by candlelight as did the former owners of the china in the Palestine.

SAVE "ORCHARD HOUSE."

$8,000 Needed to Restore Home of Louisa M. Alcott in Concord.

A movement has been started by the Concord Woman's Club to raise $8,000 for the purpose of buying and restoring "Orchard House," the famous home of Louisa Alcott in Concord, in which Louisa M. Alcott wrote "Little Women." The club has already been offered the option of the Alcott homestead by Mrs. Daniel Lathrop, who lives in the old Hawthorne home. Contributions already received for the Alcott fund amount to something over $400.

"Orchard House" has been falling into ruins for twenty years. The pathways are choked with weeds, its broken windows are boarded up, the roof leaks and the president of the club says immediate action must be taken if the famous old home is to be saved.

CRAZY INSANE FIGURES.

Dr. Copp Refutes Statistics as to Growth of Insanity in State.

The widely heralded statement that there are more crazy people in Massachusetts in ratio to population than in most other States, and that this Commonwealth has been swept by an insanity wave, is confuted in a paper by Dr. Owen Copp, executive officer of the State Board of Insanity, in which he bases confutation to the contrary upon statistics covering thirty years. The lunacy epidemic so forcibly heralded in this state total 14,236, according to the reports of 1910, he has applied. Copp thinks that people have obtained an erroneous idea as to the exact figures because of the "scare heads" in the past emphasis has been placed upon the number of insane rather than upon the relation of the actual number of new cases found yearly.

BIG MILITARY BALL

Veterans Will Dance To-morrow in Paul Revere Hall.

A ball will be given under the direction of the Faulkner Veteran Association in Paul Revere Hall, Hanover avenue, to-morrow evening. All military men who attend are requested to wear uniforms. Representatives from many veterans' organizations have been invited to be present, including the Salem Light Infantry, Ancient Independent Artillery Company, Amoskeag Veterans Association of Manchester, N. H., Boston Cadet Artillery, Spanish-American War Veterans and the Ninth Regiment Veterans. A grand march will be led by Major George P. Daly.

Iowa Deadlock Unbroken.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Feb. 18.—There was practically no change to-day in the balloting for United States senator at the joint session of the Legislature. The deadlock still continues unbroken.

DECIES SAILS WITH HIS AMERICAN BRIDE

Sorry to Leave This Country and Say They Will Return in the Fall.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—While hundreds of persons cheered them, Lord Decies and his bride, who was Miss Vivian Gould, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Gould, sailed for Europe on the Cunard liner Carmania.

The young Lady Decies, who had just ended her wedding journey, seemed very happy. She wept a little upon bidding good-bye to her mother and father. Her parting words were:

"I am sorry to leave America. How can I help feeling so when it is the place of my birth, and the place where my father and mother and brothers and sisters live. We plan to return next Fall, but our home will then be in England. However, I can't ever forget dear old America."

Lord Decies, with his customary air of good fellowship and vigor, said: "Before departing I want to say a few nice things about the American newspapers, and particularly those in New York. They are splendid.

"Are you glad to get away from the United States?" he was asked.

"No, I am not glad," was the reply. "I have been treated royally here and I love New York. But I suppose the newspapers and everyone else will be glad to get rid of me."

On the Carmania the bridal pair occupied suites 10 to 14 on the upper forward deck. Lord Decies reached the pier just as the steamer left.

Going to Egypt.

The suite which the couple occupy had been reserved for their use for several weeks, and is one of the finest suites on the ship. They will have a private table in the dining saloon.

The Carmania will call at Madeira, Gibraltar, Algiers, Villefranche (for Nice and Monaco) and then proceed to Naples and Alexandria, where she is due March 8. After spending a short time in Cairo, where Lord and Lady Decies will be entertained by the military friends of the former, they will start for Upper Egypt and visit Luxor. Further cruising on the Island of Philae on Cook's new tourist steamer Egypt.

They fear the weather is not too hot it is probable that they will continue their journey up the Nile as far as Khartum, on the second cataract, and from there proceed by express train across the desert to Khartoum, on the White Nile.

Return May First.

Both Lord and Lady Decies are looking forward with a great deal of interest to their trip through Pharaoh's land, and as there are already many English people of title in Egypt for the season numerous receptions in honor of the young couple will be given.

They expect to return to London by the first of May, when they will take possession of their new London house which Lord Decies has leased for the coming season. Lady Decies will entertain extensively during the time she remains, and her guests will be her brother, Jay Gould, 2d, and his bride, Miss Anne Douglas Graham, whose engagement was only announced formally at a reception and dinner given at the Annex of the Metropolitan Club by Mrs. Howard Mansfield Graham's mother. Their wedding is scheduled for April.

SUPPOSED CORPSE REVIVES.

Comes to Just in Time to Escape Injection of Embalming Fluid.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Richard O'Brien of Elizabeth, N. J., came very near being ushered into the other world through an injection of embalming fluid yesterday. The only reason he is not there now to come to while waiting for the undertaker to inject the preparation.

O'Brien's first utterance as he found himself surrounded by sorrowing friends and coffins with a dead man for his mother and neighbor was a yell. Then people took him and explanations followed. O'Brien was a pallbearer yesterday at the funeral of Charles McNamara. Another friend of McNamara had the handle opposite that of O'Brien, and they quarrelled. The row happened in front of Leonard's undertaking rooms. The other person hit O'Brien, and he went down and out. He was carried into his undertaker's office. A doctor was called. In charity O'Brien's friends waited that evening to tell the name of the physician, but he pronounced O'Brien dead.

GIRLS PESTER COUNT WITH LOVE LETTERS

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The American yesterday received a letter from Count Xpon Frederick Verplus Von Ehrenfels, who is taking the "rest cure" in St. Peter's Hospital, Brooklyn, in which the Count states that he has been overrun with letters and telegrams from young women who wish to marry him. All told, the Count has received seventy-eight epistles, every written in the most endearing terms by girls, some of whom admit poverty and inability to settle a "dot" on him.

"I wish you would please ask young women to stop sending me letters," pleaded the Count. "I am not in this country for the purpose of matrimony."

SIMPLE TREATMENT FOR A VELVETY COMPLEXION

Mrs. Mae Martyn, authority on health and beauty, writing for the Los Angeles Examiner, says: "Society women are discarding face powders and cosmetics and taking to liquid preparations, because powder tends to stop up the pores and roughens the skin, ruining a complexion, while a good lotion clears the skin and keeps it in a healthy condition.

"The lotion most popular in exclusive circles is made of spurmax and is prepared by dissolving 4 ounces of spurmax in ½ pint of hot water, then adding 2 teaspoonfuls of glycerine. This is much nicer to apply than powder and does not rub off easily. It is inexpensive, and its use soon produces a soft and velvety complexion.

"Women using this recipe find it splendid for rough or oily skins, as it clears as well as beautifies."

MRS. CHARLES BASLE WHO WAS DIVORCED FROM AUTO RACER

MRS. CHARLES BASLE.

MUSIC OVER WIRES.

Holyoke Concern Will Make Connection with New York.

HOLYOKE, Feb. 18.—The Cahill Telharmonic Club of this city has been granted the privilege of laying wires in New York for the transmission of music underground there. The franchise is to run for twenty-five years. This electric music instrument will be transferred to New York, but the Cahill brothers will reattin here.

BASLE DIVORCE IS SURPRISE TO FRIENDS

Complaint of Bride of the Noted Racer Revealed a Broken Romance.

MRS. EDNA F. BASLE, wife of Charles Basle, a well-known automobile racer, was granted a divorce by Judge Bell in the Middlesex County Court in East Cambridge last week on the grounds that her husband had been abusive and cruel to her. This is the end of a romance which attracted much attention in racing circles. When they were married nearly five years ago much happiness was predicted for the couple. They were then deeply in love, and so devoted that friends could scarcely believe there would ever be a rift in the matrimonial lute.

But Mrs. Basle says that all love and tenderness did not last long. In a few months, she declares, he lost his temper and threw a boot and struck her. She told of other acts on his part which caused her heart to change towards him, and she thinks that his impetuous French nature was partly responsible for treatment which forced her into the divorce court as a petitioner for freedom.

Basle is a daring racer. In New York in 1909 he won the twenty-four hour race and $1,000 as a prize. Previously he had broken the world's record on the Nazareth track, and after that made a hair-raising ride against time at Readville. He is very well known in Boston and vicinity. Mrs. Basle now lives in Waltham.

BALDWIN TO GO TO POLE ON ICE FLOE

Arctic Explorer Outlines His New Theory in Interview With President Taft.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Sit on the ice pack and get a free ride to the North Pole!

That seems to be the theory of the explorer, Baldwin, and he argues ably for the faith that is in him. Captain Baldwin had a talk with President Taft to-day and is to confer with him again on an expedition he is planning to go to the North Pole by means of the ice drifts of Behring sea.

Captain Baldwin proposes to start in at Behring strait with a ship equipped for four years. He has not the least doubt that the drifts will take him to the North Pole and Captain Baldwin said to-day that the ice drifts, starting at Behring strait, make about two miles a day and come out in the North Atlantic ocean near open, unfrozen and the northeast coast of Greenland.

"There is not the shadow of a doubt in my mind," said Captain Baldwin, "that when my expedition starts it will follow the course I outlined and come out at the point named. The movement of the ice-pack is perfectly simple.

"It is a mechanical process and is as sure as the law of gravitation. At two miles a day it would take at least two days to go through the Arctic ocean, but I shall prepare for four full years, as my plans are to make many trips, take deep sea soundings, obtain valuable meteorological and other data and spend some time at the pole."

MAN RUN OVER AND KILLED BY A CAR

Accident on Trolley Line at South Framingham for a Time a Mystery.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Feb. 18.—A coat beaver whose name was given as Dufeault, twenty-eight years old, said to be a member of the family of wrestlers of the same name, of Marlboro, was run over by a trolley car of the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway to-night and instantly killed on West Waverly street, about a mile west of the Union passenger station, here. Dufeault had been lying across the tracks, and the motorman could not stop in time to prevent the car from striking and passing over the body.

For some time mystery surrounded the case. It was at first thought the man might have been killed by foul play and his body placed between the rails to cover up the crime. Medical Examiner Palmer, who made an investigation, thought death was accidental and that Dufeault had probably been asleep.

Dufeault lay in a sharp curve, on a sharp decline. This accounted for the fact that he was not seen by the motorman in time to prevent his being struck.

A wrecking car had to be summoned before the body could be extricated. Jacks were used to lift the car. The remains were taken to the South Framingham morgue.

Dufeault was employed with the Dennison Manufacturing Company up till some time ago. He was turned out of his position quite lately and Wednesday because he did not pay his rent.

Division 40's Annual Ball.

Division 40 A. O. H. will hold its twelfth annual ball on Thursday evening in Everett Hall, Centre street, Jamaica Plain. A committee of twenty-five is in charge of the arrangements.

Trouser Skirt Cause of Riot In London

LONDON, Feb. 18.—A harem skirt, the very latest thing in dress for women, caused a riot here to-day. An aristocratic looking and fashionably attired woman appeared in Regent street, wearing a pantaloon skirt, this afternoon and it required a large section of the Metropolitan police to handle the crowd which gathered. Instead of rapidly growing progressive, however, the women, hurling her with numerous disrespectful remarks, she tried to flee, but the embarrassing folds literally caused her downfall. Finally she landed a cab and drove away.

The harem or trousers skirt is one of the most startling departures from the conventional dress ever planned by Paris dressmakers.

RICH YACHTSMAN SUED FOR DIVORCE

GREENWICH, Ct., Feb. 18.—Alexander Stone, millionaire sportsman, member of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, and of the New York Yacht, Schooner and Racquet clubs, was sued for divorce in the Fairfield County Superior Court here this week by Mrs. Emma Liles Brubacher of New York, and the case scarfed April 1.

The wife asks the custody of their only child, a girl, now seven years and nine months old. While habitual intemperance is the charge upon which the suit is based, it has been frequently stated by Mrs. Stone that fear for her life is the real basis.

NO MORE INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA OR SOUR, GASSY, UPSET STOMACH.

Every year regularly more than a million stomach sufferers in the United States, England and Canada take Pape's Diapepsin and realize not only immediate but lasting relief.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your Pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no more belching, sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach. Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disorder.

MELLEN'S GOAL IS REVEALED BY BYRNES

One Great Railroad System for New England and a Bigger and Busier Territory.

The goal of Charles S. Mellen and Timothy E. Byrnes, Vice-president Byrnes told the Sunday AMERICAN last night, is one great railroad system for New England, and a bigger, better, busier New England for the one great railroad to serve.

Mr. Byrnes was asked if the next logical step in the consummating of the New Haven system will not be the taking over of the Boston & Albany, now leased to the New York Central.

The question was prompted by the announcements yesterday of President Mellen and Vice-President Byrnes that the Boston & Maine—which now controls the Maine Central—had acquired from the New York Central 28,530½ shares of the preferred stock of the Rutland railroad, the New York Central retaining an equal number of shares and the Central and the New Haven controlling the Rutland through their joint holdings.

Mr. Byrnes Has a Laugh.

"Is there a similar arrangement between the New Haven and the Central with reference to the Boston & Albany?" Mr. Byrnes was asked.

"You mean is there open, reported reciprocal correspondence between the New Haven—is there such an arrangement?"

"There is not," he answered.

"It is a natural question," said the interviewer, "following your announcement that the Central and the Boston & Maine had joined hands in the Rutland."

"Yes, a natural question, but there is no reciprocal agreement of your question were about the future, now—"

"Yet?"

"Who could answer it?" asked Mr. Byrnes, laughing, who can tell what the future is?"

Big Deal Explained.

He went on: "The situation with regard to the Rutland was not at all like the situation with reference to the Boston & Albany. The Rutland, as is well-known, has not paid a dividend since 1907, and under existing conditions was not likely to. The Boston & Maine and the New York Central was not in a position to give the Rutland the amount of business that would make it a money-maker.

"Now we, on the contrary, are in a position to give the Rutland just that business, and hence to make not only our own holdings of Rutland stock, but the New York Central holdings extremely profitable.

President Mellen had informed yesterday the press conference surrounding the newly-arranged connections of the Boston & Maine with the Central and Vice-President Byrnes, far from satisfactory. Vice-President Byrnes was asked if he thought the press report had in mind mostly the handling of Boston & Maine freight at the White River Junction, where it is taken over by the Central Vermont railroad from the Central.

"No, I do not think so," answered Mr. Byrnes, "which is to give to the Canadian roads, under conditions satisfactory to that direction. But the fact is now that the entire railroad system of the Connecticut River is today a railroad that are going to be of great importance to us. The work is under way. We shall double-track it and we shall cut out its grades.

"In 10 years we expect to double the business the Boston & Maine is doing today. We confidently we shall do it. We shall work shoulder to shoulder with the great commercial organizations of the section. The Boston Chamber of Commerce, for instance, promises to be one of the small manufacturers. One of the first industries we propose to help in that work so far as we are able. We propose to help all we can in the development of Boston."

JAIL REPORT THIS WEEK.

Some of Committeemen for Whitewash in Worcester Inquiry.

The Committee on Prisons, which has been investigating the affairs of the Worcester County Jail and the Worcester House of Correction, will meet at the State House at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow to present its report to the Legislature, some of the committeemen are known to be in favor of whitewashing the affair. Legislators from Worcester insist that practices such as were described at the committee hearings shall not be passed over quietly.

B. & M. ROAD IS SHOWN AS LAWBREAKER IN AMAZING EXPOSURE BY BRANDIES

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 18.—The startling exposure by Louis D. Brandeis of Boston that agents for the Boston & Maine Railroad surreptitiously got a lot of coal freight rate schedules from the State House, where a legislative committee is looking into the freight rate question, which showed that the company had violated the Interstate Commerce law, has caused a sensation all over New Hampshire.

No attempt has been made by the railroad company to minimize the act as a trivial incident. Mr. Brandeis and others connected with the history of the railroad troubles in this State, decline to take that view of it.

The company had made a big pretense of assisting all the lawyers in other words, of being good. The people welcomed the promise and were willing to meet them half way. Now comes an act that has caused more talk and more excitement than anything of the same character in years.

Government May Act.

The fact that Mr. Brandeis, now a national figure, took part in the exposure, served to add to the sensation.

The Federal Government may take a hand in matters as a result of the facts brought out. One of the papers taken from the room was a freight schedule for January, 1902, from Rotterdam Junction, N. Y., to Barton, N. H. For every ton of the coal was $1.80. Then came a lot of individual rates that ranged from $1.35 up to $1.69. There was also directions as to just how and when to make out the bills. There were hundreds of other schedules in the lot of the same character.

This particular discovery had nothing to do with what the Legislative Committee was trying to find out. What the committee was after was to ascertain if the railroad was keeping an agreement made with the State in 1883, and continued in 1889, in regard to the freight rates.

It has already been established in the courts that the railroad has violated this agreement. But it has just introduced a bill in the Legislature to abolish the agreement, for the purpose, presumably, of boosting the freight rates more.

Mr. Brandeis volunteered to represent the public at this hearing. He is assisted by Mr. Edmund S. Cook chairman of the Republican State Committee, John W. Kelley, ex-mayor of Nashua. It was at the Thursday afternoon session that Mr. Brandeis exploded his bomb.

Admits Taking Papers.

The committee had a lot of documentary evidence, furnished by the railroad. This included old and new rate cards. George H. Exton, general freight agent of the road, of Boston, was one of the witnesses. Exton asked, through his clerk, Charles E. Leavitt, for permission to send a man to the committee room to get some "personal correspondence" that had been left there. This permission was given.

The man went to the room, being admitted by the janitor. They carried away two packages, one of which was labelled "Coal Schedules" and kept them until they were forced to return them by the exposure of Mr. Brandeis a week later. Incidentally, when Mr. Brandeis called Leavitt, one of the men who went after the papers, upon the carpet, he swore that only one bundle was taken from the room, which was soon proven to be untrue.

The second man who went for the papers was J. R. MacAnaip, a clerk in the railroad company. He admitted there were two bundles taken from the room, as John E. Gay, the janitor, testified. MacAnaip swore Leavitt took both of the bundles.

Mr. Kelley, who is a brilliant lawyer, was indignant when Mr. Brandeis brought out the fact that the coal schedules had been taken. He attempted to call down the gentleman from Boston and Winding Up, but the concensus of opinion was that he did not get away with it.

When Mr. Brandeis first brought the matter to the attention of the committee Mr. Kelley said that "if Mr. Brandeis had the instincts of a gentleman and an attorney, gentlemen, he would have gone to Mr. Kelley and told him all about it and not in effect let the cat out of the bag."

"What the Boston & Maine railroad, above all, gentlemen, is trying to do," declared Mr. Kelley dramatically, "is to try this case outside the investigation in an underhanded, Now Hampshire fashion."

Then Mr. Brandeis came forward with this plain statement of the missing document situation, as it appeared in the stenographic account of the proceedings:

"Here were a lot of papers put into the possession of the Commission as being all of the tariffs which those gentlemen were able to find. Permission is asked to go and take from those papers certain correspondence. We find upon going there immediately afterward that they have not taken only certain correspondence, but indeed—we don't know whether they took correspondence or not, but we do know that there was not after that visit—there is, not, among those papers the coal tariffs which we saw there before."

Attorney in a Tilt.

Mr. Kelley—Why didn't you ask us about it?

Mr. Brandeis—Why should we ask you about it?

Mr. Kelley—Just because it is a practice among gentlemen, that is all.

Mr. Brandeis—It is not a practice among gentlemen to go and take papers when they are entrusted with a key to go and get them.

Mr. Kelley—It is a practice among gentlemen in New Hampshire.

Mr. Brandeis—I don't believe it is anywhere, to go and take papers which are not entitled to take.

Mr. Kelley—No.

The Chairman: Well, go on with the investigation. Have you finished?

Mr. Mr. Brandeis was not ready to go on with the investigation without a court quite through yet with the examination of the missing coal schedules. Mr. Exton was recalled. He testified and in describing what he took from the room said:

"They are simply some papers, my memoranda in working up the investigation. And these coal tariffs, the coal tariffs in force to-day, were in the bundle and I discovered them when the bundles were opened. I took the bundle and put it in my grip."

Q—Mr. Brandeis: That was all you took?

A—I want you to understand everything I have you?

A—I think I have.

Rate Expert Testifies.

Robert Rantoul, rate expert of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, who had charge of the documents for the purpose of making a list of them, testified.

The Mr. Brandeis—Now, when you went there (after the visit of the two friends) you did you immediately afterwards look over the papers for any coal tariffs?

A—I looked at each bundle carefully to see what was there. I noticed immediately that a bundle I was familiar with, having used it during that day in the course of committee room, was missing. It was a bundle tied up in brown paper and marked on the top of it "coal tariffs."

Q—Then on the outside of the bundle it was marked "coal tariffs." Now, what was there in that bundle?

A—There was a large number of coal rates, some of them were single sheet rates. There was a list of coal rates made up by men and took from various coal gateways, ports, in the western gateways, and this was a list dated January 1, 1902, consisting of a series pages of typewritten sheets giving a list of the special rates on coal from the mines individually running the beneficiaries. At the top of the list was a little sheet saying those marked with a certain letter referred were to be settled through the auditor; those marked with another letter referred were to be settled by a supervisor. And my recollection is that those lists were sent out subsequent dates at intervals of a month—evidently revised lists.

Q—Now, you heard Mr. Exton say that he opened a package and found with the correspondence Ex-existing coal rates? Was there any correspondence in that package?

A—No. Not—No, I know of no correspondence.

Accused by Mr. Cook.

Mr. Cook had given Mr. Leavitt permission to go to the room for the "correspondence" of Mr. Exton. Mr. Cook was put on the witness stand and told how the coal tariffs were taken. Leavitt said he represented that he wanted to get only some private correspondence.

"Did you think it was taken wrongfully?" asked Mr. Kelley.

"He went there," replied Mr. Cook, "on his representation that he wanted to get some private correspondence belonging to Mr. Exton contained in a certain bundle; and he took, in addition to that bundle, another bundle containing coal tariffs, and which had he told them wrongfully and it was bad faith, after the talk with me."

On the question of whether there was one or two bundles taken from the committee room, this examination took place:

Mr. Brandeis—Where is Mr. Leavitt? Let us ask him.

Mr. Leavitt—I took one bundle.

Mr. Brandeis—Only one?

Mr. Leavitt—Only one. I took.

Mr. Brandeis—Only one bundle out of that room?

A—That is all.

Mr. Gay, the janitor of the building, was called and he insisted that two bundles were taken from the room. When he finished the investigation took this form:

Mr. Cook—Couldn't we save time by asking the other man if he took the other bundle?

Mr. McAnany—Mr. Leavitt carried both bundles.

Mr. Brandeis—Will you give me, Mr. Kelley, the name of the young man who has been on the stand?

Mr. McAnany—MacAnany.

Mr. Brandeis—And your initials?

Mr. MacAnany—J. R.

Mr. Brandeis—I would like to have that appear on the records.

This practically closed the missing document hearing. All of the rate schedules, so far as could be told, had been returned. They are now in the hands of the legislative committee.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

Thousands of Men and Women Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

Nature warns you when the track of health is not clear. Kidney and bladder troubles compel you to pass water often during the day and get up many times during the night.

Unhealthy kidneys cause lumbago, rheumatism, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints or muscles, at times have headache or indigestion, as time passes you may have a sallow complexion, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, sometimes feel as though you had heart trouble, may have plenty of ambition, but no strength, get weak and lose flesh.

If such conditions are permitted to continue, serious results are sure to follow; Bright's disease, the very worst form of kidney trouble, may steal upon you.

Prevalency of Kidney Disease.

Most people do not realize the alarming increase and remarkable prevalency of kidney disease. While kidney disorders are the more common diseases that prevail, they are almost the last recognized by patient and physicians, who usually content themselves with doctoring the effects, while the original disease constantly undermines the system.

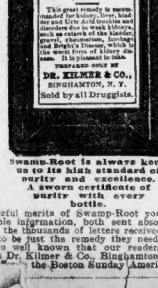
A Trial Will Convince Anyone.

If you feel that your kidneys are the cause of your sickness or run-down condition, begin taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because it is used as your kidneys improve they will help the other organs to health. In taking Swamp-Root, you are using a natural helper to nature. Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that has yet been discovered.

Swamp-Root is Pleasant to Take.

If you are already convinced, that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and on e-dollar size bottles at all druggist stores. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., which you will find on every bottle.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—To prove the wonderful merits of Swamp-Root you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information, both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands of letters received from men and women who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy they needed. The value and success of Swamp-Root is so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample bottle. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton N. Y. Be sure to say you read this in the Boston Sunday American. The genuineness of this offer is guaranteed.



Swamp-Root is always kept to its high standard of purity and excellence. A sworn certificate of purity with every bottle.

'FORTIFY PANAMA CANAL,' SAYS ELDER

Samuel J. Elder, the distinguished Boston attorney, home yesterday from a big party from a few weeks in the West Indies and Panama, declared with characteristic vigor and elemental force that the Panama Canal should be "fortified, and well fortified."

Mr. Elder is at home after his first vacation trip following his lengthy and arduous services as counsel for the United States in the Siberian division of The Hague tribunal. He visited Havana, Guantanamo, the great naval base in Cuba, Kingston, Jamaica, Port of Cartagena, La Guaira, Trinidad, Barbadoes, Martinique and Bermuda.

This is what Mr. Elder had to say about fortifying the Panama Canal:

"I believe that the canal should be fortified, and well fortified.

"It does not seem right to me to leave $400,000,000 worth of property in the open and entirely unprotected. It would be a great mistake to do such a thing.

"One of our fellow travelers was Sir Horace Plunkett, president of the Irish Agricultural League, and with him I talked about the canal several times. He was in favor of fortifications, as was everyone with a single exception, whom I met. The man who took the other view did so because he believed that a neutrality agreement would be observed.

"It seems to me, however, that Senator Root is right in saying that we must be safe from attack, but that it must be safe from bands of irresponsible men who might take it into their heads to cause trouble. We should not leave the canal so that it would be possible for a man with a stick of dynamite to blow up a section and put it out of use."

CITY HALL SALARIES UNDERGO A REVISION

More Than 75 Employes Affected by Sweeping Changes of Commissioner Rourke.

Commissioner of Public Works Rourke has completed the biggest readjustment of the salaries of City Hall employes made in many years. More than seventy-five clerks and engineers are affected by the changes, the majority being given substantial increases in salary.

Chief Clerk Benjamin Tremere of the old Street Department is reduced in rank and grade, and his salary has been cut from $2,500 to $1,800. Chief Clerk Walter E. Brown of the old Water Department has been reduced in rank to clerk, and his salary lowered from $3,000 to $2,000.

Much Quiet Grumbling.

The readjusted salaries went into effect yesterday, and while there is much quiet grumbling and discontent among those reduced in salary, it is not expected that any of them will resign.

Since the new department of Public Works, comprising the former Water, Street and Engineering Departments, was created on February 1, more than 200 employes have been affected by salary changes. Under the readjusted plan of the expenses for salaries for the consolidated departments will be considerably greater than under the former system. The changes were effected with the consent and consent of the Mayor.

This is the official report of the changes made in the salaries of the clerical staff:

Benjamin B. Tremere, chief clerk, made clerk at a salary from $2,500 to $1,800.

John F. Brennan, clerk, increased from $1,600 to $1,800.

Chester E. Turbell, clerk, increased from $1,400 to $1,500.

Alfred J. Haunna, clerk, increased to $1,200 a year.

Thomas P. Roe, clerk, increased from $1,200 to $1,500.

John A. Brant, clerk, increased from $1,300 to $1,500.

Frank Rodgers, clerk, increased from $4 a day to $1,800 a year.

Joseph F. Low, chief clerk, reduced to clerk and salary from $2,000 to $1,500.

Rank and Salary Cut.

Walter E. Swan, chief clerk, reduced to clerk and salary from $2,000 to $2,000.

Joseph W. Swan, clerk, reduced from $2,000 to $1,800.

Thomas E. Furnons, chief clerk, reduced to clerk and salary from $2,000 to $1,800. Other increases and cuts were:

John J. McLaughlin, electrician, of No. 20 Ithaca street, East Boston, wages increased to $4 a day.

Harold McFarland, No. 66 Sumner street, East Boston, increased from $1,100 to $1,200 a year.

Thomas E. McSeeley, No. 30 Hill street, increased from $1,100 to $1,200 a year.

George H. Finneran made a general foreman at $2,100 a year.

Benjamin B. Bates, engineer in highway division, increased to $2,500 a year.

David N. Nichols, clerk in the highway division, increased to $1,600 a year.

Philip J. Duffy, assistant engineer in highway division, increased to $1,500 a year.

WALKER STOPS G. O. P. GERRYMANDER PLAN

Upsets Republican Machine by Word He Will Equally Divide Redistricting Committee.

Speaker Joseph Walker, who for the past month has been throwing bomb shells with almost monotonous regularity into the Republican machine camp, tossed over another yesterday when he sent word to the powers that be that he had decided to split his Congressional Redistricting Committee exactly in half between Republicans and Democrats.

Mr. Walker notice is that he is getting ready to appoint a committee of fourteen, and that seven will be Republicans and seven Democrats.

When the Speaker a few weeks ago sent out a warning that any further move others might feel he would not stand for a gerrymander, there was a feeling among machine men that he was going out of his way to raise up a bogey.

Later on the Speaker conferred with President Treadway of the Senate, and an agreement was agreed on. For his part he said he was agreeable to appointing a committee of fifteen on redistricting. Of this number, fourteen would be from the different Congressional districts, and one at large. This would give the Republicans a fair fight against seven Democrats on the committee. President Treadway was agreeable on his part to a committee which should consist of seven men—four Republicans and three Democrats. This would give the Republicans a total membership of twelve on a joint committee of twenty-one, and a balance of power.

The Speaker, after thinking it over, has changed his mind. He sent word yesterday that he felt the compromise to be inconsistent with all he has said and done on the subject, and declared that the committee should be seven and seven.

There was a gasp all along the line. Some effort was made to show Mr. Walker the iniquity of his ways. There are 128 Republicans and 112 Democrats in the House, and it was argued that numerically, arithmetically and every outre way the Republicans were entitled to eight and the Democrats to only seven. It was all in vain.

Late last night they were still after the Speaker, trying to get him to reconsider. Roger W. Babson of Milton will be floor chairman of the committee. Barnes of Weymouth is likely to be the Senate chairman.

MRS. GEORGE VENN, OF LYNN, WHO WAS FOUND IN RIVER

MRS. GEORGE VENN, wife of the assistant engineer of the Lynn water works, was found dead yesterday forenoon, in the Saugus River, almost under the Western avenue bridge that crosses from the Lynn to the Saugus district.

Just how the woman met her death is not known. It was at first thought that she might have been the victim of robbery and murder, because the husband reported that she had carried $170 sewed in the bosom of her dress and no money had been found on her.

When $70 of the missing money had been located last night at the Venn home the husband admitted that it was probably a case of suicide.

WOOD IS OUT FOR SECRETARY OF STATE

Representative Russell A. Wood, Cambridge, last night announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Secretary of State next Fall. Mr. Wood tried to defeat Senator Lodge with Joseph Walker in the recent senatorial contest, and who would have succeeded, it is believed at the State House, if the Speaker hadn't yielded to the entreaties of the Lodge-Crane combination.

The Wood platform will have four important planks:

1.—Anti-Lodge-anti-Crane.

2.—Twenty-one consecutive elections with an aggregate in salaries of $105,000, are enough for any man. (William M. Olin, the present Secretary, is serving his twentyfirst term.)

3.—Give the young man a chance.

4.—The Secretary of State's office needs a working man.

"It's about time," he said last night, "that somebody should be Secretary of State for some other reason than that Lodge and Crane want him to have the job. I am going to lay my case especially before the young men of the State, for the young Republicans of this State will best make their mark in politics by standing together and by working in a party favor with the old machine guard.

How Women Can Have Beautiful Hair

(From Style and Fashion Magazine.)

"All women should have beautiful hair, and nearly every woman could have an abundance of soft, glossy tresses if they would stop washing the life out of it. A soft, pliant scalp means luxuriant hair, and to have it it is necessary for the scalp to contain the right amount of oil to properly nourish the hair follicles.

"The shampooing invigorates the scalp and hair roots, keeps out dandruff and excess oil, and promotes growth of fine, glossy and fluffy hair.

"An excellent dry shampoo powder can be made at home by mixing 4 ounces of orris root with 4 ounces of therex. A tablespoonful sprinkled on the head, then brushed out carefully, leaves the scalp cool and refreshed and the hair fresh, clean, fluffy and beautifully lustrous."

R. and G. Corsets Give Julian Eltinge a Pretty Feminine Figure

We Pictured Him in These Corsets In a Striking Window Display

It was a showing that created very favorable comment. It proved conclusively that a woman's form depends largely upon the corset she wears.

It was a display which created a lively interest in the corset and the man. There were many inquiries for miniature duplicates of the life-size pictures shown in the window.

We'll Give Eltinge Pictures Free

Monday and Tuesday

We'll Distribute These Pictures in the Following Manner

Picture No. 1 will be distributed on the 4th floor Annex.

Picture No. 2 will be distributed in the Basement.

WOULD TRAIN GIRLS TO BE BETTER WIVES

Mrs. Schoff Would Have Them Taught Less in Lines of General Education.

Mrs. Frederick Schoff of Philadelphia, President of the National Congress of Mothers' Clubs and Parent Teacher Associations, told the Massachusetts mothers who attended the closing session of the State Congress of Mothers at Waltham, yesterday, that their girls were being crammed with too much education of a general nature, while the studies that would make them better wives and parents were sadly neglected.

In her address, which was the feature of the last of the three-day convention, Mrs. Schoff declared that the present high moral standards of America and the great corruption in politics, all of which she ascribed chiefly to lack of child study in the public schools elsewhere.

Mrs. Schoff was repeatedly applauded during her sentiments and received a responsive shout, for when she had finished, the congress passed with unanimity strong resolutions urging, first, that the whole problem to either be given more consideration, secondly, that child study be taken up, fostered and furthered; and lastly, that mothers devote more time and attention to their homes and children than they are doing.

Child Study Neglected.

"Child study with us in America is today in a sad state," declared Mrs. Schoff. "Even the women's colleges, where we would suppose they would long after the essentials, women's training, they are neglecting it to teach the principles of true motherhood and true wifehood.

"I am not saying that any one is to blame. I am arguing that the time is ripe for each of us to take hold and help free that of idealistic provision for the training of these fighters.

"First of all among those to whom we must look for help is the American woman, for women, of all such colleges. I find but one which has awoke[d] to the tendency, the high school of practical household and motherhood. That is in Mississippi. But for those that are not there, we shall see. I hope, that all such colleges shall be promoting this vital and great study.

Right Study for Girls.

"There is another failing we Americans have today. This is in our school system —in our educational methods. There is no more stunning, blind way to cram girls with matters we call pure education or pure learning. They are not enough for the girls to learn. But they are not so important that we should neglect them for the exclusion of knowledge of far greater importance.

"This cramming tendency, I am sorry to say, is too prevalent in the high schools of this country. Let us teach our girls in the schools the ideas of right wifehood and motherhood. Let them learn that and nothing. Our methods today are so planned that we teach them how to be good wives and mothers, but how to become merely good women, good citizens and otherwise.

"Our Sunday Schools can be made an important agent to this work. At present they have religion and Bible study principles almost exclusively. There is room for a broader education in them. They can teach the study of true womanliness—of the kind that makes for mothers and wives of the right stamp. Let our child nature shows us the children are at the age to characterize their first impressions the time they are strongly under the influence of the Sunday School. Let us use this great opportunity to teach them the things they ought most to know.

Churches Should Help.

"I think every church should organize its mothers and fathers into clubs to study child nature. Those clubs should be the places best low to train their children. The end of this would be the better feeling of our citizens and wives and mothers of the land would ensure the true quality of men and women. It is one of the worst comments on our civilization today that to the lack of child study in America be due the corruption in our politics and the low moral standard of Americans.

Other speakers were the State president, Mrs. Walter Merryman of Malden; Mrs. George E. Partridge, national president of Wellesley Club, and Thomas Curley of the Massachusetts Civic League.

How to Stop Pimples

In Five Days You Can Get Rid of All Skin Eruptions by the New Calcium Sulphide Wafers.

Trial Package To Prove It Sent Free.

Any man or woman gets awfully tired going around with a pimply face day after day. And other people are awfully tired, too, seeing them go around with faces full of disgusting pimples.

If you are one of the unfortunates who can't get away from pimples and soft lazy rolls, and have tried almost everything under heaven to get rid of them, take a few of Stuart's Calcium Wafers every day. Do that steadily for a few days, and in less than a week look at yourself in the mirror.

You will then say that Stuart's Calcium Wafers are a wonder in getting rid of the eruptions.

These wonderful little wafers contain the most effective blood purifier ever discovered, calcium sulphide.

No matter what your trouble is, whether simples, blotches, blackheads, rash, tetter, eczema or scabby crusts, you can solemnly depend upon Stuart's Calcium Wafers as never failing.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have cured boils in three days and the worst cases of skin diseases in a week. Every particle of impurity is driven out of your system completely, never to return, and is done without deranging your system in the slightest.

Most treatments for the blood and for skin eruptions are miserably slow in their results, and besides, many of them are poisonous. Stuart's Calcium Wafers contain no poisonous drug of any kind; they are absolutely harmless, and yet do work which cannot fail to surprise you.

Don't go around with a humiliating, disgusting mass of pimples and blackheads on your face. A face covered over with those disgusting things makes people turn away from you, and breeds failure in your life work. Stop it. Read what an Iowa man said when he woke up one morning and found he had a new face.

"By George, I never saw anything like it. There I've been for three years trying to get rid of pimples and blackheads, and guess I used everything under the sun. I used your Calcium Wafers for just seven days. This morning every blessed pimple is gone and I can't find a blackhead. I could write you a volume of thanks. I am so grateful to you."

Just send us your name and address in full today, and we will send you a trial package of Stuart's Calcium Wafers, free, to test. After you have tried the sample and been convinced that all we say is true, you will go to your nearest druggist and get a 50c box and be cured of your facial trouble. Sons Lose in Aldrich Will Fight

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

"I am Satisfied," Says the Widow

Mrs. Aldrich, widow of manufacturer who cut off his sons, and his daughter.

MISS ALICE MARION

Miss Alice Aldrich Gets About $60,000 by Will; Stepmother Bulk of the Estate.

MRS. SUSAN H. ALDRICH of Brookline, widow of Charles T. Aldrich of Winthrop, a retired woolen manufacturer, was yesterday declared a victor in the now famous Aldrich will case.

Judge George of the Probate Court allowed the will, which leaves all but five-twelfths of the estate to the widow.

"I am satisfied," said Mrs. Aldrich, when told of the decision yesterday. That is all she would say.

By the decision rendered yesterday she wins a victory over her four stepchildren, who fought the widow's will because they said that the estate was worth $3,000. The three sons, who were cut off with $5 apiece, and the daughter, who also received five-twelfths of the estate and who countenanced the contest without taking active part in it declared that their father left an estate worth $500,000.

Allege Undue Influence.

The hearings last several weeks. Startling testimony was brought out by both sides. The sensation of the case came when hearings were resumed after the announcement that an old safe had been discovered in Wednesday that belonged to the late Charles T. Aldrich, but which had never been opened by any one.

A special trip was made to Worcester for the purpose of examining the safe, but so far as is known it contained nothing from the trip.

The contention of the Aldrich children was that their father had been unduly influenced by his second wife in the making of his will. They also charged that the estate was much larger than was told. They asked for an accounting of the estate.

Letters were read at the hearings on the case, which created a sensation. Many of them were written from the bride to the bridegroom after the marriage. In them Mr. Aldrich addressed his wife in such terms as "My Warm Baby" and "My Venus." He could many of the letters with "With untold love and kisses."

Mrs. Charles T. Aldrich, Jr., testified at the hearings and gave startling testimony. She declared that her father-in-law came to her house often and complained that he was hungry

Made Secret Trips.

"I am afraid to eat food that is prepared for me by my wife," he told his daughter-in-law.

This witness declared that he had to make secret trips to see her husband. She was afraid that his wife would find out that he was visiting her. She declared that he told her that his wife hated his children and told everybody that she was so.

Testimony from other witnesses for the widow was to the effect that Aldrich hated his children. He told many of them that his sons were a disgrace to him, and that he had nothing but big boy money, according to the testimony.

From Mrs. Aldrich herself it was learned that four days after her marriage to Mr. Aldrich, her husband received a note from her friend, Adelaide Mitchell, now Mrs. Woodward, who was then twenty-seven years old. Mrs. Aldrich also testified that her husband gave his adopted daughter a $5,000 [illegible] organ.

Under cross-examination Mrs. Aldrich could not tell the lawyer whether her husband had given her $50,000, $75,000 or $100,000 during the last five years of their married life.

Arguments in the case were heard yesterday, before Judge George.

Why Sons Were Cut Off.

In arguing for the defence of the will Marvin M. Taylor of Worcester said:

"These sons of Aldrich continually disgraced him. That is why he cut them off and gave his property to his daughter and his second wife.

"The other side has referred to those letters from Aldrich to his wife as 'mushy-mushy.' Here is one which he wrote to her twelve years before marriage. In it he addresses her as 'my darling wife' and says: 'It is sweet to say that I missed my lovely sweetheart, for I know if you thought of me last night. Each night I pray for you and your safe return. O, I love you so dearly! Words fail to tell how much I love you. With countless kisses, I am your loving husband.'

"Is that a mushy-mushy letter? If it is, would to God that there were more of them in the Aldrich [illegible] who have been married [illegible] Would the world suffer from such? No! It would improve [illegible] letter Aldrich says to his wife: 'Comrade which you are, as well as sweetheart, do you realize how dearly I love you?' He ends the letter in the word 'With untold love and kisses.'

"In another letter to his wife he says: 'Oh, sweetheart, how fondly I love you and wish to be with you to-night.' In that mushy? Perhaps it is, but think what it means, coming from a man who has been married fifteen years.

Called Wife "My Warm Baby."

"My warm baby" and "my Venus" were some of the endearing terms used by Aldrich, in letters written to his second wife, according to Lawyer William J. Brown during his argument.

"The terms, 'my warm baby' and 'my Venus,' which Mr. Aldrich used in letters, showed that he was in his dotage and under the absolute control of this woman," said Lawyer Brown in his argument.

Charles W. Bartlett, counsel for Alice Aldrich, said: "This woman, the second wife, came into the Aldrich family and from that time she dominated the whole situation, both Aldrich and his property.

"Think of it, six days after marriage, she obtained this big bunch money of thirty years. For that was the age of Adelaide Aldrich at the time of her marriage. GRAVES WINS OVER LUFKIN AS SURVEYOR

Appointment to Come This Week, Say the Boston Machine Prophets.

Purely as a matter of party policy, Edward C. Graves of Boston has defeated Wilfred W. Lufkin of Essex for the Federal job of Surveyor of the Port of Boston at $5,000 a year. Mr. Graves will be appointed by President Taft, at the request of United States Senators Lodge and Crane—especially Crane—to succeed Jeremiah McCarthy. Mr. McCarthy's term is about up. President Taft, it was said last night by machine insiders, will send the name of Graves to the Senate late within a day or two. The announcement will be received with joy by the Republican machine in Boston.

Mr. Graves is a merchant tailor with a big personal following. He was formerly president of the Republican City Committee. He is one of the best dressed men in Boston.

Lufkin Is Just "Tony."

Wilfred W. Lufkin, whom his friends call "Tony," is ex-[illegible] of the Congressional Committee of which Captain Augustus P. Gardner is chairman. Lufkin is one of the best politicians in Essex County. He has long been much more manager than secretary of the Republican Congressional interests. Captain Gardner would have been glad to get Lufkin the surveyorship for his associate and ally in Senator Lodge would have been glad to be with Tony, but—

It was put up strongly to both the Senators that the situation in this city would not tolerate the appointment of any officer which has always been Boston's on any young man, however excellent, of Essex county. The Senators were reminded that Graves had been compelled to stand aside when he aspired to the United States Marshalship and that the Republicans who do the work around this town would be apt to take it very much to heart if Graves was again objected.

Lufkin Pulled Hard.

Ever since it became apparent that "Tony" Lufkin would soon have to give up his $2,500 clerkship of committee—the fortunes were following the Democratic landslide—the Lufkin fight had taken on new life. If it hadn't been for the prestige which has always been Boston's on any young man, however excellent, of Essex county. The Senators were reminded that Graves had been compelled to stand aside when he aspired to the United States Marshalship and that the Republicans who do the work around this town would be apt to take it very much to heart if Graves was again objected.

BOSTON OPERA PLANS FOR THE NEXT SEASON

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

THE Boston opera season of 1911-1912 will last twenty weeks.

The Boston Opera Company next season will include Ling Cavalieri and other famous stars who are now shing elsewhere.

The opera repertory will include all the modern French works which were in the old Hammerstein repertory.

Henry Russell says so, and Henry Russell ought to know.

Director Russell did not want to talk about next season at first. He thought it was too early.

"If I tell you what artists are reengaged and who will not come back, I shall have a series of rows on my hands until the end of the season," he said. "You think you know the most disagreeable person in the world, but you are wrong. The singer who is not reengaged. I am afraid, to tell you the names of those not reengaged, because I should like to give a few more operas this season. Let's talk about something else."

Mr. Russell Looks Pained.

"The patronage of the Boston Opera is amazingly good," he went on to say when I asked him about the financial success of his season. "It is phenomenal considering the size of the city. The poorest house we have had this season was one when considerably more than half the seats were taken, and it is very seldom that there are a few vacant seats. We have had many performances to absolute capacity.

"Then you will make a large profit this season?"

Mr. Russell looked pained.

"Profit, loss, salary, expenses, receipts, I'm positively amazing the interest the American public takes in this side of opera," he replied.

"Nobody but a lunatic ever expected to make money out of opera. It's not a commercial proposition. You cannot conduct opera in the way you would manage a business, nor can you apply ordinary business principals to opera.

"The purpose of business is profit. The purpose of opera is art, pleasure, education. Those who are in opera are in it for love, except the artists themselves who are in it for all they can get.

"Compare an opera company with a musical comedy. The latter employs a small chorus, low priced principals and a tiny orchestra. If a fairly expensive one is not more than $3,000 a week out the public pays for what is an entertainment $2 a seat.

Cost of Real Opera.

"A first-class opera company with its huge repertory, its chorus of 125, its orchestra of 75 and its corps of principals costs from $40,000 to $45,000 a week, but it can only ask $5 a seat.

"Then the artists of the opera company are thirteen times as great as the musical comedy. Their fee is receipt are only two and a half times as great. And yet you ask about profits of grand opera.

"The truth is that Americans pay too little for opera. I know you think you pay too much, but prices are very little higher in this country for grand opera than they are in Europe, despite your high cost of living, your protective tariff and heavy taxation.

"For example, the Boston Opera Company pays a little more for a seat than the Scala in Milan, although an important one-night stand at Wagner the Scala are double those in Boston.

"Caruso's best ten stage hands in Milan for what I pay one here. The Italians come in numbers where we count in units. A good orchestra player will gladly accept from six to eight francs a day in Milan, which is $6 or $8 here. A good stenographer earns $20 a week in Boston, and Milan a good singer is glad to be engaged for that, and so it goes.

"Take the cost of opera principals. This is what makes the economical difference in price. In the last few years the multiplication of opera houses in all parts of the world has created a demand for opera singers. The demand far exceeds the supply.

"To get a good artist it is necessary to pay his price. To get a great artist you come pretty near having to mortgage your house. They will not cross the Atlantic for less than twice what they can earn in Europe, and if you don't accept their terms they can find plenty of other directors who will.

"The standard price for an opera seat in this country has been $5 for many years, yet during the last ten years the salaries of artists has increased enormously.

"The American people are not satisfied with great singers—they want great stars. They come by this honestly. It is their English blood.

"An English audience will not hear any singer who is not famous. They are dazzled only by names. Yet the famous singer may be aged and infirm, may have lost his voice and croak instead of sing. The British audience will not discover the fact. They will be perfectly satisfied because they are listening to a famous singer.

"American audiences have the same trait except that Americans quickly recognize that the great singer may have lost all his greatness. They do not hesitate to criticise their stars. But, strange to say, though they criticise, they still patronize and the battle-scarred stars will get their money every time over the young and beautiful, but unknown, singers.

"What are you going to do about it?"

"Well, we are in America and we shall have to give the Americans what they want. That is why we are bringing the most famous singers to Boston as often as we can."

"Have you planned definitely for next season?"

"Yes. We have determined to make a feature of French opera. The Boston Opera House is admirably suited to the delicate, intimate music dramas of the modern French composer. In Andre Caplet we have a French conductor of the first excellence. We shall have some splendid French singers next season and will be able to produce 'Pelleas et Melisande,' 'Thais,' 'Louise,' 'Tales of Hoffmann' and similar French works.

Calls Public Unreasonable.

"You see, we go ahead increasing our repertory, though I am firmly convinced that the American public is unreasonable in its demand for an enormous repertory and no repetition.

"La Scala in Milan produced only eight operas during its long season last year. The Opera Comique in Paris never offers more than ten works in a season. The public in those cities does not mind occasional repetitions, indeed welcomes them gladly, so as to become familiar with the scores, something which cannot be done at one hearing.

"But American companies are compelled to give twenty-five or thirty operas in a season and if a single work is ever repeated on the same subscription night there is great indignation.

"This compels us to put on operas that have been produced and rendered out of course perfection of ensemble is impossible.

"There is 'The Girl of the Golden West,' people who seriously wished to study an opera would wish to hear that work several times before they decided whether it was good or bad. Yet if we should give it a second time on any subscription night the public people would object. We spent many weeks rehearsing 'Tristan and Isolde' at great dollars in producing it, and yet we are asked to abandon it after four or five performances. It is as if one built an ocean liner and sent her to the junk heap after one or six voyages.

"Shall you give German opera next season?"

"We may give a few German works like 'Koenigskinder' and 'Hansel und Gretel' and 'Lohengrin,' but we are not yet ready to undertake a full Wagner repertory.

Really Three Companies.

"The necessity of producing opera in three languages—German, French and Italian—compels the American opera house to maintain practically three opera companies instead of one. Most of the French artists can sing in Italian opera, the Italians cannot be used in German opera and the Germans cannot sing French or Italian works.

"The expense of such a trifold organization is enormous and only possible for its value. I do not think Boston is yet ready to support a German opera company in addition to the French and Italian wings of the present organization.

"What will you do for opera in English?"

"We shall sing 'The Sacrifice' next season if it is successful this year. We shall also produce Herbert's 'Natoma' if that work is worth while. It is possible that other works will be sung in English, since we have many artists in the Boston company who can sing in English."

DUCKING FOR WOMEN; WHIP WIFE BEATERS

Head of Lowell Police Wants to Try Old Methods on Scolds, Gossips, and So Forth.

LOWELL, Feb. 18.—The ducking stool for women brawlers and the whipping post for wife beaters are punishments advocated by Redmond Welch, the superintendent of the police department. These penalties are only to be paid, Mr. Welch desires it to be understood, in extreme cases.

The superintendent's ideas on this subject were given in a lecture which he delivered to the Brotherhood of the Pawtucket Congregational Church. He remarked that a ducking both in chilly water might have a tendency to curb the tongues of certain talkative women.

"The ducking stool was principally for the punishment of talkative females, scolding wives and unruly gossips," said Mr. Welch. "This punishment seems not to have been mentioned in connection with the other local punishments. This may be accounted for by the general good conduct of the ladies of Lowell in the early times.

"From frequent complaints and cases of complaint arising from a row at the present time, it is doubtful if there are not those who would relish this method of punishment with delight and witness the discomfort and chagrin caused their spouses by a dip with as much satisfaction as did those of ancient times.

"When I speak of the ducking stool for talkative females, I am in earnest. I should say, however, that it would be used in extreme cases only. For the woman who is bullied into court as a wife beater and a brawler it would be the most fitting punishment."

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH

A Pleasant, Simple, but Safe and Effectual Cure for It.

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable. The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the heart and lungs and difficult breathing, headaches, feeble appetite, nervousness and a general played out, languid feeling.

There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue, and if the interior of the stomach could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition.

The cure for this common and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be quickly, thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach. To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is the one necessary thing to do and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal conditions will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlanson, the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Diastase, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux, Golden Seal and fruit acids. These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and not being a patent medicine are sold with perfect safety in the assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

The plan of dieting is simply another name for starvation, and the use of predigested foods and new tangled breakfast foods simply makes matters worse, as any dyspeptic who has tried them knows.

As Dr. Remsen says, the only reason I can imagine why Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not universally used by everybody who is troubled in any way with indigestion is because many people seem to think that because a medicine is advertised or is sold in drug stores or is protected by a trade mark it must be a humbug, whereas as a matter of truth and fact the general public cannot know that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have cured more people of catarrh of the stomach, indigestion, heartburn, and dyspepsia, nervous prostration and the many conditions generally than all the patent medicines and doctors' prescriptions for stomach trouble combined.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tab ets is the safest preparation, as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy ever left any form of indigestion, catarrh of the stomach, biliousness sour stomach, heartburn and bloating after meals.

MELROSE HAS THE DARKEST SPOT IN DARKEST BOSTON

Settlement Workers Can Find Plenty to Do, Down in "The Piggery."

RAGS AND HUNGER COMMON

Children Go Half Clothed and Do Not Know Taste of Butter.

In the Melrose "Piggery" district, begs and humans mingle much in common.

In some of its homes the pigs seem to be given greater care than the children.

Children are so ragged and dirty that school teachers have been forced to beg clothing for them.

Food has been obtained for them through charity.

Some of them never have known the taste of butter.

DISCOVERY that school children in wealthy and aristocratic Melrose were ignorant of the fact that butter is an article of food has led to an investigation of the "Piggery" district, so-called, in that city that has revealed conditions in that settlement more usually associated with the lowest slums of London or New York's East Side than within five miles of the gilded dome of the Massachusetts State House. Investigation also reveals an indifference on the part of the city officials of Melrose, Malden and Revere, within whose boundaries the settlement is located that is surprising.

Whether from necessity or choice a low standard of living prevails in the "Piggery." There are something like 400 inhabitants in the district, and the majority are engaged in raising pigs for the market. The animals seem to be given more care and attention than the children of the residents of the district and their sties look fully as comfortable as the homes of many of their masters.

Thousands of children in Boston are compelled to do without many luxuries of the table, many are poorly clad, but it is safe to say that almost every child in Boston, no matter how poor its parents, knows the taste of butter. That article of food is a rarity to the children of the "Piggery." Few children of the poor in Boston are sent to school in garments so ragged and odorous that teachers are compelled for their own sake and that of the other pupils to give them clothing for them and, nor do they appear so hungry that private charity has to be enlisted to give them an occasional square meal. Yet this is the case in Melrose.

Pigs and People.

The "Piggery" is scattered along the boundaries of Malden, Melrose and Revere, some two and a half miles from the Melrose City Hall. Its several hundred inhabitants and several thousand pigs mingle much in common. No one seems to know but how many people live up folks live in this settlement of but and shack and sty and dilapidated structure.

Sivalo's Food avenue would lead any settlement worker who wishes to take a chance easily to the confines of the "Piggery," but it is doubtful if he got much further, for the inhabitants are not traders with hostile eyes and keep dogs which growl forbiddingly. Odors, not of Araby, reveal the locality long before it is reached, and residents of the section odorously herald their approach when the wind blows right. Yet no one seems to care particularly about this, and no one gives thought apparently about attempting to improve conditions.

It was Mrs. Whittredge, who died about two weeks ago, who first learned of the ignorance of the "Piggery" children concerning butter. She was a teacher of the Ripley School and twenty-eight of the pupils came from the "Piggery" district. They came to school reeking with odors of the sty. The ordinary teacher would have favored the open-air plan of a school in their behalf, else have stood afar off when they recited their lessons, but Mrs. Whittredge took an active interest in the children and by personal solicitation obtained from more fortunate pupils clothing for them.

First Sight of Butter.

A few weeks ago Mrs. Whittredge, Miss Margaret Grady of the Warren School and partially inclined Melrose people gave the Ripley School children a treat. Tables were spread in the school building and nothing was lacking in the way of eatables. Many who assisted in waiting upon the tables will never forget what followed after the children were seated, for some of them looked in wonder at the butter set before them and actually asked if the "yellow stuff" was good to eat.

Now Mrs. Whittredge has passed away, but the children have another staunch friend in Miss Martha Foster, their present teacher. Miss Foster lives in a fine residence at No. 328 Emerson street, in the best section of Melrose. She is greatly interested in her charges, even though ill health has been intimated that there have been times when she had frequent recourse to the perfume bottle for herself and disinfectants for the school room. She is fully aware of the conditions that obtain in the homes in the "Piggery," but save condition for the children, so far as butter is concerned, has been vastly improved of late.

Stolid and Silent.

It did not take long for one investigator to find out that neither kind words, nor soap, nor pig had any welcome to extend him. A boy wearing greasy garments sat down a bucket of swill to regard the visitor, with wonder depicted on his face. "Hello, Siddo," the assistant said, and would produce a reply from the ordinary boy of twelve had no effect on him. Naught but grunts came from the lad and the swine in the neighboring pens, echoed the retorts made with their own. Some of the "houses" contain but one room and only the swine appear happy and contented. The men go about Melrose collecting garbage for the pigs, but children, young and old, are the ones who feed the animals in the pens. The women are uncommunicative and unresponsive to inquiry.

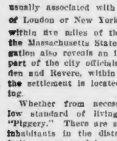
The old Higgins house, once a famous road posterity, appears as though its tweny-odd rooms were none too many for the twenty-eight different families. All of these people are tenders of pigs. Chief among the staff of health inspectors ever visit the district.

None of the authorities of either Malden or Melrose or Revere have ever interfered with the method of living at the "Piggery."

"I wouldn't go down into that place for any amount," said a Melrose official. "Let them pull away there for all of me. You can't do a thing with such people. The last outside visitor there was the census taker, and it was general talk at that time that he came near throwing up his job before he had hardly begun."

Feet Tired—So Tired?

TIZ Makes Sick Feet Well, No Matter What Ails Them.



TIZ acts at once and makes tired, aching, swollen feet remarkably fresh and sore proof. It's wonderful, you know, for terrifying that gets the matter with your feet. It's for sore feet, sweaty feet, smelly feet, burning feet, corns, callouses, bunions.

"For years I have been troubled with sore and tender feet and intense pains. Have had the assistance of physicians without relief. I bought a box of TIZ, which worked in a perfect way, and left with a great many of my friends. I would not be without it if it cost a dollar. I can't say enough to be generally used."—A. Dreutzer, Chicago.

TIZ is not a powder. Powders and other foot remedies clog up the pores. TIZ draws out all poisonous exudations which bring on soreness of the feet, and is the only remedy that does. TIZ draws out every pore and glorifies the feet—your feet.

You'll never limp again or dare up your face in pain, and you'll forget about your corns, bunions and callouses. You'll feel like a new person.

FORCED BY GRATITUDE OF HUNDREDS

To Repeat His Offer

Of January 15 in the Boston American

I have been so moved the past few weeks by the gratitude of readers that I have decided to make again the offer which I made in the Jan. 15 issue. This is what I said: "I am going to Give Away a Free Trial Treatment for Deafness to every sufferer who asks for it."

People by the hundred have come to my office and letters of request have poured in; letters of grateful thanks have also been received from every part of the continent and people whom I have cured of that terrible affliction—Deafness — are thanking me.

A letter from Boston says: "All I have to say is that I have found the cure for deafness, hearing from Dr. Nicholson's treatment. Since I received your offer, for you have cured me of catarrh."

Deafness Treatment Free

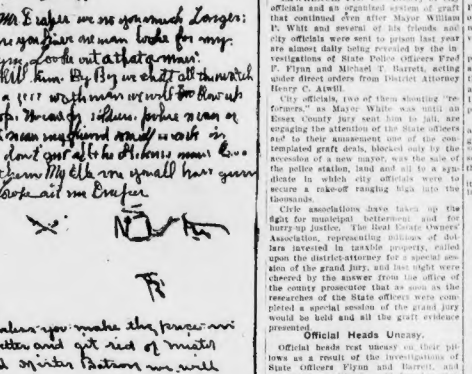
These many letters of gratitude have touched my heart, and so I say again to the readers of the Boston American that I will give a free trial treatment by mail to every sufferer who calls at my office or writes for it.

My office can only be reached for a short time. If you are Deaf, or have any trouble with your ears, come or write for free treatment.

This treatment is entirely free. I want to find out how you suffer in the approach of Deafness and the intolerable agony of singing noises in the head. I have cured many people whom I thought Deaf. I have come to have the same opportunity to hear again. Send for a free course of home treatment. Don't delay. It may be too late. If you have ever felt the slightest feeling that something is wrong with your ears, be on the safe side and send for treatment. If you can't call, write. Don't send a penny. Don't promise anything. Simply send your name and full address and the free treatment, examples of these cures, how they were cured by my treatment. Many of these people thought they never would be cured, they tried so many different things which never did them any good. My treatment reached them just the same.

Send to Dr. Oliver Gardner, Suite 912, 39 West 38th st., New York City, and get the Free Home Treatment.

Arrested as Draper Black Hand Millhand Run Down by Pinkerton



Facsimile of a Black Hand letter received by the officials of the Draper Company at Hopedale.

Treasurer Draper of Company at Hopedale Gives Statement to Public.

HOPEDALE, Feb. 18.—Frank H. Costello of Congress street, Milford, was arrested at noon to-day by T. Robert Ross, a Pinkerton detective, on a warrant in connection with Black Hand letters sent to officials of the Draper Company loom mills here. Costello was taken into custody as he was leaving his bench in the bobbin department of the plant for his lunch hour.

The arrest followed a search conducted during the past month. January 20 the mills were placed under guard night and day. Forty armed men were employed. The homes of former Governor Draper, of Superintendent Charles E. Maddox and Foreman Robert Goodnow and of President Frank Dutcher were watched day and night.

Costello was taken to the jail at Milford, where the police say he made a virtual confession. He was traced by Ross, it is claimed, through his handwriting. It is alleged the letters containing the threats were in Costello's handwriting.

Costello Taken to Jail.

Costello has been employed in the bobbin department for the past two years. The police say the letters sent the officials must have been the result of cuts made in the wages of the employes within the past few months.

The policing of the factory is to continue until the whole case is cleared up. It was announced this afternoon.

Late this afternoon George A. Draper, treasurer of the Draper Company and brother of the former Governor, swore out a warrant for the arrest of Costello. He then gave out this statement:

What Draper Says.

"Ever since this company was started we have endeavored to conduct our business for the benefit of our employes as well as for the benefit of ourselves. I think the history of Hopedale will bear out that statement. During the month of January we received letters, which I suppose were regarded as 'Black Hand,' threatening the lives of the people connected with the company and threatening the wholesale destruction of the plant. Feeling as I do, that the interests of our employes must be protected and if the threats contained in the letters were carried out the lives of our workmen would necessarily be endangered, I therefore took every possible method to ascertain the source of the letters and employed the services of the Pinkerton detective agency

LAWRENCE GRAFT PROBE GOES DEEPER

Plot to Sell Police Station at Big Profit to Syndicate Discovered by Detectives.

LAWRENCE, Feb. 18.—Bribery of city officials and an organized system of graft that continued even after Mayor William P. Whit and several of his friends and city officials were sent to prison last year are almost daily being revealed by the investigations of State Police Officers Fred P. Flynn and Michael T. Barrett, acting under orders from District Attorney Henry C. Atwill.

City officials, two of them shouting "reformers," as Mayor White was until an Essex county jury sent him to jail, are engaging the attention of the State officers and to their amusement one of the contemplated graft deals, blocked only by the revocation of a new mayor, was the sale of the police station, land and all to a syndicate in which city officials were to secure a take-off ranging high into the thousands.

Civic associations have taken up the fight for municipal betterment, and the hurry-up justice. The Real Estate Owners' Association, representing millions of dollars invested in taxable property, called upon the district attorney for a special session of the grand jury, and last night were cheered by the answer from the office of the county prosecutor that as soon as the researches of the State officers were completed a special session of the grand jury would be held and all the graft evidence presented.

Official Heads Uneasy.

Official heads rest uneasy on their pillows as a result of the investigations of State officers Flynn and Barrett, and especially so with the cold fact haunting those heads that efforts, though ineffectual in their efforts of last Summer as to uncover graft, did so with such success that the prison district now holds officials and prominent men of business.

With superintendent Patrick Lyons of the Street Department, his chief clerk, Michael J. Flynn and the city's largest contractor, Philip Holland, and Holland's clerk, John P. Kane, all allowing their cases to go to the Grand Jury without putting in any defence of the latter court hearing, public clamor has been intensified for a special session of the Grand Jury.

The climax came this week when it was proposed to open a public work for the unemployed and to place this work in the hands of some of the men arrested for grafting. Assistant District Attorney John J. Burke, in open court before Judge Fred N. Chandler, publicly declared that Superintendent of Streets Lyons had accepted a bribe of $100 for the awarding of one contract and a bribe of $1,000 for awarding another.

Neither Lyons nor his chief clerk, Flynn, resigned lightly with him in a conspiracy with contractors to rob the city, has been suspended from office and the opportunity to have them handle relief work for the unemployed has aroused a storm of protest.

Public sentiment is voiced by the Real Estate Owners' Association in its call for a special session of the Grand Jury, and in the suggestion made by one of its officers that in view of the direct charge of the District Attorney against Lyons, the City Council, on its own accord and for the protection of the city's interests, should at once suspend the latter from office.

The knowledge that employment to needy citizens has been denied on the excuse that the city had no money to spend, while the revelations of the State police disclose that contractors and favored friends had an easy time with the city's money, promise to cause some city officials the unenviable hours to-day to work for the unemployed is considered Monday.

Plans Thorough Probe.

"I'm going to make this graft probe a thorough one," said District Attorney Atwill. "Beyond this the new prosecuting officer of Essex will say no more, but the time may while the State officers, under his direction, are investigating, proves the opportunity of Mayor-elect Scanlon to do in office only two months. Yet Lawrence has piled up a full year's work on his desk and the piling up goes on.

Ordinarily the next session of the Grand Jury would be held at Newburyport in May, but a request from Judge Chandler, who presides over the criminal branch, will probably be granted during the May term of court, and a session of the Grand Jury held here next week but for the idea dropped by the State police that the City Council be given a slow. The City Council was ready to elect Kane last month as keeper of the city's money chest, until the nature of the charges to be made against him were openly made at a joint convention of the Board of Aldermen. Mayor-elect William A. Kelleher will retain office as a body over.

The turning out of Kelleher is stated to be one of the moves contemplated by the State police, and all because he refused to permit contractors to draw payment for work before it was finished.

Police Station Sale.

The sale of the police station was urged by Mayor White just before he went to jail, and which has been blocked successfully by Mayor O'Hill, the conspiracy to defraud the city interests in the deal. The police station, built in the early days, is situated on Lawrence street just opposite the Boston & Maine depot, in a congestion of the largest office building in the city.

The site is the most valuable in Lawrence. The scheme, as revealed to the investigating officers, was to have the police station bought for a song on the ground that it was unsuitable for police purposes

PASTOR KING DEFENDS TEN COMMANDMENTS

Leader of People's Temple Opposes Canterbury Plan of Revision.

The Rev. Dr. George W. King, pastor of People's Temple in Boston, is emphatically opposed to cutting down the Ten Commandments, as it is proposed by the convocation of Canterbury, in London.

This religious body is discussing the propriety of shortening the Second, Fourth and Tenth commandments. They declare that these commandments, all of which are about 6,000 years old, are too long in newspaper parlance, the London body proposes to blue-pencil Moses.

Dr. King says that the commandments are not too long, and sarcastically suggests that doubtless there are many persons in Boston who would be pleased to see the Seventh commandment changed, although it contains only four words!

Here are the three commandments that it is proposed to shorten as they appear in one of the latest editions of the Bible:

Are These Too Long?

SECOND—Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth. Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them; for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me, and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments.

FOURTH—Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy manservant, nor thy maid servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates. For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the seventh day and hallowed it.

TENTH—Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maid servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is by thy neighbor's.

Teaches Worship of God.

Dr. King in the course of a discussion of the proposed change said:

"The first three of the Ten Commandments, too, keep them as they are. What does this second commandment teach? It teaches the worship of God. Now there is nothing that this age needs so much as spiritual culture. The supreme thing that psychology is somewhat antiquated, the worship of truth is the second commandment.

"We need that commandment right here in Boston. It has in it the most conspicuous place in the city. The idea of worshiping the true God appeals to us. I think about it, they ought to lengthen it instead of shorten it. Once in a while we are compelled to read in the newspapers that some thing on these commandments is to be changed. Now that the last angnel body in the Church of England does not like the Second Commandment under the presidency of Archbishop David-City Council, on its own accord and for the protection of the city's interests, should at once suspend the latter from office.

The knowledge that employment to needy citizens has been denied on the excuse that the city had no money to spend, while the revelations of the State police disclose that contractors and favored friends had an easy time with the city's money, promise to cause some city officials the unenviable hours to-day to work for the unemployed is considered Monday.

FEATHERS ON A STAR

One of the Most Beautiful Women on the American Stage Wears Felix Kornfeld Hats

Lillian Lorraine, the girl in the swing, "Follies of 1910."

If there is any one thing that fills the heart of the average woman with unbounded joy it is shopping. From time immemorial this has been true, and in these modern days when the great stores make a specialty of beautiful creations in women's wear their pleasure knows no bounds. Lillian Lorraine, the dainty Lillian, and the "girl in the swing" of the "Follies of 1910," now playing at the Tremont Theatre, is no exception.

Almost from the very moment she arrived in Boston she has shown the greatest interest in the stores of Boston, even to the extent of purchasing a large part of her wardrobe here. One store that has particularly interested her is the millinery store of Felix Kornfeld, at 65 to 69 Summer street. Here the dainty "girl in the swing" has spent much time, the result being the addition to her wardrobe of several hats and other trimmings.

One hat that is particularly pleasing, which she now wears as the result of her shopping, is a large hemp hat on the mushroom shape, trimmed with three willow plumes. The under brim of this creation, which is decidedly chic and Frenchy, is finished in white peau de soie silk.

Flower dress trimmings also caught the eye of the dainty little woman who has so endeared herself to the Boston public, and many orchids and wreaths of the silk roses and forget-me-nots have found their way from the Felix Kornfeld store to her gowns.

A haracraft stole and muff was also added to the list of purchases, and will be one of the latest additions to the wardrobe of Miss Lorraine. This is in white, with a deep border on the natural. The muff is of the barrel shape and is lined with heavy white satin with a white silk cord.

It has always been a boast of this firm that they carry the most up-to-date line of millinery in Boston, and that the latest French designs come to their store first. They always carry the latest styles in trimmed hats for the coming

$19,000,000 BUDGET GOES IN TOMORROW

In Revising Estimates, Mayor Has Pruned the Appropriations Over $800,000.

Mayor Fitzgerald's office will send to the City Council to-morrow the annual appropriation budget for good year for 1911, amounting to $19,248,373.45.

In revising the department estimates the Mayor pruned $849,311.83 from the figures furnished by the department heads, but the bill as it will be submitted to the council will be $306,537 larger than the appropriation bill of one year ago.

The appropriation capacity of the city is $2,259,021.31 greater than the amount actually called for in the budget. The increase over last year is due to the normal increase in municipal work, according to the Mayor.

The last Department of Public Works asks the largest appropriation. The sum of $4,191,206 will be required to maintain this important branch of the city service, according to the budget.

The police department expenses will be $2,185,000, all but $171,000 allowed for pensions being for current expenses. The total department appropriation calls for $3,000,000, the balance to be met by revenues, all of which are paid by the city of Boston, with amount to $1,148,950.45.

The appropriation for the water department will be provided for by rates paid for the income of the department. The sum of $1,650,000 will be required for the coming year. Current expenses and the extension of mains will use up $900,000 of this and $750,000 will be used for debt.

If the City Council adopts the recommendations of Mayor Fitzgerald the appropriation $800,000 for an eleven-story annex to City Hall on the side of the old County Court House, the total of the appropriation budget will be increased that amount, since it is not included in the total of estimates to the City Council.

The assessors of the city auditor the appropriation capacity of the city is based upon a valuation for the city of Boston of $1,350,416,529.

R. B. ANDREWS, POOR BOYS' FRIEND, DEAD

Millionaire Promoter of Bank Accounts Known as "Kids' Philanthropist."

LEE, Feb. 18.—Robert B. Andrews, a retired millionaire and promoter of boys' bank accounts, is dead at his home here at the age of sixty-nine years. A score of years ago he was assistant superintendent of the Boston street department.

Born of poor parents in New Britain, Ct., in 1841, he went to Boston at an early age, and for a number of years was employed by the city. Resigning the position of assistant superintendent of streets he became vice-president and general manager of the Emerson Lumber & Dry Kiln Company in Baltimore. Investments in rich lumber lands in the South soon won him a fortune and seven years ago he came to Lee as a retired merchant.

His generous offer last August to the boys of Lee to double every deposit they made in the local savings bank induced nearly a hundred lads to save their pennies and start a bank account, and incidentally won him the title of the "kids' philanthropist." If a boy started an account with a dollar the aged millionaire would add an equal amount to the account. Whatever the amount deposited a similar amount would be added to the account without question.

When asked his reason for this philanthropic action last Summer he said: "While residing in Boston, as assistant superintendent of streets, I saw so much poverty and was so deeply impressed with the existing conditions that I wanted to help alleviate it. I don't want to take misers out of boys, but I do want to teach them to save their money."

Mr. Andrews died of a complication of diseases after an illness of nearly six months. He leaves a widow and two sisters, Mrs. W. E. Fiske of Melrose and Mrs. A. A. Hills of Hartford, and a brother, F. H. Andrews of Brooklyn. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

HAREM SKIRT, "HIGH NOTE IN FEMININE FOLLY" HAS MADE BOSTON APPEARANCE

PARIS has spoken.

The high note of feminine folly has been struck.

The harem skirt is to succeed the hobbled horror which has made women hideous and ridiculous during the past year.

Already the "mannequins" of the great French dressmakers have worn publicly the frankly bifurcated garments which their employers are trying to introduce. In the window of one of Tremont street's most expensive establishments a gown showing the harem skirt is being displayed.

"Boston women will never wear anything so ugly, so ridiculous!" exclaimed a woman who saw this singular garment yesterday. But she was wrong. Our adoption of the hobbled skirt proved that—

American silliness in the matter of fashion is limited merely by the invention of Paris.

Whatever French dressmakers are crazy enough to invent American women are crazy enough to wear.

Brave Leaders Needed.

Suffragists and anti-suffragists may differ as to the desirability of woman's political emancipation, but there are few leaders in either camp brave enough to hold out against a generally prevailing style.

When the hobble skirt came in the feminine reformer could not help reflecting that though you emancipate certain women against their will, though you give them all the rights in the world, the slave instinct must reassert itself. The moment you free their brains they proceed to tie up their feet.

It is a singularly incomprehensible psychology which prompts women to associate the idea of trousers with that of liberty. From the days when Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton made a brief and inglorious debut in the bifurcated bags invented by Amelia Bloomer to the recent appearance of Alma Webster Powell in her hussar uniform, there seems to have been a very general feminine notion that servitude is put on and off with a skirt.

This belief is the more astonishing as the countries wherein woman wears trousers are those in which she is most servile and least respected. In Turkey, China, Persia and parts of India, in Morocco and Tunis women enjoy the full emancipation of trousers, but are held in an abject bondage which Western women find it difficult to realize or understand.

Fashions From the Harem.

Why should we take our fashions in clothes from the harem any more than our fashions in morals?

After all, what an ethical anachronism there is in wearing the divided skirt of the harem without having the divided husband as well. If we take their costumes, why not their customs? Polygamy itself is not more inartistic than the harem skirt, and not more immoral than a deliberate lack of beauty.

Doubtless the hideousness of the new fashion is all that is needed to insure its success. But why cannot the few really beautiful women realize that fashion is the republic wherein all women are born with equal possibilities for ugliness.

It is all well enough for a woman with a bad figure or one whose features seem to have been bought on the installment plan to wear crazy clothes.

It is our habit to speak patronizingly of the gowns our mothers wore in the eighties. "Those hideous bustles, those trying basques!" we exclaim. "How could women so distort themselves?"

Our superiority is unmarred by the consciousness of the hobble skirt we are wearing at the moment; the harem skirt we may wear next month, the pound or two of dead Chinese hair obstructing the circulation in our scalps.

Folly of Fashions.

Thinking of these things, glancing about us in restaurants and roof gardens, perhaps looking down at our own gala attire, we are led to wonder if this amazing folly of fashion has not driven the sense of beauty from women's souls.

"Beauty is truth—truth beauty. That is all ye know and all ye need to know," sang the poet who best celebrated the suave and gracious loveliness of the Greeks.

Man's Part in Matter.

Men are practical creatures, and extraordinarily catholic in their taste in women. A man likes the woman he can get. He admires whatever is paraded for his admiration. If the woman who seeks to interest him doesn't fit his ideal he cuts down his ideal to fit the woman. But this doesn't mean that he isn't capable of admiring something better when it comes along. In fact most domestic troubles arise from his tendency to do so.

When Thackeray made his famous remark that any woman without a hump could marry any man she chose he understated the case. The hump would have only to become fashionable and any one of ten French dressmakers could make it so—for men to be persuaded that it was a mark of distinction and grace.

So far as admiration of types or fashions is concerned, women are the absolute moulders of masculine opinion.

"Women will never be beautiful till they forget about fashion," said the Russian Countess de Svirsky. And nothing proves more quickly the hideousness of our changing modes than a glance at one's own photograph taken even five years back.

In all the history of fashion there are just two costumes for women that have permanent charm—the simple drapery of the Greek maiden and the Empire gown, which was a revival of it.

Posterity Will Be Shocked.

A nose ring has as much reason for being as an ear-ring, and the anklets of the Moorish harem are not greater symbols of inferiority than a watch strapped around the leg.

The binding of the Chinese foot, the swaddling of the Indian pappoose give no graver testimony of a barbarous ignorance than the hipless corset and the Nazimova collar.

In future ages men and women will gaze at these instruments of torture preserved in museums and wonder as to what horrible crimes they were designed to punish.

They will not understand that the women of the twentieth century failed so utterly to appreciate their own beauty that they sought to make themselves attractive by distortion and disguise.

CUT MAYOR'S PAY $10,000.

Dublin Executive to Live Frugally on $8,000 a Year.

DUBLIN, Feb. 18.—The salary of Dublin's Lord Mayor elect, John J. Farrell, a newsdealer, was cut by the corporation from $18,000 to $8,000 a year. Mr. Farrell says he will close and lock the Mansion House, and will live frugally in his modest suburban home. The salary of Dublin's Lord Mayor is usually expected to be spent in charity and hospitality.

GUILD LECTURES ON FLAG.

Ex-Governor Talks to Women's Club at Amherst.

AMHERST, Feb. 18.—Ex-Governor Guild lectured this afternoon under the auspices of the Women's Club of Amherst on the subject of "Our Flag." He was introduced by Miss Hunt, the president. He illustrated his talk by small flags, giving an interesting history of the origin of flags in general and a detailed account of Old Glory.

Three performances will be given on Washington's Birthday.

Big Foresters' Initiation.

The courts of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters in Salem, Peabody, Beverly, Danvers, Marblehead, Beverly Farms and Swampscott are arranging for the holding of a class initiation to be held in Salem, during March. The exercises will be conducted by the degree staff of the high standing committee.

NALBANDIAN FREED, TALKS OF FUTURE

First Thing Man Acquitted of Killing Momjian Wanted Was a Derby Hat.

"What is the first thing you are going to do now that you are freed from the charge of murder?"

"I will buy a derby hat. They stole my derby hat in Bulgaria, so I have had to wear this cap."

So said Vahan Nalbandian when he walked from the Salem Jail at 11:05 o'clock, yesterday forenoon, a free man. He had been tried for the murder of his friend, Minas Momjian, in Lynn. He claimed that he shot Momjian accidentally. He jammed the body in a trunk and fled to Bulgaria. He was traced, brought back and tried. The jury was out twenty-one hours. It brought in a verdict of not guilty yesterday.

"I knew the truth would win," said the freed man. "I stuck to the same story from the first to the last, and I knew the jury would let me go. It was the truth that won. I feel very sorry that Momjian is dead, but it was an accident, and just as I told the jury, I am sorry, more sorry than his own relatives. He was my friend, but I thought they would kill me if I stayed here. That's why I ran away.

Goes Back to Lynn.

"I am going back to Lynn and see my friends. Then I am going to look for work.

"I have enough money for weeks without working. Money? Why, I never borrowed a cent in my life. I always had enough money. When I said in the court that I had more than $1,000, it was true.

"Just think of them saying that I killed my friend for his money when I knew that he never had much money. I don't know how much he had when I found he was dead. No, no, that was the truth. I was always honest and so I will always be."

"Did you sleep last night?"

"Well, I walked in my cell for about two hours thinking, thinking, thinking until I fell down, and then I slept all night."

"Why didn't you tell the truth in the letters you wrote back to this country when you said Momjian killed himself?"

Lied Because of Fear.

"Yes, that was a lie, but I was scared, so scared that I did not know what to do. I was sick, too. But when they came for me, then I was ready to come back. I wanted everybody to know the truth. I wanted them to know then that it was an accident.

"You don't know how I felt when I was putting poor Momjian in that trunk. It was hard work and I cried, cried and kept on crying. I was just like mad and I thought I would kill myself; but then, why should I do such a thing?

"In Bulgaria they told me to run away to Russia and I could have done that if I wanted to, but I said, 'No, it was an accident and I am ready to go back to America.' I wanted to clear myself.

"Now I am free just as I knew it. The jury believed me, but the laws are so funny. I don't understand them, but that jury believed the truth.

"Please pay my respects to the jury. They believed me because I told the truth. Momjian was a good man, too, but he is dead now and cannot tell.

"How much money have you left?"

"I have enough to do with. A few hundred dollars, and some stock brokers owe me a little money, too. The Bulgarian police took a lot of money away from me and never gave it back, but they will not keep it if I can get it.

"Those jails I don't like. They are awful things. First I stayed two months in those jails in Bulgaria, then I came over here and stayed in the Salem jail since April 4, 1910. That's a long time, you know, and since in the Salem jail I saw only two Armenian visitors.

"My uncle in Boston did not come to see me because he was afraid. I don't know why, but he is a good friend of mine."

When Nalbandian reached Lynn he exchanged two English pound pieces for American money. Then he bought the black derby hat for which he had longed. For a few days he will be a guest of Ralph Johnson, a Lynn shoe dealer, one of the witnesses at the trial.

The arrest and trial of Nalbandian cost about $5,600. About $500 was expended by a relative of the dead man in tracing Nalbandian.

SENATORS CHARGE GRAFT.

Rhode Island Legislators Talk Boldly of Political Steal.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 18.—Charges of "graft" were made by several Senators during a discussion in the Senate of a bill, which was finally passed, to allow three additional State commissions to hire clerks at a salary of $500 each. Senator McKenna (Democrat) characterized the measure as "a political steal, holding up the hands of the general treasurer in true highwayman style." Senator Johnson declared that he saw no difference between this bill and the "grafting" in connection with the Pennsylvania Capitol. "There," he said, "they charged $200 for a $20 chair; here you are paying $100 a day for a $5 clerk."

YALE DINNER BY TAFT.

President Invites His Class of '78 to the White House.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Feb. 18.—Invitations from President Taft, inviting his Yale class of 1878 to eat its annual dinner at the White House on the evening of March 4, next, have been received by members of the President's class in this city. The invitation includes ex-members of the class as well as the regular graduates, the whole number sent out, it is stated, being considerably over a hundred. The class was graduated with 131 men. Of that number ninety-eight are now living, ten of whom are resident in Connecticut.

SENATORS EULOGIZED.

Tributes Paid to Memory of Dolliver and Clay.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Eulogies of the late Senators Clay and Dolliver held the attention of the Senate this afternoon. Senators Borah, Talliaferro, Scott, Bacon, Lodge, Owen, Overman, Curtis and Bailey spoke on the life of Senator Clay, and Senator Cummins, Clapp, Collum, Culberson, Beveridge, Tillman, Lafollette, Young, Chamberlain and Gore on the career of Senator Dolliver.

Fall May Kill Campbell.

PORTSMOUTH, Feb. 18.—John Campbell, caretaker of Smuttynose Island, Isles of Shoals, is in a serious condition at the Portsmouth Hospital. Campbell, who formerly lived in Boston, is suffering from a severe scalp wound and is not expected to live. He was shovelling coal in the roundhouse of the Boston & Maine Railroad when it is said he lost his balance and fell backward from a locomotive, striking on his head.

FOSS DETERMINED ON FINANCE BOARD

Nothing but a Thorough Examination of State Expenses Will Satisfy Governor.

GOVERNOR FOSS is still after his State finance commission. Nothing short of a thorough probe of State affairs will suit him.

The Legislature got into its temporary tangle over his application for authority to hire experts to assist him in the making up of the State budget, because a number of Republicans thought it was part of a plan on his part to get a finance commission to do probing work without having to ask for additional legislative authority.

That idea—Republican dread of a real investigation—was at the bottom of most of the opposition to the Governor's demand, and many of those who voted for the almost toothless measure that was finally passed did so in the hope and belief that to give him a little more power, which really did not allow him to go very far, would shut off the State probe.

They have made a fine miscalculation, though. The Governor, in asking for experts, was simply trying to put himself in a position to carry out a Republican law. He still wants his State finance board and he is going to get it or make the Republican legislators stand up and take the consequences.

Enormous Increase in Debt.

Those who have been in and out the Executive Chamber within the last two days have learned that fact in a pretty emphatic manner, and his determination to have and belief in the need of such a probe is based in a large part on his examination of the figures given above, which show the enormous increase which has taken place in State debt and in State running expenses in the last five years.

Back of him the Governor will have in his demand Charles S. Hamlin and James H. Vahey, who were his strong rivals, and ex-Representative Walter A. Webster, Republican, who has been credited with having been the real originator of the present Boston Finance Commission.

Mr. Hamlin, in his platform, advocated not only a commission of this nature, but out of it he expected to get a State Central Purchasing Agency. The accident of politics has not changed his views on that score, and to-day he stands just as firmly as when he was campaigning for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He sees no reasonable excuse for the great growth of both debt and current expenses in departments as compared with the relatively slow increase in State income.

Webster With Governor.

Mr. Vahey takes about the same position. He would not have the State cripple any of its undertakings, but insists there is a strong distinction between liberality and rank extravagance. He would have a State overhauling by all means and has advocated a finance commission for several years.

"I sincerely trust," said Walter Webster, "that the Governor will pass forward his plans for a State finance commission. I am willing he should have all the honor, but I can honestly say that I was the first to suggest the creation of such a board. If the Republicans had taken my advice, they would have been able to do their own housecleaning.

"I advocated a board which should investigate State and city expenditures, and I argued at length trying to persuade the Republicans to accept it. I regarded it as most important, but my arguments were unheeded. To-day the demand for investigation is stronger than when I made the argument.

"It is impossible for any citizen to review the financial record of the State without being impressed with the fact that we have been spending money without much consideration of our resources.

"While Republicans on Beacon Hill have been trying to preach to Boston lessons of economy and publicity, they have been tarring us with a fine stick. Loans have been issued freely, and departmental current expenses have been multiplied at length. We have talked open contracts and such matters for Boston, and we have ignored some of the first business principles on the Hill. Commissions and sub-commissions have multiplied.

"Now what is the situation to-day? Not in comparison with ten years ago, disastrous as such a comparison would be, but with just five years ago.

"Why, in that period our net debt, deducting our sinking funds, has gone up almost $6,000,000, and our State current expense almost $4,000,000. I have simply used the round figures as being more easily remembered.

"In this period our debt has actually increased over 33 per cent, and our current expenses almost the same amount. No one will attempt to argue that the assessed valuation or the population of the State has made such a gain in that period.

Figures Tell the Truth.

"It is impossible to get away from those figures. A State which spends more money each year than its income from increasing valuation, is going to run into trouble.

"A real finance probe must take up the matter of State income. States as well as cities must get over the practice of doing work for Special Interests for nothing and that is what we are doing in a large number of cases. We are not making proper charges. The only real revenue increasing of recent years was the new inheritance tax and if the amount received from that is deducted from the total revenue receipts of 1910 it will be found that actually, there has been but small gain in the total from all other branches of State work.

"I was interested," Mr. Webster said, "in recently going over an abstract of the report of the State auditor for the year 1910 and comparing certain departmental and other expenditures with those of 1906. The figures are amazing. I jotted down this little table as showing best what I mean.

In the first column is the name of the department and then under the different years is given the total expenditures:

Divisions.	1906.	1910.
Commissions & boards	$758,470.57	$1,059,369.30
Charitable	2,844,301.08	4,079,222.16
Educational	849,471.54	1,146,82[illegible]
Reformatory, etc.	941,065.91	1,297,641.12
Agricultural	302,041.34	592,084.38

"Now what do you think of those increases? They must suggest to even the most thoughtless that we have been going along at a rate without much thought for the future. I understand also that the estimates for the present year top these totals in many instances.

"The introduction of a State Finance Commission into this field cannot but have a good effect. It will help to clear the corners up, if nothing else. I have found that, sometimes, the best intentioned men in a department, the men steeped actually in its work, reach a point where they can only see matters from their own viewpoint. They are incapable of going any further, no matter how hard they try.

PORTLAND FACTORY DESTROYED BY FIRE

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 18.—A fire that started in the box factory district to-night and for a time threatened to get away from the firemen destroyed two buildings of the J. L. Brackett box factory and did damage estimated at from $50,000 to $75,000.

How the fire originated was not learned. But when the firemen reached the scene, which was near the yards of the Boston & Maine Railroad, they saw the flames leaping through the buildings with such startling rapidity that a second alarm was quickly rung.

This alarm brought all of the fire-fighting force of the city. Because of the big fires that Portland has had within the past few years the rumor grew that the whole city was threatened and a great crowd flocked in the direction of the blaze.

The buildings that were soon aflame contained wood and machinery. The fire ate through them as though they were built of shavings. But the firemen attacked the flames from all sides and after about two hours of persistent fighting the fire was under control.

Other big buildings in the vicinity of the burning structures were threatened. Among them were factory of W. A. Allen and the building of the Maine Furniture Company.

But the firemen by their prompt and aggressive work were able to confine the blaze to the two Brackett buildings. There was no one in the burning buildings and no one was hurt.

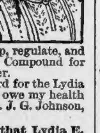
Owes Health and Happiness

to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



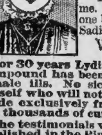
Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, your Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and dragging pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls to build them up, regulate, and make them well. My eldest daughter has taken the Compound for painful, irregular periods, and it has always helped her.

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to these wonderful medicines."—Mrs. J. G. Johnson, Scottville, Mich., R. F. D. 3.

When shown such positive and reliable proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound really does cure such cases wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering the same?

MORE GENUINE AND CONVINCING PROOF:



Elwood, Ind.—"I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. I tried doctors, and they said I could not get well without an operation. I could hardly stand the pain, but my right side was the worse. I couldn't sleep at night, and I was troubled with a weakness.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle, but I kept on until I was cured."—Mrs. Sadie Mullen, 2728 N. B. Street, Elwood, Ind.

What more proof can any one ask?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

The testimonials which are constantly being published in the Pinkham advertisements are guaranteed to be absolutely genuine, honest, and given without reward in any way whatever.

POISONER'S WIFE TO GO INTO EXILE, ALSO

Heroic Countess de Lassy Affirms Belief in Husband Just Convicted.

ST PETERSBURG, Feb. 18.—The famous Pantchenko poison trial has come to a close. The aged physician must serve ten years for killing with germs of cholera Count Vassal Boutourlin for a fee of $100,000. Count De Lassy, brother-in-law of the slain man, must go to Siberia, there to expiate, by a life toil in the Czar's mines, his part in the plot to get rid of a wealthy relative.

But, though the trial is ended, the dramatic interest is still strong. The wife of De Lassy believes him innocent, and, though she is worth a million, she swears she will accompany him in his exile.

Her devotion has aroused the city. The ... persons who heard De Lassy sentenced wonder if he can be as bad as he was painted, if a woman so exalted as the Countess Boutourlin is willing to give up a life of pleasure for a dreary existence in the tomb of the world.

Words Indicate Guilt.

De Lassy, cousin of the notorious Countess Karnowska, now in a cell in Italy for hypnotizing one unfortunate after another and finally leading one of them to do murder, accepts this sacrifice coolly. He makes no pretence of seeing in it the nobility of soul of a great woman. He says ... "At any rate I go with ... if I had confessed I would have had to go without it."

However, words give assurance that he ... guilty. Is his power over his wife so great that he has persuaded her that he is innocent in spite of his declaration and his bravada to the world?

Will this man, by the power of his mind, accept the sacrifice his cultured wife is about to make for him?

In what part of Siberia the unfortunate De Lassy and his wife will begin the long ... of work and loneliness only the prosecutors of the Czar know.

Wherever it is, it will tax to the utmost the endurance of the man and the fortitude of the woman. There is no chance of escape; there is nothing but death ahead as the deliverer from hardship. The heart of the convict is a stranger even to the charm of the short Summer. He knows neither sun nor moon. Insanity, suicide, illness, often do for the exiles what the "Little Father" will not do.

Will the wife of De Lassy wait for this end of her married life?

Will De Lassy dare to take her with him for fear of leaving her behind? Is his love for money equal to her love for him?

No drama of gold and hate and devotion had a more thrilling setting. The last act promises to be more dominant than the others.

The love of a woman promises to lift De Lassy out of the slough of his sordid soul. Before the curtain is rung down the tragedy bids fair to stir the world ... more than it has stirred it.

Great Interest in Trial.

The trial itself aroused enormous interest throughout the world, and developed some startling testimony. Prior to the beginning of the proceedings Pantchenko made a confession in which he accused De Lassy of hiring him to poison Vassili, heir to General Boutourlin's millions and brother of De Lassy's wife. The removal of Vassili would naturally mean that the General's great estate would go to his daughter.

On the witness stand Pantchenko denied the confession, and made so many erratic statements that he came to be thought practically insane. Much evidence was adduced, however, to show that he and De Lassy had intimate dealings. At the end of the trial De Lassy was quite overcome. He attempted to make a speech to the jury, but ended abruptly by saying:

"I cannot talk. I leave the fate of myself and relatives to your minds and your hearts."

Pantchenko, in an incoherent speech, said that he did not repudiate his confession, but wished to specify the degree of his guilt. He said that the question now was whether a Russian physician was capable of such a dastardly crime, and to this he proudly answered, "No." Petropovsky, he declared, wishing fame, was the ... of the poisoning story and a newspaper helped him.

De Lassy the Prime Mover.

De Lassy did exhort me to poison Boutourlin," continued Pantchenko, "and thinking that I had accidentally poisoned him, I told the magistrate so. But this confession seemed too little for him. He continually drummed into my ears, 'confess, confess,' and suggested various poisons. Finally in a weak moment I told myself that if the truth doesn't serve then I will lie. I mentioned toxin. The magistrate then said 'Now, we are going to be friends.'

JURY OF TWELVE PROMINENT BOSTON WOMEN VOTES NINE TO THREE AGAINST LAW TAXING BACHELORS

Here are the women, a majority of whom are opposed to legislation taxing single men

No legislation on Beacon Hill this session has attracted such general attention from men and women, old and young, as the proposed law to tax bachelors. The Legislature is at sea on the matter, as forecasted by the deliberations in committee. A good many people do not take the matter seriously.

When the bill is reported a spirited debate is expected. While the measure has been the subject of humorous comment, it is the cause of much serious discussion.

A bill to tax bachelors and thus induce matrimony is, of course, of keen interest to women. The Sunday AMERICAN has called a jury of twelve women to pass upon the bachelor tax proposition from the feminine standpoint. To-day the AMERICAN gives the result of this jury poll. The verdict is as follows:

Against the Bill..............................9 For the Bill..............................3

Reasons Given for Stand by Each Member on the "Bachelor" Jury.

AGAINST.

Mrs. Susan Y. Fitzgerald.
Miss Alice Stone Blackwell.
Mrs. Wirt Dexter.
Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald.
Mrs. James M. Curley.
Mrs. John L. Bates.
Mrs. Edward J. Bromberg.
Mrs. Glendower Evans.
Mrs. Sara A. Conboy.

FOR.

Miss Floretta Vining.
Dr. Anna Davis-Parker.
Dr. Riley.

Here are the reasons given by each member of the jury for voting the way she did:

Mrs. Glendower Evans, sociologist—No.

"I disapprove such a bill on the ground that it is absurd to propose such a tax."

Mrs. Wirt Dexter, society leader—No.

"I am opposed to such a bill. Any such legislation is unnecessary. I am obliged to look on the whole affair as very amusing. Such a bill as this before the Legislature is interfering with personal liberty and anything which does this cannot be advocated. You cannot compel people to marry against their will. There is no happiness in such marriages. It seems to me a very funny way to make bachelors marry. I should certainly advise some more attractive way."

Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald—No.

"I am against it. I do not see how any one can approve of this bill. It will certainly do no good. Every one in this country is free to do what he pleases along the lines here indicated. I do not think any one has the right to dictate about this matter of fining persons who do not care to marry. This so much concerns them personally that no Legislature has any inherent right to force bachelors into a state which they have not freely chosen. We can advise them. But to bring to bear any law on this subject is unjust and will not be tolerated. Marriage should not be subjected to any indirect coercion, such as this peculiar bill seems to encourage. We cannot legislate bachelors into matrimony."

Mrs. Sara A. Conboy, Business Agent Roxbury Textile Union—No.

"I am opposed to it. If the Legislature was seriously considering the advisability of enacting this measure into law, it would not argue well for the average intelligence of the men on Beacon Hill. The unmarried women of the Commonwealth do not wish to be made the subject of such a freak legislation, especially the women wage workers. A Legislature made up wholly of women would laugh such a bill out of existence. The thing not only is undesirable but it would lower the moral and religious tone of a sacred institution by making it appear as though a man regarded his marriage certificate as a kind of tax cancelation stamp. It also is impractical and impossible of being enforced. Any bachelor not wishing to pay such a tax could get two or three women friends to refuse his acknowledgedly law-evading offers of marriage. And but there—why waste time in discussing the impossible? For it seems impossible that a Massachusetts Legislature could ever be led into passing such a freak law."

Mrs. Susan Y. Fitzgerald, suffragist—No.

"I do not approve it. In my humble opinion the whole thing is very foolish, and you cannot get over feeling this way about it. Really, I do not see how this thing concerns the women. It is a man's duty to attend to this taxing of bachelors. We women do not care anything about it."

Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, editor—No.

"I do not favor any such movement as this bill implies. I suppose it is done to encourage matrimony. But no woman would care to marry a man who had been driven into matrimony in order to pay this yearly tax. Then, I cannot see how it will cover the difficulty. If men will not get married they will not. They would rather pay this stipulated sum of $5 than to incur the expense of marrying and maintaining a family. It is strange that the Legislature should tolerate any such bill as this or give it a hearing. I think that it condemns itself on its face value."

Mrs. James M. Curley, wife of Congressman-elect Curley—No.

"I am opposed. Such a bill does not appeal to me. I do not think it just. Every man has a right to get married or not. It concerns himself. I do not see how any social progress can be made through such legislation. Let us have personal freedom in these matters and we will be happier."

Mrs. John L. Bates, wife of ex-Governor Bates—No.

"I disapprove of such a bill because it is not right to try to compel a person to wed, no matter how desirable it may be for men to marry and establish homes."

Mrs. Edward J. Bromberg, wife of ex-Alderman Bromberg—No.

"I am against such a bill. You cannot induce marriage by legislation. Nevertheless, if more men would marry, they would not see so many women seeking men's means of livelihood."

Miss Floretta Vining, editor—Yes.

"I approve it. 'Pon my word, I think it would be a fine thing. Don't imagine it will ever amount to anything so far as becoming a law is concerned. But I thoroughly approve of the idea. Men are too selfish to marry. This law would help immensely in supporting the spinsters."

Dr. (Mrs.) Elizabeth A. Riley, specialist—Yes.

"Yes, I approve such a bill, of course. Bachelors should certainly be taxed. Men are bachelors because they are selfish. In fact, such selfishness should be doubly taxed."

Dr. Anna Davis-Parker, Boston Metaphysical Club—Yes.

"I am in favor of it, but this present tax of five dollars is too light. I would tax every bachelor good and heavy. Some of them would not feel a five-dollar tax. I would gauge the amount of their tax by their income. Then those who can afford to get married, but who will not, can be taxed heavily. I would make them sit up and take notice. This tax upon bachelors is one of the best reform movements that has ever come to light. It will make many bachelors think and cause them to be less selfish and more happy."

QUIGLEY'S BACHELOR TAX ENTHUSIASM EXPERIENCES CHILL

The Tax on Bachelors bill is in a bad way at the State House.

It was reported yesterday that serious differences have arisen among prominent bachelor members of the Committee on Taxation, which has the bill in charge. Representative Russell A. Wood of Cambridge, Republican Harvard man and newspaper reporter, who is conscientious and devoted to the Cause, is about to be left in the lurch by Senator Francis Xavier Quigley of Holyoke, Democrat and newspaper correspondent. Friends of Representative Wood, House Chairman of the committee, say Senator Quigley has been suddenly and seriously attacked by a rush of ice to the pedal extremities.

Senator Quigley denies the charge with some heat. He admits, however, that the bill is in danger. It was reported in the morning newspapers of Friday that the Committee had voted to report the Tax on Bachelors bill with a recommendation that it "ought to pass." This report was premature, not to say erroneous. The Committee has never taken a vote. Wood of Cambridge is with the proposition heart and soul. He supposed until yesterday that Senator Quigley was with him. Quigley has begun to back and fill.

Quigley's Only Twenty-nine.

Wood will be thirty-one next month; Senator Quigley is twenty-nine. Although both are unmarried, neither would be affected by the proposed tax on bachelors bill, which provides that every male person above the age of thirty-five, who is unmarried, shall pay a tax of $5 per annum to the city or town.

Senator Quigley explained last night at his hotel why he was ... that the Commonwealth should ... with reasonable care against unmarried youngsters of thirty-five ... He denied he ... a poll of the Ninth Hampden Senatorial District, his own, shows that ... numbers among its population 140 ... who ... the ... ought the ...

"After consulting with some of my ... on the ... Senator Quigley said, "I am almost convinced that the best thing to do with the tax on bachelors bill will be to refer it to the next General Court."

"This does not mean that personally I have 'quit' on the proposition, for I have done nothing of the kind. I told Rep. (House Chairman Wood) that I stood with him and if he needs my vote to ... the thing out of the committee he shall have it.

"But here, let me tell you something, of course you won't quote me. A young lady of my acquaintance, a Boston girl, has asked me how the bill is going to work out. She raises some perplexing questions.

"She points out that immediately the bill becomes a law every eligible bachelor will immediately begin to be besieged by spinsters, young and old. 'Now,' she says, 'suppose I decided when you pass your old law, that I shall set my cap for a Certain Party.'

"'Suppose ninety-five other girls decide to lay siege to the same bachelor. How are we going to do it? I have read the bill, and it seems to me a crude affair. Where is the provision in it that the first girl who lays claims to a bachelor shall have a free field for thirty or sixty days, that she shall file her intention at the State House ... that every other lady ... Where is the penalty ... for any other girl ...

We have on our floors about eighty pianos which have been placed with us by a number of small dealers anxious to realize at once on their investment. Among them are some new pianos, some slightly used, some quite second hand. No matter what its condition, every piano is a bargain at its price. Each instrument is plainly marked. Dealers especially invited to inspect this stock which is being sold at so low prices that it leaves an opportunity for a dealer's fat profit.

Dealers having goods to dispose of may make bids to put them in with this stock, but remember your price must be right down to the bone. Among the pianos on hand at the present time are Biddle, Newburn, Steinway, Miller, Emerson, Guild, Hallet & Davis, Hobart M. Cable and Hardman. There are also some second-hand Talking Machines and player-pianos including Pianola, Lyraphone, Angelus and Sohmer-Cecilian. We will probably not have this assortment on hand more than a few days, so come early.

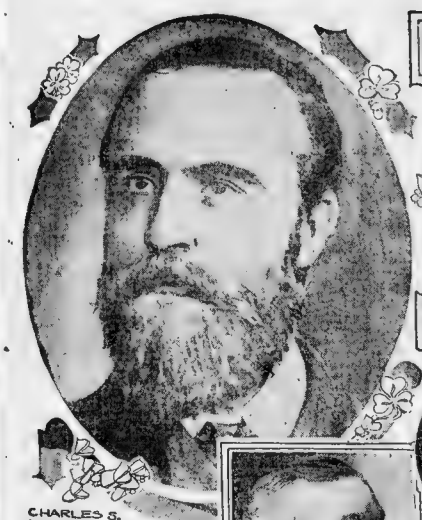
WONDERFUL STORY OF VICTORY OF IRISH PEOPLE

300 Years' War to End at Last by Complete Home Rule

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN



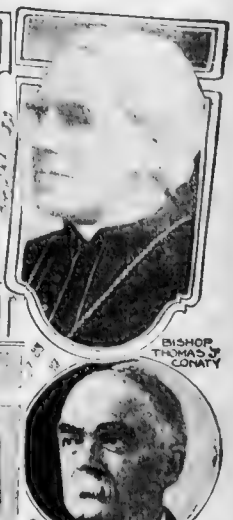
CHARLES S. PARNELL

HON. PATRICK A COLLINS

JOHN DILLON M.P.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY.

JOHN E. REDMOND, M.P.



JOSEPH DEVLIN, M.P.

BISHOP THOMAS J. CONATY

THOMAS B. FITZPATRICK

Men who welcomed Parnell to Boston thirty years ago, when he came here to plead the cause of his people; those who are leading the winning movement to-day; the old Parliament House in Dublin, which is sacred to the memories of Ireland as a nation, and men who have led in the fight for freedom. End of the long struggle now in sight.

Recent Event Most Significant Happening of the Present Generation.

THE most wonderful story in all the world to-day is that after centuries of struggle Ireland is on the verge of a new birth as a nation.

The scene which took place a few nights ago in the House of Commons when Mr. Asquith, the prime minister of Great Britain, formally declared it to be his intention and that of his cabinet to introduce a bill granting full self-government to Ireland, will be written down by the chroniclers of our times as the most significant political event that has happened in the life of the present generation.

It is almost impossible to exaggerate the importance of Mr. Asquith's statement.

It was no idle moment when the virtual ruler of the great world wide British empire rose in his place at the ministerial bench and before a house crowded with members from England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales; with ambassadors and distinguished strangers in the galleries from all the countries of the world, old and new, and in the presence of journalists representing the press of the reading world, made formal and official declaration that England, acting through her constitutional ministers, proposes to concede Ireland's right to recognition as a self-governing nation.

It was a moment well calculated to stir the blood of every child of Erin, whether at home in the ancient motherland or in any of the countries of the world where the Irish race has found a home

If They Could Have Seen.

It was such a moment as had been denied to Emmet, Wolfone, Fitzgerald, Grattan, Mitchell, Davis, Daniel O'Connell, it was the moment they and others had worked and dared and suffered for, but which was denied them by the iron decrees of human fate. It was a moment of victory for one of the oldest nations in the world whose soil is rich with the blood of martyrs, whose sufferings and sighs for freedom have led men to write undying verse and give birth to music that is sung in every country of our globe.

From the tone of Premier Asquith's speech and those of his colleagues, Mr. Birrell and Mr. Churchill, and from the spirit underlying the adress made in reply by the Irish leader, Mr. Redmond, it is as certain as anything human can be that Ireland is standing now on the very threshold of home rule.

Of course, there is vast detail to be adjusted before the momentous change, caused by the dissolution of the act of union of 1800, can go fully into effect and the machinery of the Irish legislature can be started.

The Chief Problem.

The chief problem, the task which shall cause most delay and it may be, produce no little bitterness of discussion, will be that caused by the recasting of the financial relations of Great Britain and Ireland.

This will be a mighty task, but after all it should be no heavier than that grappled with in the last ten years, when a most complicated, yet scientific, financial plan was evolved for buying out the landlords of Ireland; under the provisions of the Wyndham land purchase scheme.

There are no difficulties now in the way of Home Rule. The land question is practically settled. The university question has been disposed of to the satisfaction of all parties and sections. The local affairs of the thirty-two counties of Ireland have for some fifteen years been under the control, with the happiest results, of the county councils whose machinery is running with the utmost smoothness.

The restoration of Ireland's Parliament will not even mean delay for suitable government buildings. The old Parliament House on College Green is still in place and ready for use to-morrow. All that is necessary is for the Bank of Ireland to vacate the premises, take out its desks and counters, to make room for the nation's representatives

It is interesting to know that the old House of Lords chamber is still in precisely the same condition, as to furniture, as it was when the venal majority of the Irish peerage voted in Dublin and to merge themselves in the British Parliament at London in 1800. The fine tapestries, the heavy and richly carved oak furniture are still in place, kept in excellent repair; even the chair still stand in the exact positions given them when the decationalized lords rose and, pushing back from the table in the centre of the hall, left the chamber forever.

Grattan, Flood, Parnell.

The larger chamber, which was the Irish House of Commons, sacred to the memory of Grattan and Flood and Parnell—ancestor of Charles Stewart Parnell—has been used as the banking room of the Bank of Ireland. But very little will be required to restore it to its former character.

It is a great fact in our current history that this mighty change is coming in the destinies of Ireland. It will lead to a new life for the ancient land and to unlimited prosperity for its long suffering people. Her art and her literature will be restimulated, her commerce will flourish as it did centuries ago; best of all, the bitterness of feeling between two long estranged peoples will speedily pass away and give place to happier relations.

Ireland, as free as Australia, the Cape of Good Hope or the Transvaal, can develop her own resources and provide happy homes for treble her present population. Linked, in an imperial sense, with the powerful British empire, she has all the protection of her stronger neighbor, while reaping to the full all the benefits of her markets and her immense financial and industrial systems.

Peaceful War Begins.

A few months less than two and thirty years ago, in the year 1879, Charles Stewart Parnell put his hands to the plough for Ireland. He essayed a weighty and indeed an almost hopeless task. Crused to the earth under the weight of the most unjust and criminal system of feudal landlordism civilized humanity has ever known and utterly devoid of political hope, there was not in all Christendom a more abject race of human beings than were the people of Ireland in their own land. In that year things had come to their very worst with the country. Ireland could sink no lower in the morass of despair. The nation had touched bottom. She either had to rise and assert herself or sink out of right forever.

The emigrant ship was draining the island of its best and bravest youth of both sexes. The hills of England and of Ireland held within their walls the best manhood of the race; the country's press was muzzled into dumbness; bailiffs and sheriffs, obeying the landlord mandate to clear the people off the land and put cattle in their stead, were showering eviction notices over the face of the country with the thickness of snowflakes.—"sentences of death," Mr. Gladstone called them. The clouds that hung over Erin were indeed heavy and thick with the blackness of despair.

Efforts at Rescue.

This was the Ireland that Parnell took hold of to rescue in October, 1879, when, in company with Michael Davitt, he founded the Irish National Land League

Then was called into existence one of the mightiest political organizations the world has ever seen. The Land League sprang into full growth in a night. It crossed the oceans and brought within its fold no less a force than the united Irish race throughout the world. The organization of an entire people scattered around the globe, had never been thought of or attempted before Some years earlier, not so very many, the London Times had shrieked with ghoulish glee in a double-leaded editorial that

"The Celt is going and going with a vengeance! before many years an Irishman will be as rare on this side the Atlantic as the red Indian is on the shores of Manhattan."

What a boast! It was the most shockingly callous ever penned or uttered against any race. And the shudder of it is that its fulfilment came near being true No man or woman who knew the situation as it then prevailed will question to-day that were it not for Parnell and Davitt and the men and the forces which the Land League called into action in 1879, there would be no Irish race to-day in Ireland. Its dispersal would be a record of history.

As president of the Land League, Parnell set out on his tremendous task with a program, which, to an unarmed people seemed romantic, but hopeless.

In that program were two great essential features, the abolition of landlordism and the winning back of Ireland's national parliament. On these two, Parnell hammered away with lightning strokes, backed by the most relentless energy and determination.

"Stand by us and our policy of action and I promise you we will yet save Ireland," was the keynote of a great speech he made to 20,000 people in the Corn Exchange of the city of Cork in the autumn of 1879 "Organize branches of the Land League everywhere, fight unitedly; remember that possession is nine tenths of the law; keep a firm grip on your homesteads; our race in America and Canada and Australia will stand by you, if you show them you are standing by one another here at home Fight; don't lie down and die by the roadside as the people did in 1846; join the Land League; we will yet teach John Bull there is life left in Ireland."

This bugle call to action was nobly answered by the awakened people. From end to end of the country there was not within six months a town or hamlet or parish without its branch of the Land League. Parnell was hailed, and actually became, the "uncrowned king" of Ireland. The people, at long last, had put their backs to the wall.

Parnell's appeal to America was generously heard. He left Ireland for the United States in the Winter of 1879 He was back in Ireland in March, 1880, after a phenomenal tour of the Eastern and Middle West States and part of Canada. He brought back with him as his fighting fund some two hundred thousand good "American dollars." From that time onward the American dollar, so contemptuously sneered at by the Tory-landlord press a few weeks ago, has been the main brace of Ireland's fight for justice.

Boston Generous in Aid.

Boston was then, as now, one of the most generous cities in America to respond to the appeal from Ireland. Parnell was welcomed here by John Boyle O'Reilly, Patrick A. Collins, Father Conaty of Worcester, now bishop of Los Angeles, Judge Fallon, J. J. Hayes and a large committee of Boston citizens of the Irish race. Mayor Prince presided at a great meeting in Music Hall. Among the speakers was Wendell Phillips, who in the course of his eloquent address said:

I come here, as you have done, from a keen desire to see the man that has forced John Bull to listen. Half the battle is won when the victim forces his tyrant to listen, gains his attention and concentrates on his wrongs the thoughts of Christendom and the civilized world. It took O'Connell a quarter of a century to gain the ear of the British people and the House of Commons. Our quest, more fortunate, after a few patient but persistent years, may not yet have brought the English nation to terms, but he has at least stunned her into sobriety.

Back from America, Parnell's first task was the organization of an independent Nationalist party, to fight with him on the floor of the British House of Commons. It was important to be sure to organize the people in Ireland and abroad But that was only half the battle.

"Give me an honest, determined body of men, as my red ragims in Parliament," said the Irish leader, "and, depend upon it, if Jo Bull will not do justice to our country, we will know the reason why?"

Ireland answered by going him as his comrades in battle a group of men whose intellectual brilliancy, purity of patriotism and splendor of fighting capacity challenged and won, within a single session not only the respect and attention, but the warm admiration as well, of all thinking people throughout the world. Some of their names may be recalled now with interest—John Dillon, Thomas Sexton, Isaac O'Kelly, T. P. O'Connor, Justin M. Carthy, Joseph G. Biggar, Tom Power, John E. Redmond (the present Irish leader), Arthur O'Connor, Richard Lalor, T. D. Sullivan, Edmund Leamy, Richard Power, A. M. Sullivan, O'Gorman Mahon, J. Lysaght Finnigan, John O'Connor Power, T. M. Healy, Frank Hugh O'Donnell, and Dr. Dwyer Gray, the editor and publisher of the Freeman's Journal, the most influential newspaper in Ireland.

These were among the first group of side irregulars and gave to Parnell. Working with them as mighty organizers, but outside Parliament, were Michael Davitt, Patrick Egan, Thomas Brennan, John Ferguson Matthew Harris, Alfred Webb (one of the leading Quakers of Ireland) and Andrew Kettle.

Battle Night and Day.

Night and day the battle went on between the forces of Dublin Castle, the chief support of landlordism, and the uniting Irish party. Every resource of the government was thrown against Parnell and the Land League. Evictions by wholesale, suppression of meetings, jailing of speakers, seizure of newspapers, suspension of Habeas Corpus, every policeman a bully, every petty magistrate a village tyrant.

But Parnell and his men fought on undismayed. Presty soon the government [illegible] Parnell was arrested, as were [illegible] O'Kelly Davitt and a thousand others all respected citizens of the country The Land League was suppressed Patrick Egan, the [illegible] saving the [illegible] to set up the [illegible] ran the movement from [illegible] to the disgust of [illegible] Government.

[illegible] into Paris, with Patrick Ford of New York and the Irish World newspaper, as the well-spring of the struggle.

With the leaders in jail, there now entered on the scene to take their places for command-hand of Ireland. The Ladies' Land League was formed The gifted Fanny Parnell, sister of the imprisoned leader, wrote a poem, entitled, "Hold the Harvest," which was taken up at once as the nation's battle hymn It became to the struggling people of Ireland what the "Marseillaise" was to the peasantry of France It was a great call to the people to come up their ranks. The opening stanzas ran:

A Poem That Helped.

Now, are you men, or are you slaves,
Is tillers of the soil?
Would you be free, or evermore
The rich man's cattle toil?
The shadow on the dial hangs
That points the fatal hour—
Now hold your own! or, branded slaves,
Forever cringe and cower

Oh, by the God who made us all—
The aristocrat and the serf—
Rise up! and swear this day to hold,
Your own green Irish turf;
Rise up! and plant your feet as men
Where none you crawl as slaves,
And make your harvest fields your camps,
Or make of them your graves.

The wave of coercion swept like an ocean tide in stormy fury for more than a year. No man's liberty was safe for an hour Editors wrote with government reporters and spies looking over their shoulders Freedom of the press was made a farce. Trial by jury was a shrieking mockery. The pikes were filed till they could hold no more and soon the peace of Warsaw reigned in Ireland.

Then came the whirlwind for which Dublin Castle had sown the seed. Not only Ireland but the civilized world was thrilled with horror by the tragedy of the Phoenix Park. That 6th of May, 1882, and the occurrence which shall mark it in history, was a day of disaster for the Irish cause and of crushing depression for its leader It happened in an outward

Those who remember the fatal Sunday when the news reached London and saw the Irish leader and his colleagues that day can find consolation in the reflection that their fortunes can never see a darker or gloomier hour. The use of the word [illegible] the landlords was known to and popular with the Irish members, so he was with all sections of the House of Commons, and the kindly feeling was recognized which impelled him to offer him aid as the bearer of a new message of peace to Ireland Wherever the Irish race lived, the people read the particulars of the tragedy and the magnitude of the disaster were felt and appreciated, and in cities as distant as St. Louis, or San Francisco, or Melbourne, or Wellington, the fatal day filled Irish households with mourning

Mr Gladstone proved to the world how truly great a man he was when he boldly and frankly acknowledged that he had come to the conclusion that England's policy towards Ireland was all wrong and that it was his intention to atone for the black injustice which for so long had been practiced by England towards her sister country He went as far as to admit the right of Ire and to her own government, or Home Rule

Gladstone announced his change of policy in a memorable speech, delivered in Liverpool, the city of his birth. He had as audience a splendid gathering of citizens of that important city. Every newspaper in the English-speaking world and many Continental journals were represented at the long rows of tables reserved for the press. Six thousand people listened to the enthralling speech and cheered it to the echo.

Beside Mr Gladstone on the platform sat Henry Ward Beecher, who had just landed from New York, and on driving to the meeting and sending in his card, was received with the utmost courtesy by the chairman, Sir Arthur Forwood, and the members of the committee. Dr. Beecher was escorted to the front of the platform and given a chair next to that of the Premier.

When Mr. Gladstone concluded his great oration, in which he made a stirring ap-

"That's the greatest [illegible] for justice that was ever made, sir."

And Gladstone, taking the [illegible] hand of the eloquent American said with a grateful bow:

"Thank you, sir; you ought to be a judge."

Mr. Gladstone made a noble plea in the House of Commons for the passage of this bill for the granting of autonomy to Ireland and giving her recognition as a nation. Said he:

"Ireland asks us for a blessed oblivion of the past and also a boon for the future. And that boon for the future, unless we are much mistaken, will be a boon to us in respect [illegible] no less than a boon to her in respect of [illegible] prosperity and peace. Such is her prayer. Think, I beseech you, think well, think wisely, think not for the moment but for the years that are to come, before you reject this bill."

Eloquence in Vain.

But the old man eloquently pleaded in vain. Chamberlain, base deserter from his chief, led sixty followers into the Tory camp. The vote on the bill was:

For Home Rule for Ireland. . .313
Opposed 343

A majority of thirty in one of the largest houses that ever [illegible] in the history of Parliament. But it served.

Many things have happened since the historic division of that day. Death has called many of the leaders to the silence of [illegible]. But the great task laid down by [illegible] has been carried steadily forward by Redmond and his colleagues of the Irish party, backed by the generous and devoted support of the Irish race at home and abroad.

[illegible] tried, as in a furnace, often [illegible] circumstances of the most galling kind, John Redmond has proved to the last vestige of requirement, that he is the man of the hour.

His mind must have swept down a long lane of [illegible] Wednesday night as sitting in [illegible] he once [illegible] Prime Minister [illegible] for [illegible] Ireland and of sympathy with her cause. The voice of the teller as he announced the figures must [illegible] as music in Redmond's ears:

WILLIAM T. STEAD NOT OPTIMISTIC, BUT HE IS STILL HOPEFUL

By WILLIAM T. STEAD

LONDON, Feb. 18.—It is extraordinary how blind some politicians can be when confronted with a situation which they dislike. On Wednesday night [illegible] assured me confidentially that the government would not be able to defeat [illegible] Home Rule amendment by more [illegible] votes. Within a [illegible] of [illegible] was rejected by a majority of 113 [illegible]. Unionists, moreover, definitely pledge themselves to make the Home Rule bill the first order of the day at [illegible].

If the veto bill is [illegible] Home Rule bill will [illegible] and rejected by the [illegible] introduced in 1913 [illegible] rejected by the [illegible] introduced in [illegible] ever the [illegible] bill ought to [illegible] before New Year [illegible].

Fight on the Bill.

This [illegible] the Unionists [illegible] matter end. It is [illegible] of the veto bill will [illegible] majority that they [illegible] compromise [illegible] reconcile [illegible] opposition [illegible] Royal [illegible] which would sit this Autumn [illegible] for the purpose of enabling the Irish nation to discuss and decide what kind of Home Rule it desires.

If Ireland wants Home Rule and Irishmen are fit to govern Ireland under Home Rule they must be fit to define the nature of the constitutional instrument under which they will be ready to undertake the responsibility of governing their own country, but strangely enough this seems to be the last thing the Irish leaders seem to desire.

This is due to a fatal weakness which has been engendered by a century of English rule and Irish faction. I [illegible] this idea to an eminent minister who had himself taken part in framing a Home Rule bill. He listened sympathetically enough, but when I said I had not yet submitted the proposal to Redmond and Dillon he replied:

"They'll see you damned before they'll accept it."

There is likely to be a struggle over this, the Irish insisting that the English, Scotch and Welsh cabinet shall frame a Home Rule bill for Ireland, while the English, Welsh and Scotch will insist in the first instance that the Irish will tell us what they want.

A Curious Contradition.

It is a curious Irish situation, the natural rolls being reversed. When Gladstone introduced his Home Rule bill, Parnell agreed that Ireland should contribute to the Imperial Exchequer. To-day Ireland pays nothing for the Imperial services, pays nothing to the National debt and in addition receives an annual subsidy of $12,500,000.

The problem before the Irish leaders is simply this: Under Home Rule is Ireland to be subsidized from Westminster or is she to pay her own way out of her own resources? Redmond and Dillon want somebody else but themselves to face the responsibility of formulating a definite answer to that question.

It is a suggestive fact that in Gladstone's time Home Rule was advocated by those who dislike the Empire, whereas to-day Home Rule is advocated chiefly because of the effect this is likely to have in strengthening the Empire. Home Rule is welcomed by Englishmen, because of their hope and belief that if Home Rule were granted it would be possible to draw still closer the ties that unite Britain and the United States. Roosevelt told King George bluntly that until Home Rule is conceded there would always be the obstacles of fraternal reunion between the Empire and the Republic.

Painter of Royalty So Charmed with Boston That She Will Pay a Return Visit.

By GEORGE H. GORDON.

WITH very definite ideas about Boston as a city, its society, its museums, libraries and what may be due for all, Her Highness, the Princess Lwoff Parlaghy, will return to-morrow morning to her work in New York.

For nearly a week this interesting, [illegible], vivacious artist, with far [illegible] than is sometimes associated by an overnight American [illegible] has been at the Hotel Lenox. True, she is accompanied by her confidential friend and adviser, the infinitely patient, diplomatic, considerate Herr Friedrich Delius; her physician, the courtly Dr. Herr [illegible] Strebel; a stalwart handsome young [illegible] bodyguard; a footman clad in [illegible] gorgeous raiment than ever Solomon [illegible] his glory; and a [illegible].

[illegible] the last member of her [illegible] the most assertive by far and [illegible] than the Princess herself in asserting [illegible] prerogatives, is her fuzzy [illegible] of a poodle, Koh-i-noor, and before he submits to an undisturbed visit to his mistress he makes a very thorough inspection of the stranger.

Princess and Queen, Too.

"We are here for a short, quiet visit," explained Herr Delius to an AMERICAN reporter. "The Princess was advised to visit Boston by Professor Muensterberg, a close friend, and Joseph H. Choate, whose portrait she has just presented to the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

"We do not like display and do all we can to avoid it. We have a few rooms here in the hotel and have only such servants as are indispensable. The Princess has only one dread, and that is the fear that the newspapers will not treat her seriously. She cannot understand why they want to know so much about her—what she wears, what she eats, whom she [illegible]."

Her Serene Highness is a Russian Princess. She married Prince Lwoff in Prague in 1895 and she divorced him in 1903. Although taking precedence as a princess at the court of the Czar, Herr Delius says Her Highness thinks far less of this rank as an hereditary aristocrat than the one she has achieved through her own effort—that of "La Reine des Portraitistes," or "The Queen of Portrait Artists," as she is acclaimed in the realm of art.

Painted a Portrait at Five.

The Princess Lwoff (pronounced la-vuff) has painted more than two hundred portraits of European royalties and prominent men and women in Europe and this country. She has made hundreds of minor portraits and has painted some flowers.

Less than thirty-five years of age now, she has been at work since she produced her first painting in oils at the age of five—as great an achievement as art has ever known. She was but thirteen when she startled Europe with her famous portrait of Kossuth exhibited in Turin.

Because she has been for more than twenty-five years acknowledged as a great portrait painter and for two decades the accepted queen of them all, many believe the Princess to be a woman much older than she is.

The Princess is a petite blonde, with eyes which can be very serious or quickly sparkling, with the hands of a Duse, with the clearest of complexions.

She has volumes of parchments conferring orders of merit by the royalties she has painted. The latest addition to this collection is a beautifully illuminated testimonial from the trustees of the American Museum of Natural History in New York accepting her portrait of Joseph H. Choate, former Ambassador to Great Britain, which she painted as a gift. The trustees have made her a patron of that institution.

Will Return to Boston.

"Fortunately money is not my object. I can pick my subjects. My one idea is art. I live for it," said Princess Lwoff.

"I have had a very interesting week in Boston. I shall surely return. It is so nice, so quiet here. I could work much better here than in New York. There everything is so noisy, so full of hurry. I can concentrate much better here. If I return to work here I shall probably have my own house to work in. That is much better than trying to work in a [illegible] or even your beautiful Museum of Art."

The Princess was much interested in the recent criticism of the Fraulein Stolle of Berlin who [illegible] Boston twenty years behind other American cities in its art.

"I do not know Fraulein Stolle," said the Princess. "I have visited your beautiful Museum of Art. Director Fairbanks showed me some wonderful things. It is not important that a museum should be crowded full of objects of art. It is far, infinitely better, that you should be discriminating and make sure that each object is the very best. I saw in your museum one very wonderful statue of an Egyptian King more than 5,000 years old. It is as fine as anything in Europe."

"What would you suggest as most needed for our Museum of Art?" [illegible] asked.

Patron Like Morgan Needed.

"Money, money, money," she said. "Nothing is so necessary as money. You must have one great, rich man, like Mr. Morgan of New York, who has money, who will spend it, who knows art and loves it. You must have many such men for your trustees."

"How does the Boston Museum of Art compare with your continental museums?"

"Oh, that is impossible to say," she said. "Our museums are complete—full. Yours is young, your country is young. How can a child do the work of a man? Is it not so?"

The Princess said that although she had spent several hours in the Museum of Art she would surely go back again, and when she comes to Boston next time make many visits.

"I think your museum ought to have more portraits," she said. "A collection of portraits by eminent artists is very essential in a museum of the first class."

The Princess could hardly express herself when she talked of the public library and the adjectives of the six languages which she speaks were insufficient to express her admiration.

"It is magnificent," she said. "It is a beautiful, superb palace. Any capital in Europe would be proud of it. Its collections, their arrangement are perfect. The building is incomparably beautiful and the wonderful mural decorations are finer than I can describe. We know of your public library in Europe, very well indeed."

Boston From a Motor Car.

Asked what she thought of Boston as a whole, the Princess said that she had seen it only from the window of her motor car.

"I hesitate to say anything which may be construed as unfriendly," she said when told that her frank opinion would be appreciated.

"Boston is like New York," she continued. "To Europeans it has an unfinished appearance. It is so mixed up. You see we are accustomed in Europe to a national style of architecture. In Berlin everything is German, whether old or new style. In Italy it is Italian, in France French. National pride would not permit that indiscriminate mixing of styles one sees in American cities.

"Here one finds a beautiful specimen of the renaissance and it may be in between two great high buildings. Then there is an empty lot and then some other style is seen. You must have a commission which shall plan your buildings and regulate them.

"In Europe, in Berlin and Paris our most beautiful cities, it was only after years and years of planning that we got such splendid results. You can do that in Boston."

Half the European art world changed its opinion any on the status of American art."

She Quotes Emerson.

"We in Europe realize more and more that the American people have set out to get the best," she said. "They have set a very high ideal. It is your own philosopher Emerson who said 'Hitch your wagon to a star.' That is it. This is true of Boston. I have seen much of it in the last few days. Everywhere I have been charmed by the cultured men and women who have been so gracious to me. One would hardly find their superiors in the salons and courts of Europe.

"To be sure it is not that we think all rich Americans are like this. You have your quick rich as we do in Europe. One may get rich quick, but one does not get culture as easily. Is it not so?"

Nothing more interested the Princess while in Boston than the great work of the New England Anti-Vivisection Society, which is conducting a great campaign from Tremont Temple against vivisection.

"It is the greatest blasphemy against God and his creatures," said the Princess, flushing with indignation. "Even if science learns from the suffering of these poor tortured animals what is learned is gained in the wrong way. The human race cannot be benefited by it. God will not give us success if we search his mysteries by cruelty to the helpless animals."

Loves Every Living Thing.

The Princess said she will present a portrait of some famous dog to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in New York and would like to do something for the New England Anti-Vivisectionists. General James Grant Wilson wrote to her yesterday asking what type of a dog she preferred to paint.

"I cannot say what kind of a dog I shall select," she said. "I would like to paint them all. I love every living thing."

The great portrait painter said that often she had wept herself to sleep as she thought of how the dogs were tortured in hospitals.

"And children," she said. "I have seen so much. Ah it is too pitiful. If I could only do something to remove so much suffering."

She said that the happiest day she had ever had was on Christmas a year ago at sea, when she had spent $2,000 for gifts and Christmas trees for the children of the steerage on their way to this country.

The Princess has her principal seat at the Castle St. Jean, known as the Pearl of the Riviera. She also has a place at Nice. She is a terrific worker even from the strenuous American viewpoint.

"I will make a portrait after seven or eight sittings. Two weeks and it is done," she said. "I work very fast. Once I start, once I get my inspiration I work night and day."

A Portrait of Markham.

The broad sympathy of this interesting woman, the friend of royalties without number who has painted nine different portraits for Kaiser William and several of the Crown Prince, his son, is shown by the first portrait she made in this country.

It is a wonderful study of Edwin Markham, the poet.

"He was one of the only two I knew when I first came to America," she said. "I met him the next day and at once I decided to make his portrait. He has a very wonderful face, so kind, so expressive. He is the dearest, kindest man I know."

The Princess said that Markham was more and more appreciated in Europe, where his great poem of "The Man With the Hoe," inspired by Millet's great painting of the same title, is regarded as a masterpiece.

The Princess on Friday attended a reception at the home of Chickering Williams in Mt. Vernon street, when she displayed her portrait of Mr. Williams, the only one yet made of a Boston man. It was unanimously declared by the sixty Back Bay society people present as a wonderfully well executed likeness.

During her stay at the Lenox, Mrs. Jack Gardner has sent daily bouquets of exquisite orchids to her friend, the Princess, and gives a reception for her at her Back Bay palace this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The Princess has painted portraits of Kaiser William, the Crown Prince of Germany, Von Caprivi, Bismarck, the King of Saxony, the King of Servia, several grand dukes and their duchesses, premiers of almost every European state and the Archbishop of Posen, Mgr. Stablewsky.

She is the only woman member of the famous Berlin Beaux Arts and has many decorations, including the great gold and silver medals from the Pope.

Decorated by a King.

The princess is a member of the Orthodox Greek Church. She is decorated as The Bearer of the Order of Holy Sawa by King Peter of Servia, is an officer of the French Academy and a life member of the Berlin Academy.

She has been described recently in an authoritative art publication in Paris as "a royal painter of royalties," and is acknowledged to have painted more royalties than any artist now living.

She was born in Hydu Dorog, Hungary. Her family name is Parlaghy. Her father was a high officer in the army of Emperor Franz Joseph and later in his cabinet. She says she inherits her talent from her father and grandfather.

Besides being a great painter she is almost as well known for her musical talent as a pianist and a great singer.

Napoleon once heard the Duchess of Dantzic lamenting that she had no ancestry. She has been a washerwoman.

"Never mind," he told her. "Any woman may have an ancestor, but it takes a real woman to be an ancestor."

Of the Princess Lwoff Parlaghy it may be said in truth that she is the woman with an ancestry and while proud of that fact thinks far more of her own achievement, her right to be regarded as an ancestor.

MIDSHIPMEN'S RELIGIONS.

Episcopalians Have Biggest Percentage at Annapolis.

The religious census of the present fourth class at the United States Naval Academy presents curious facts.

Out of 200 members of the class—the whole class numbering 213—147, a slight fraction over 70 per cent, are members of churches. The order of the denominational strength follows:

Protestant Episcopalians, 72; Methodist Episcopal, 34; Presbyterians, 31; Roman Catholic, 24; Baptist, 15; Congregationalist, 7; Lutheran, 5; Disciples, 5; Jewish, 4; United Brethren, 2; other denominations, 1 each.

The Episcopalians among the midshipmen always number 30 per cent. of a class and so of the entire school. It is incomprehensible that the Episcopalians should always have so high a percentage and the Congregationalists so low. Some think that it is because Episcopalians are more attracted by the order and ceremony of military life. "No one has been able to solve this," says Chaplain Henry H. Clark, U. S. N., in this week's issue of Zion's Herald, published in Boston.

OLD MERCHANT HONORED.

Business Friends Will Give Mr. King of Holyoke a Banquet.

HOLYOKE, Feb. 18.—Fifteen old-time business and personal friends will give Samuel King, a veteran merchant, a banquet on Wednesday evening in honor of his long commercial career. He has kept store in Holyoke for more than forty-five years without a break. He was located at High and Hampden streets during the whole period up to five years ago when he moved his business to its present premises. Continuity considered he is the oldest merchant in this city.

If the Birthrate Increases They Should Care for Surplus, Says Prof. Morse.

DR. CHARLES W. ELIOT, president emeritus of Harvard, and those who have joined him in advocating large families are not receiving the unanimous approval of those who have given much time and attention to the medical, educational and sociological sides of this nature problem.

Dr. John Lovett Morse, assistant professor of pediatrics at Harvard, an eminent consulting physician who makes a specialty of children and has unequaled opportunities to study them in every phase from the North End slums to the Back Bay nurseries, is emphatic in his views when he says:

"If the leaders of our society who mould public opinion, advocate unlimited families and if they are taken at their word and the birth rate is increased, it seems to me that the men and women who are such leaders are responsible in a very real sense and they must make provision to care for these additional children.

"What do these advocates of big families propose to do with these children when they do come into the world? The present very high infant death rate proves beyond dispute that children are born every day for whom there is no possible chance of survival under existing conditions. Ignorance or poverty on the part of parents may be to blame. It may be both. We are diminishing the death rate slowly but surely by educating fathers and mothers, not to prevent the birth of children, but to take care of them properly when they arrive."

No Benefit in Numbers.

Dr. Morse denies that he ever made the statement that families ought to be limited in the number of children. "What I did say," Dr. Morse explained in an interview given the Sunday AMERICAN, "was this:

"I never could see why people should want to bring children into the world when they know very well in advance that they could not possibly give them proper care after they came.

"I also said that I do not see any gain to a family or State by mere increases in numbers after the family and the State reach that point where there is a comfortable subsistence for those already in existence. It seems to me that if a country has, say, ten millions of population and a given amount of wealth, that nothing can be gained by merely doubling that number, even though you are able also to double the resources—a very unlikely thing."

Dr. Morse has very definite views on the size of the ideal family and feels the responsibility of the parents, but he said he had never advocated limiting poor families in the number of their children.

"I realize that this is a delicate subject to discuss," he said, "and I am liable to be easily misunderstood. It is really too serious and sacred a matter for brief treatment in the limited space of a newspaper.

"I do not know that Dr. Eliot has said that he believes in large families. I am sure he did not say anything like that at the Twentieth Century Club gathering. Of course he may have said so since."

Knows Child Problem.

Dr. Morse gives a large part of his time to hospital practice, an extremely valuable and necessary work for a consulting physician who ranks as high as he and whose pay patients are almost wholly of the more fortunate classes. This brings him into constant contact with the child problem as one finds it in the lower social strata. He made this significant statement:

"There is no doubt that the tendency is all in the direction of State supervision of all the conditions surrounding child life. Yet we are hardly ready to step into the homes and remove every child which is suffering there from lack of food, proper medical care, proper clothing, housing, etc.

"Still we do exactly that for our animals. If a man ill-treats a horse or a cow, starves it or makes it suffer from exposure, the State instantly steps in and either compels him to be more humane or takes the animal from him.

"Yet how different with children! It may be that our legislators see a valuable property right in animals and find it good public policy to protect them for that reason. It seems to me, however, that the welfare and practical conservation of helpless child life is at least of equal importance."

"Would you advocate State interference or perhaps that the State should take such children from their parents?" he was asked.

Dr. Morse replied that he is not a Socialist and such interference is Socialism of the most extreme sort. Also he thinks it altogether impractical in the present state of public opinion.

"Does the high rate of infant mortality vindicate the theory of Malthus that only the fittest survive, in your opinion?" he was asked.

"Apparently Equally Fit."

"I hardly care to think so," he said, "for when children are born they are apparently about equally fit and have an equal right to survive. There is just as much likelihood of the third child or the fourth or the tenth surviving as the first or second if proper conditions prevail.

"The fact is that children are coming into the world in vast numbers; that they die as infants at an appalling rate. I realize how impossible, all things considered, it is to regulate their coming. That, it seems to me, is beyond human power in the present social, ethical, moral, economic condition of the great mass of the people. Too many parents have children on what is just an animal plane. That is the problem. Can we interfere in any practical way with such a condition?

"The matter of keeping the children alive once they come into the world is a different problem.

Limiting of Families.

"By education of parents, many child lives now sacrificed to ignorance will be saved. By the improvement of the economic status of the very poor many other children will be kept alive. In the higher walks of life, say among the middle class, parents have perhaps deemed it better to limit families. Their wish seems to be that such property as they have shall be sufficient when distributed to give each child a better start in life than either parent had.

"Among the very rich where neither ignorance or poverty have anything to do with the size of families social obligations and the pursuit of the pleasures of that social sphere has kept families small. All these conditions are slowly improving.

"I have not advocated the limiting of families, do not do so now. But I repeat that I cannot see why anybody should want to bring a child into the world if it is absolutely certain before hand that there is no room for it when it gets here."

"25,000 Idle in Denver."

MARLBORO, Feb. 18.—People in this city who have been thinking of migrating to the West to benefit their fortunes are having other thoughts since Henry Connors, who was a blacksmith here until he went west, has described the industrial situation in Colorado. Now he is working on a train running between Denver and Leadville, and as has written to a friend in Marlboro:

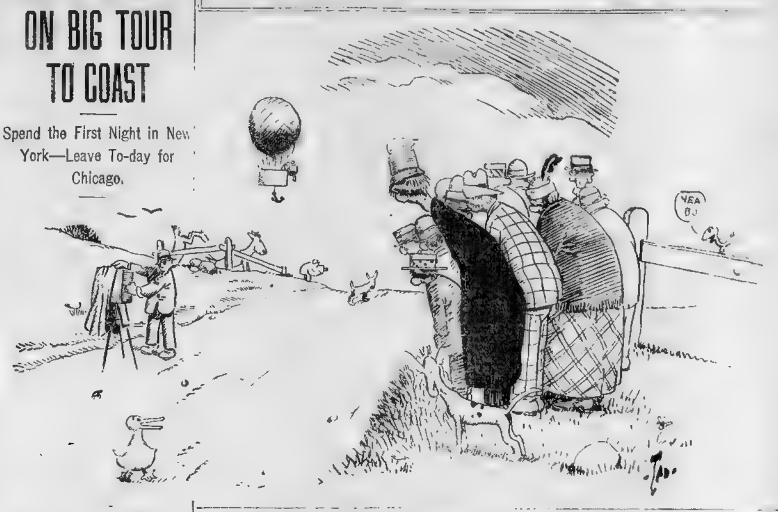
"About 25,000 are walking the streets of Denver with nothing to do."

BOSTON RED SOX START ON THE 1911 PENNANT HUNT

TAYLOR MEN OFF ON BIG TOUR TO COAST

Spend the First Night in New York—Leave To-day for Chicago.

When Those Red Sox Hit the Trail - - By Tad



By MERTON E. BURKE.

With the "Red Sox" on Coast-to-Coast Tour.

Merton E. Burke.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—With the most luxurious special baseball train that ever crossed the continent at their disposal the Boston "Red Sox" are en route for the Pacific Coast, on what is to be the longest trip ever attempted by a baseball team. "And if this trip doesn't bring together the finest team on earth," said President John I. Taylor, "it won't be from lack of inspiration. After this tour the boys ought to be all of one mind and in the finest fettle."

That's the horse-sense of it. Psychology our good friend Munsterberg, of Harvard might call it, but John I. won't plead to such a charge.

This little two-months' jaunt of 9,000 miles more or less is Mr. Taylor's little hand-out to the squad in the way of Spring entertainment.

Give 'Em Something New.

He wanted to give the players something new. For years they have been going to the Hot Springs and Southern training camps, and it has become sort of a bore to the old timers. Hence, he is trying out the experiment of locating the training grounds in the Golden State of California, "where the fragrance of the orange blossoms mingles with the cooling breezes from the snow-capped peaks and the warm tingling salt-laden zephyrs of the Pacific. . . . In the shadows of the romantic missions practice will be carried on and in California's energizing air, the players composing the Boston Red Sox will receive the impetus that will carry the team through the season's nerve-trying battles for the American League pennant during 1911." So says the Red Sox special guide book.

After that if the whole team doesn't buy up the orange groves out in California and settle down for life out there, he ought to bring back a crew who will be pretty well satisfied to dig in and work. "All little pals together," as Bunk would put it.

The enthusiasm displayed by the Boston contingent, who started from the South Station yesterday noon would indicate that if there is any need of inspiration to stir up the boys to a Summer of winning ball, Taylor has hit the right pace.

To-night the squad slept—perhaps—at the Marlboro, but will be up bright and early in the morning for the start over the Baltimore & Ohio, through Philadelphia, Washington and Pittsburg to Chicago. From there on the route leads over the Rock Island's "Sunny Southern" route through Kansas City, Topeka, Tucumcari, El Paso (where they have been playing at war a la Massachusetts militia) up through the wonderful Imperial Valley, over the Salton Sea and into Los Angeles.

Arrive Hungry in New York.

The squad which left Boston this noon, augmented by a couple of recruits who boarded the train at Providence, arrived at the Marlborough shortly after 6 o'clock to-night, all as hungry as a half-starved college athletic team. In half a dozen minutes they were seated before a dinner prepared strictly in accordance with the stipulations of Trainer Charlie Green, but of variety to tempt an epicure—blue points, olives, radishes, consomme, guinea chicken, spaghetti, asparagus tips, sugar-cured ham and all the rest that goes to make life worth living.

When the Boston delegation arrived, Pitcher Joe Wood was on the steps to greet the boys and open up Broadway for them. The trip over was enlivened by considerable old-home-week welcome-to-city joviality. A recruit was introduced quite unexpectedly. He is one of Bill Carrigan's proteges. Bill found him up in Hebron, Maine, wherever that is. He's a long drawn out, down-east Yankee and his name is W. E. Sawyer. Carrigan says he's twenty-one and no one doubts his word. Mr. Sawyer pitches some.

The old-timers so far gathered in have been aroused from their usual blase attitude by the length and variety of the trip which President Taylor has provided. Tom Madden, Roxbury's only catcher, allows that he can stand it if the rest can.

"I played in 'Frisco through the rainy season, and didn't die, so here's hoping," he said to-day.

Tom's eye is keen and a look at him convinces one that little will get by him. Carrigan is ready for business. "I'll try first, if Mr. Taylor wants me to, but I've got a hunch I'll stay behind the bat," he confided to-night.

Hugh Bradley is up and coming and there seems no reason why he shouldn't hold down first. He broke loose in song shortly after striking New London and has been at it most ever since. He appears happy.

Jim O'Brien of Brockton, who also [illegible] some [illegible] hard training, is expecting a gold watch which the Plymouth county friends unloaded on him last night. little training ought to put him in condition to deliver the goods. Speaking of the California end of the trip, and possible hot weather, he said:

"I pitched a game at Evanston when it was 110 above, so I guess it'll be all right."

Youngsters Are Enthusiastic.

Martin McHale, from Orono, who has played with the Brockton team, Chris Mahoney, who was with Boston last season, and W. S. Gardner, who caverted between Lynn and Boston for a few years, seem to have the energetic young blood which the team needs. They are developing fast.

Young Harold Janvrin of Boston has high aspirations for third. He would not take kindly to a seasoning up year at Sacramento. If he doesn't hang on he expects to go to Brown University. Of course, the Newburyport boy, who played on the [illegible] last year, is prepared for an [illegible] there. Ray Collins did not join the Boston squad, as planned, but will make the trip to Chicago direct.

Trainer Charlie Green, we couldn't get along without him, has already [illegible] to worry about the food the boys will get en route. Charles [illegible] no [illegible] dining car fare, but tackled a [illegible] on the quiet at New London. Between Bradley's singing, "Nif Ced" McGreevy's stories of swimming through the ice at L street, and Joe Burns's clog dances the party has been very well entertained up to date.

Arthur Cooper, who is along to manage the Southern squad, was presented with cuff links and a stock of neckties on his departure from Boston by some of his good friends.

In the absence of President John I. Taylor, who was detained at home, but who hopes to meet us at Chicago, Eddie Rielly officiated as host, in de luxe fashion.

"Some class to this layout," remarked Carrigan as he stepped from his private car at the Grand Central station into a taxicab while a brace of porters wrestled with his luggage.

That's the sentiment of the whole outfit. If the style this trip is putting on doesn't go to the boys' heads, a classy team ought to be knocked together before we get back.

The report has gone forth that there is some disention in the ranks. This is a matter which may as well be put right here as anywhere else.

When President Taylor was sending out his contracts this year he decided upon a new system of reward of merit, not unlike that used in many other instances. He named a minimum salary and a certain bonus for achievement and number of games played.

Some of the team did not take well to that kind of a proposition at first, and debated at length on the subject into the ears of the baseball writers with the result that considerable publicity was given the matter.

Old Favorites on the Job.

But a glance around the circle to-night showed all the old favorites on the job.

It was a mere matter of business, and on the whole ought to work for the benefit of the team.

Everybody's happy.

Even "Bill" Carrigan, who held out to the last just to see what would happen, is well satisfied.

He has already tried to induce the youngsters to sing "C-a double-r-i-g-a-n."

"C-a double-r-i-g-a-n!" Reminds you of Summer, doesn't it? Somehow there's a certain catch to that. It's an old one, but it still hangs on.

Carrigan is on the job. He's ready to tackle that much-debated first base proposition if the powers wish. But the indications are that he'll be in his old position behind the bat.

First base will take care of itself when the time comes. Bradley, Hugh B., has already been tried out there and is satisfactory to John I.

And Thoney must not be overlooked. I have it from Jack that he is in better trim than two years ago.

"I have trained all Winter and am in condition to tackle big game at a minute's notice," he says. "I've hiked cross-country in all sorts of weather and hit the wood pile most awful wallops down in Kentucky, and I'm [illegible] up at [illegible] Maine. I'm ready to take first [illegible]."

A few days will [illegible] the required goods he will have preference for first, and Bradley will join the catching squad. There'll be some battle for that base job, too.

Taylor Predicts a Good Season

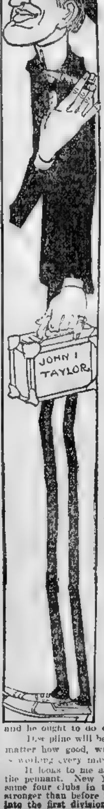
Red Sox Owner on Coast Trip

Declares the Boston Americans Will Start 1911 in Better Condition Than Ever.

President John I. Taylor of the Boston American Baseball Club takes a hopeful view of the long Pacific coast training trip, and believes that his team will start the 1911 season in better condition than ever before. His reasons for this are given in the following story written by him expressly for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN on the eve of the departure for the coast.

By JOHN I. TAYLOR.



A TRIP across the continent is certainly a long way to go for a training trip, but the delightful climate, the beautiful scenery and natural wonders of California will more than repay us for the long ride, the trouble and the expense.

California baseball fans are always glad to extend a hearty welcome to a good major league baseball club. This takes care first, of the expense. They have Sunday baseball in a majority of the Pacific coast cities, and with the popularity already attained by the club we feel sure that a handsome return for the money we expend in making the trip will be given us.

Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, has taken his team to the coast for two years, and has always had a successful trip.

I see no reason why the Red Sox should not have the same and be in perfect physical condition for the opening of the season, barring accidents which may happen to any club.

The Red Sox outfield is certainly the best in the country as found at present. Two new men, Riggert and Perry, will strengthen it still more.

Infield Looks Good to Him.

The infield, in spite of the absence of Jake Stahl, looks good to me. Of course I would like to have Stahl with the club, but I consider Bradley a fine first baseman, and if played regularly will undoubtedly hit for .275 or better. He is not a clean-up hitter like Stahl, but he is a less erratic hitter.

At second base Larry Gardner ought to have a better year than last. He has had [illegible] experience, and is now qualified to go in and [illegible] as the best of them.

At short it is needless to say [illegible] Wagner, except that he is one of the greatest men that ever [illegible] in any sport. He will time and [illegible] go in to his position when he ought to be on the bench because of injuries that would keep many a ball player in bed.

At third either Purtell or Engle can fill the bill. Engle is a much harder hitter, but Purtell a much better fielder. The question of which man will play third base regularly will be decided by Manager Donovan on the Spring training trip. It means hard work for both of them and the best man will get the place.

The Red Sox may be weak in the box, but we have a lot of new men with corking minor league records. At present we are doing everything possible to [illegible] consistent pitchers. Certain members of the present staff may do better work next year. If they do not they will be traded or sold and new men given a chance.

Doubtful Behind the Bat.

Behind the bat Boston looks bad, but Carrigan may have another year like 1909, in which case it will help a lot, and he will not be overworked. He is one of the hardest workers that ever played ball, and is fighting every minute of the game. I hope he comes back, and certainly think he will.

Kleinow caught good ball, but did not hit. He will have to hustle a little more this year and make good or go. This is no secret, as he has been told how matters stand.

Madden [illegible] less this Spring than he [illegible] the trip last [illegible] crazy [illegible] [illegible] down [illegible] there. He [illegible] possessor of a $15 rubber shirt, which may help [illegible].

I have four new young catchers, and [illegible] at least two good men out of the four. New catchers will be given a chance this year as they never have before.

As to Manager Donovan, I have every confidence in the world in him. He is liked by everyone who knows him, and he ought to do even better work this year than in the past.

[illegible] pline will be more rigidly enforced than in former years, and no man, no matter how good, will stay with the team unless he takes care of [illegible] working every minute for the club's [illegible].

It looks to me as if Philadelphia [illegible] the club to [illegible] the pennant. New York and Detroit may be dangerous, but I should pick the same four clubs in the first division as last year, with Cleveland and Chicago stronger than before in spots and with a much better chance to fight their way into the first division.

FANS GIVE A SEND-OFF

Johnny Fitz and Charley Mellen Go, Too, but Play for Second Place at the Station.

By ELIAS McQUAID.

THERE was everything about the departure of the Red Sox yesterday [illegible] [illegible] to indicate that Mr. John I. Taylor's boys are going to bring home the bacon.

The sun came out.

The fog turned out.

George H. Johnson, P. E. R., B. P. O. E., came down to give the squad his blessing.

The train got away on time.

Originally there were eight coaches on the track. One of them was left behind. The engineer struck seven, said "Bill" Cahill, who believes in lucky signs.

And the Greatest of These Was—

Altogether it was a great day in the South Station. [illegible] F. Fitzgerald went away [illegible] Red Sox went away [illegible] Charles S. Mellen went away [illegible] So far as the great [illegible] appeared to be concerned, the [illegible] of these were the Red Sox.

The platform was crowded with baseball enthusiasts as Mr. Mellen elbowed his way through the gates at Track 16 and pushed along the platform to the Knickerbocker Limited.

Mr. Mellen had a hard time of it "making" his car. Not once on his way through he [illegible] to see what all this fuss was about. He seemed to be [illegible] The morning papers told of [illegible] of the Rutland Rail [illegible]

It was worth going to the South Station [illegible] to see Harold Janvrin's smile. Harold is Mr. Taylor's latest find. He is not yet twenty years old. [illegible] fans who came down to the station to [illegible] felt like kicking [illegible] the entire team wasn't there [illegible] fans. It was carefully explained to them that a [illegible] of players will join the party in New York at 7 o'clock this morning, and that the [illegible] squad will board the special in [illegible] to-morrow night for the big trip over the Rock Island and the Santa Fe to Los Angeles.

The only novelty affected by anybody was "Tommy" Madden's fifteen-dollar rubber shirt. There was a good deal of talk about this rubber shirt, but nobody saw it except John I. Taylor and John I. merely took a peek at a piece of it about the size of a silver dollar.

Mr. Madden's rubber shirt is not an affectation. There is little style to Tommy: he has been "reducing." Part of his ordeal has been the wearing of the rubber shirt. He showed it to John I. [illegible] not for publication but as an evidence of good faith.

While all that John Treanor had to do was to get in the picture, and look after his $10 suit case, the local photographers were as busy as nailers, getting the tourists out of the Taylor auto trucks to pose for a group picture. By E. V. B. PARKE.

CORNELL defeated the Dartmouth seven last evening, 5 to 1, in a game which, from start to finish, was one of the fastest and hardest played struggles seen at the Arena for a long time.

By defeating the Hanoverians, Cornell clinched the intercollegiate hockey championship title, having gone through the season with a clean slate in the series.

Dartmouth's fight against the Ithacans was a surprise to everyone, the playing of the Green having immensely improved since the Harvard game, and Cornell was pushed to the uttermost to tally its five score, and it might be added that two of them were of the luckiest variety and really did not show added strength.

Dartmouth on the other hand, found itself up against a very clever goal tender in Vail, who stopped many difficult shots made by the Dartmouth skaters.

The poor work of McCarthy at goal for Dartmouth [illegible] tally [illegible] in the goal [illegible] at the Arena was treated to a spectacular bit of goal tending by the Dartmouth guardian.

Game Was Very Rough.

The game proved to be very rough, both sides offending equally but Cornell being a bit luckier in getting away with its offences. In addition Wells was laid out twice and Patten once from rough house.

The Dartmouth defence put a superb game, holding the enemy off from danger distance for long periods at a time, when there seemed nothing but Cornell tallying. Both Bullard and Patten outdid [illegible] [illegible] Wells was the [illegible] of the attack one night and had it always bringing the stands to their feet by his remarkable stick work and skating through a host of opponents. Captain Eaton also did good work on the defensive.

Captain Magner of Cornell was, as usual, the most in evidence in all plays, and he was ably backed up by Crosswellor and Vincent in the first offensive. The Dartmouth goal, which towards the end of the game, was almost incessant. The skating and stick work of these three was excellent.

The Ithacans' defence was good but they hardly showed up in the lead to which the Green's did, inasmuch as they were not called upon so frequently to defend their goal.

Cornell's passing was better than Dartmouth's, and it was largely due to the fact that the Green players were too prone to pass when necessity did not call for it that they lost many chances to score. In addition, Dartmouth did not follow up its attack as did Cornell, probably because the opponents' forwards were faster on the whole.

When the game started Dartmouth went in with a rush and for the first few minutes [illegible] formation. The tide then changed, and on [illegible] Harvard [illegible]

A long period of [illegible] [illegible] Eaton's hard drive [illegible] [illegible] the Dartmouth [illegible] a pass in front [illegible] shot the second tally.

Dartmouth got in a bit of team work about three and a half minutes after the start of the second half, Wells, Sticklen and Eaton skating down the ice and passing in pretty fashion with the result that the Cornell defence was forced out and Sticklen let drive a clean goal.

Several times later this feat seemed almost duplicated, but Vail's goal tending was too clever.

Finally Magner repeated his score of earlier in the game, tallying on the pass in from behind the basket, Dartmouth then laying siege to Cornell's goal for some time but failing to cage anything which [illegible]

Tenney Braces Rustlers; Red Sox Uncertain

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

National League Team, Strengthened in Outfield, Catching and Hitting, Promises Better Showing.

BOSTON NATIONALS.

Number of players	34
Number already condemned to release	5
Amount paid for drafted players	$3,750
Amount paid for players in 1910	1,750
Amount paid since Tenney became manager	5,600

Probable lineup of team:

Catchers—Graham, Elliott, Rariden.

Pitchers—Ferguson, Frock, Mattern, Burke, Brown, Evans, Parson, Curtis.

First Base—Tenney.

Second Base—Shean.

Third Base—Herzog, Getz, Spratt.

Shortstop—Sweeney.

Outfielders—Josh Clarke, Roy Miller, Collins, Wilbur Goode.

To Select From—Pauxtis, Parsons, Sellers, Sharpe, Sweeney, Tyler, G. Walsh, R. Good, Barney Joy, McTigue, Burg.

BOSTON looks healthier since the advent of Fred Tenney, and the club, which has been a dead weight on the hands of the National League, promises to be stronger this season. It will not be a dangerous club, unless an earthquake or some similar outburst turns the League upside down, but it is likely to be much harder to beat than it has been for four years.

The announcement of Tenney that he will play first base and the reported reconciliation of Herzog with the team makes it look a lot better. Besides that, Tenney appears to have had luck in fitting men into positions. The club is poor and has been for some time, and expended very little money in drafting or purchasing any new players until Tenney was signed to replace Fred Lake as manager. Now Tenney is doing a lot of hustling and has succeeded in picking up some stray material that is promising.

The team has been lamentably weak behind the bat, and this has affected the pitching staff, which contains considerable good material. The team was next to last in batting last season and the injection of Tenney, Josh Clarke and [illegible] makes it look much more formidable with the stick, even with Beck gone. If Wilbur Goode keeps up the form he showed last season, Tenney will have quite a decent aggregation of sluggers, and with Goode, Josh Clarke and Roy Miller in the outfield [illegible] worry even the best of pitchers.

Tenney has only just started his work and cannot hope for any great results this season beyond winning an increased percentage of games and giving all comers more trouble.

The new manager himself promises to be a big element toward the betterment of the team. After years of winning baseball in Boston and New York, Tenney was slipped over the skids last season and relegated to the job as a minor league manager.

Tenney a Credit to Game.

Tenney is an odd personality in baseball. He is well educated and a gentleman especially off the field. During his long career he has seldom mixed with his fellow [illegible] of players [illegible] When he left New York [illegible] greatest of [illegible] the strain [illegible]

He got a [illegible] last season and thus [illegible] this season [illegible] was faster [illegible] years. Boston practically [illegible] he is well liked [illegible] Herzog got along well together in New York, and Tenney may make [illegible] around [illegible] and play his game [illegible]

The wisest move he has made so far was to get Josh Clarke from St. Paul. Just why the club owners in their mad search for talent have overlooked the brother of the famous Pittsburg leader so regularly is hard to understand. He was a good ball player six years ago and played well at Cleveland. He evidently was cursed with youth and made a too early start, went back and the owners decided he wasn't good enough. He hit 293 with St. Paul last season and played great ball in the outfield, and Boston picked him off.

Elliott a Promising Catcher.

According to the inside information I get, Elliott, the catcher secured from Birmingham, promises to develop into a strong man. He was in ninety-seven games last year, which of itself speaks well, and he hit 232 and threw out 131 runners, which is a high average for any catcher. They say he throws with a snap and the ball carries true and that he appears to get the force behind it without much effort. Boston certainly needed catchers, although Rariden seemed to show promise and probably will improve with seasoning.

The pitching staff is mediocre, with some promising men who never have done as well as they should. Mattern, Frock and Ferguson came through last year in fair shape, considering the team they had behind them. Ferguson, who ought to be a really great pitcher, was sick all Spring and the early Summer and was not in condition until midseason. He may come back and have a good year, and if he does he will be hard to beat.

Buster Brown and Curtis were whipped so regularly that they became jokes, yet they pitched well at times and may have it in them to become strong pitchers if the teamwork and hitting improve as they promise to do. One scarcely can blame pitchers for becoming discouraged when the team is going as poorly as it did last season.

Same Burg Has a Good Record.

Among the youngsters accumulated, the three most promising are said to be Burg, McTigue and Walsh. Odd, isn't it, how the recruits from the New England League always look so much better to Boston experts? All three of these, however, come with better recommendations than sectional pride. Burg played third base at Lynn [illegible] 290, besides fielding well.

Tenney knows both McTigue and Walsh, the former a pitcher and Walsh an outfielder, but they were secured by Boston before he was made manager and came recommended by Tommy Dowd, manager of the championship New Bedford team. Dowd thinks both are good men and about ripe for higher company, although frankly doubtful about Walsh as yet.

The best outlook for the team is Tenney's popularity among the fans of Boston, and he may be able to get a lot of work out of certain men who have not paid much attention to baseball during the dark days of persistent defeat.

The players respond quickly to loyal support from crowds and the lowly Rustlers will have their share of the popularity if they win a few games, for the other team is not as popular as it was, many of the fans being angry with the management of the Red Sox because of trades and the collapse of the team last season.

Doves Have Permanent Camp.

The training arrangements for this Spring are excellent. Boston has selected a permanent training camp in the Middle South and has decided sensibly that three weeks is sufficient to condition any player who is good enough in his habits and care of himself to be fit for a baseball team that expects to work hard whether it wins or not. Tenney doesn't want the other kind.

American Leaguers Look Strong, but Lack Consistent Pitchers and Are Not Figured in First Division.

BOSTON RED SOX.

Number of players	45
Already doomed	9
Amount paid for drafted players	$7,500
Amount paid for purchased players	9,500

Probable lineup:

Catchers—Carrigan, Kleinow.

Pitchers—R. Collins, Karger, F. Smith, C. Smith, Wood, Cicotte, Hall.

First Base—Thoney.

Second Base—Gardner.

Shortstop—Wagner.

Third Base—Purtell.

Outfielders—Speaker, Hooper, Lewis.

To Select From—Madden, Bradley, Mahoney, Hunt, Moskiman, Engle, Buzick, McHale, Perry, Williams, Yerkes, O'Brien, Elston, Moser, Pierce, Thomas, Riggert, Bediant, Killilay, Stanfield, Nunnamaker, Hollis, Priepke.

HERE is a problem: Will Joe Doe fall off the wagon this Summer, and if he does fall, will he be in a good humor or mad at some one? Any one who can answer that can come near telling where the Boston Red Sox will finish.

Two years ago I doped this team to run third. In the training season I met the squad down South. The players were drinking, carousing and tearing things wide open. I telegraphed trying to correct the prediction and place them sixth. Some of them went on the wagon, the players quit carousing, and the team ran up where it belonged.

Last Summer I figured the Boston American team to be the best in the League, barring pitchers, and as the pitching strength was much increased, I calculated the Red Sox ought to win. Disruptions and quarrels within the club, centring around Taylor, Lord and Engle, and involving half the players, wrecked the team. The row resulted in an open clash between Taylor and Lord. Taylor sent his third baseman and captain home and traded him and Amby McConnell. The team went all to pieces and finished floundering. These conditions make calculations on what they ought to do dependent upon whims almost.

Team Rich in Material.

Here is material for a winning ball club. In my estimation, Patsy Donovan is not a strong manager, although a clever baseball man and a gentleman. The feeling among the old players still is uncertain, and although Carrigan has come into the fold, Stahl quit the team and there are others still affected by the disturbance that cost the club the services of Harry Lord and McConnell.

There is immense wealth numerically of recruits. I see, by the way, that O'Rourke, who was obtained from Albany, McLead of Columbus, Ga., and G. Anderson, who set the Straits afire up at Duluth, do not appear on Boston's present list. Donovan probably will cut off half a dozen more before the team makes its start for the coast.

The team is opening under an immense handicap. It is to train in California, making a spectacular special train tour from Cape Cod to the Golden Gate—six days' ride, and it is routed all over the West and Southwest on the homeward march. The training plan, abandoned by Comiskey after three ruinous years, will rob Donovan of a chance to see many of his young players and will bring them East in bad condition from hard traveling.

Trip May Hurt Veterans.

Condition is likely to damage the team as to the veterans, and, even with the rich material at hand to select from, Donovan cannot be expected to tell which player is best unless he sees them all in action frequently. He has quite a squad of recruits from the coast who are likely to show better than their Eastern rivals because they will be further advanced in condition.

The loss of Jake Stahl will be a heavy blow to the team. It is announced that an attempt will be made to make Jack Thoney fit in at first base. Now Thoney isn't a very good ball player, and while he isn't exactly a bust, he is at least cartilage. Bradley, who worked at the base in a number of games last Fall, looked pretty fair. The other candidates are not strong.

Gardner probably is a permanent fixture at second and no one can displace Wagner at short. Billy Purtell may have a hard fight on his hands to keep Engle from getting back into third base, for Engle, although not a top notch third baseman, has spells of winning baseball and is a valuable man.

Speaker and Lewis appear certain of outfield jobs and Hooper is fairly well able to hold his own, so the wherefor of the army of outfield recruits is not evident, especially as Engle can play a good outfield.

Pitching Staff Still Uncertain.

The pitching staff still is wabbly and only two of the pitching finds seem promising enough to warrant any great expectations of strengthening up. Boston has had great luck in picking up youngsters recently to supply the gaps and Ray Collins, Karger and Wood are pretty fair, especially Collins. Frank Smith is in and out and in spite of Charlie Smith's success last season he is a bad pitcher.

I have received excellent reports from two pitchers who will be tried out. One is Killilay, who won twenty-four and lost ten games, and finished second among the coast league pitchers. "Hap" Hogan writes that this fellow is ripe for any company and that his work looks finished at all times. His records appear to bear this out. Bediant of the Fall River team is well spoken of. Elston is the Curt Elston the Cubs had once. He is a good hitter and a handy man, but he arrived too late, starting in baseball about the time a lot of players are getting through. Yerkes is well touted, but the club has a frightful bunch of never wassers lined up for the trip to the coast.

Riggert a Terror at Bat.

Riggert, who comes from Omaha, is an exception to this statement. That fellow can hit them high up and far away. He tagged the Western League pitchers for .321 last season and his home runs, triples and doubles were numerous. Besides he was considered a clever man on the sacks, and stole thirty-six bases. He made only one error during the season and my informant tells me the sun was in his eyes, his foot slipped and some one interfered with him that time.

Donovan has plenty of trading material but Boston has had about enough of trading. Every one who has anything to trade lays for Taylor anyhow, and in the last three years Boston has traded and given away enough good players to make a championship team. The Boston castoffs last Fall challenged the regular team to play a series for $1,000 a side and claimed they could throw together a stronger and more consistent team.

The Boston Red Sox on playing strength ought to be easily in the first three teams. I doubt, however, if the team gets above fifth place this season. The chance is that the old trouble dies out. John I. Taylor treats his players better and more liberally than any man in either major league, does more favors for them and makes their lot as pleasant as that of any crowd of athletes in the country.

They show a lack of appreciation if they do not give him their best efforts, but then the great majority of players are constituted that way and many of them look upon the owner as their natural enemy and mistake him for a "soft mark" if he treats them well.

32 MEN IN CONTEST FOR PLACES ON HARVARD NINE

Veteran and Freshmen Players Not Called Out with Baseball Squad.

By E. V. B. PARKE.

SPRING training of the varsity crew squad is on at Harvard and baseball practice was under way yesterday, although at the last moment Captain McLaughlin and Coach Sexton of the nine decided to follow the old custom of not calling out the members of the varsity team—that is the wearers of the baseball "H" and the players on the previous year's freshman team—for practice until several weeks after the new candidates were required to report for daily work in the baseball cage.

For that reason the baseball work is still in the preliminary stage at the Cambridge university and will be for the next week. The veterans and freshmen players will come out to show their calibre and get some hard work before going on to the diamond.

Wigglesworth on the Squad.

At the first call for new men thirty-two candidates reported for work in the cage, prominent among them being Wigglesworth, the quarterback on the eleven last year and a fielder on his freshmen team two years ago, and E. S. Winston, a member of the same nine in the infield department.

Tomes, one of the best all round players on the freshmen team last year, also reported, desirous of a little extra practice before the regulars are called out.

Two subs on the freshman team last year, Sullivan and Twomey, also appeared in the first arrivals.

Coach Sexton set the men at work first with a set of gymnastic exercises, which he figures will strengthen the arms and backs, and thus aid the batting and throwing, and incidentally prevent any unnecessary stiffness which ordinarily affects the players the first couple of weeks of practice.

These exercises will continue probably until work is begun on the diamond and the squad has been weeded down to a more respectable and workable size. This is followed daily by fielding practice. The men form in line and the first one steps out and fields the ball batted to him by the coach or some one selected to bang the horsehide about the inclosure. Each man has one chance and then the next comes up, the man before him going back to the end of the line.

After the fielder has scooped up the pill he bangs it at the first baseman, standing the correct distance from the fielder. This system gives throwing practice as well as fielding work and aids the men in developing accuracy.

Batting practice has not yet been begun as there is time enough for that when the men have rounded into better form in their fielding. This will probably not be attempted until the "vets" and former freshmen players come out.

The battery candidates are still hard at work each day delivering to the patient catchers, each battery standing in a separate enclosure, which is separated from the other by netting.

Men Are Carefully Watched.

Each man in every department of the game is carefully watched by the coach and captain, and helpful hints as to style, position, etc., are given wherever it seems needful. In fact every man who comes out for the Harvard nine gets just as much attention as his fellow candidate, and it is merely a question in the end of the survival of the fittest, for it is now a long time since men were selected for the Harvard team because of their social affiliations.

At the present stage of the work no one has reached condition sufficiently to allow conclusions as to relative merits.

The varsity crew, on the other hand, has plunged right into the thick of the fight, and is working almost as hard now as it will at any time, until the men are given eight and ten-mile rows daily. Those trials are the stiffest given any college athletes.

After the first day's work, Coach Wray divided the men into three crew squads, as follows:

First—Goodale, Cutler, Strong, Hoover, Withington, Newton, Metcalf, Stratton and Balch.

Second—Waite, Anderson, Beare, Nelson, Lincoln, Parker, L. D. Smith and Meyer.

Third—S. O. Richardson, P. D. Smith, Sager, Leslie, Peabody, Hoar, G. C. Cutler, Wiggins, Chadwick, Davis, Higginson and Morgan.

With but one exception, that of putting Stratton at No. 2 oar in place of Hooper, the first crew, as it rowed in the tank on the first day's work and all last week tallied with the crew suggested in these columns recently.

MAGEE COMES TO TERMS.

Phillies Sign up Star Fielder for Long Term.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 18.—Sherwood Magee this afternoon signed a three-year contract to play with the Phillies. Magee's action was taken after he had held a long conference with President Fogel and Manager Dooin at the office of the Phillies.

There were two points of dispute between the parties to the contract. President Fogel wanted Magee to sign a contract for three years, while Magee desired to put his name to a document for only one year.

There was also a difference of several hundred dollars in the salary which the club wanted to pay Magee and what the latter considered that he was worth. Neither party to the contract would discuss the amount of money which Magee will receive.

AMATEUR BASEBALL NEWS

Brockton will have a good representation on the college diamond this season. Jim Reilly will play with Yale, Eddie Henry also has a chance to make good with Yale, William Washburn is on at Amherst, Alton Wardwell and George Washburn are to play with Phillips-Andover, where John Reilly of Brockton is captain; Joe Reilly, George Hill, Arthur Staff, George Crowther and Walter Snell will play with the Brown University team; Edward Spillane, Henry Collins and William Shanick have been selected to play with Williston, Ned Richmond looks good for the Dartmouth team, Abbott Chubbuck will play with Thayer Academy and Harold S. Crocker has been taken on by the M. I. T. nine.

The West End Baseball Club of Brockton will have a strong team on the diamond this season. At a meeting held at the house of Charles Vase, financial secretary of the club, plans were made and it was voted to spare no expense in organizing a ball team, which the members hope will be the fastest semi professional nine in this part of the State. A communication was received to enter the six-team City League, but this proposition was unfavorably received, inasmuch as the policy this year will be to get outside of the city games. Charles Vase will be pleased to arrange games with fast semi-professional teams from Boston and vicinity.

The Men's Class of the Central Baptist Church of Middleboro has gone into athletics, and the coming season will have strong teams in nearly all lines of sport. The chairman of the committee is Elmer Gay. The baseball team that did such effective work last Summer will again be on the diamond with a strong aggregation. Eugene Dunham is manager and would like to correspond with strong semi-professional teams in and around Boston. John Perkins is the captain, and he will have his men out as soon as the warm weather appears.

Malden High's baseball season is one of the brightest for many years, nor is the team at all troubled over the fact that a hoodoo number, thirteen, showed up for the first battery practice of the season. The men were put through the ropes by Coach Cuddy in the high school gymnasium and much excellent material is ready for development. The candidates for pitcher are: Captain Oliver Wescott, Howard Queen, Arthur Clough, Richard Smith, Harry Crockett and Theodore Williams, for catcher, Charles Chandler, Philip Craighead, William Lucas, Grant Reeves, William Curley and Cornelius Murphy.

Thomas J. Doolin, former manager of the West Roxbury White Sox baseball team, has organized the Dorchester White Sox, and would be pleased to arrange games with the following: The Jordan Indians of South Portland, Me., Arlington A. A., of Brockton, the Sandows of Portland, Me., Armory A. A. of Worcester, Wellfleet, Cambridge Athletics and Brookline Independents, or any fast amateur team in New England. Thomas J. Doolin, care Lamson & Hubbard, No. 255 Congress street, city.

Managers J. F. Murphy and E. M. O'Toole of the Middleboro baseball team have received several dates from the nearby teams, and they are still in the game for dates with strong teams from Greater Boston. Last year the Middleboro team did fast work and near the end of the season joined the trolley league. Some of the fans liked this more while others would rather see a change of teams. The management this year will probably start in with an independent nine, giving the fans some fast ball from strong semi-professional teams.

The Solidity A. C., for four successive years amateur champions of East Boston, are to open the season at home April 19, and would like to arrange a game for that date with some strong semi-professional team, suitable guarantee offered. Would like to arrange games away from home for all Saturday afternoons throughout the season with strong semi-professional teams offering reasonable guarantee. C. A. Leary, manager, No. 345 Maverick st., East Boston, or telephone Main 1510.

The Dorchester A. A., which last season caused much comment by its brilliant exhibitions of baseball, is rounding out the team for the coming season and will be under the management of Jack Gardner. He wishes to hear from [illegible] played last year, namely Hyannis, Fisherville, Concord, Wakefield, Newton C. C., South Hanover, also Fitchburg, Newport, and Wareham and other semi-pro. teams. Address No. 27 Howell street, Dorchester, Mass.

The Walnut A. C. of Mt. Auburn are out again this season and will go right after the championship. They have been greatly strengthened by securing the services of Larsen and Dean, two crack players. Would like to book games with the fastest 17-18 teams in the State. Dexters of Dorchester, Walnuts of Neponset, Woodlawns of Everett and the Rindge Triangulars of Cambridge preferred. John F. McCarthy, No. 133 Cushing street, Cambridge.

The Independents, colored champions of Greater Boston, would like to arrange games with the strongest semi professional teams in New England. Would like to hear from Fitchburg, Leominster, Newport, Reading or Quincy for Saturdays or holidays commencing in May. Reasonable guarantee expected. Address Otis Parham, manager, Independent A. C. of West Medford, No. 26 Sherman st., West Medford, Mass.

Manager Steve D. Flanagan of the Brockton team of the New England League is chairman of the committee that is framing the schedule for the coming season, and states that his team will play at home practically every day of Brockton Merchants' Week, which is the big event of the year for the merchants. The Brocktons will play at home the entire week of July 3, at which time the shoe factories are usually closed for a short period of time.

In all probability there will be a six-club City League in Brockton this Summer. The Centrals, Okos, West Sides, North Ends, South Ends and Imperials seem to be the teams that will have membership in the league and games will be played on the Saturdays that the New England team is away. A meeting will be held next week, when complete arrangements for the formation of the league will be made.

[illegible] strong 15-16-year-old teams of Greater Boston. Will give or take half fares for ten men. Teams must be uniformed. Games wanted for Saturday afternoons and holidays from April 15 to July 4. Eddie Murphy has been elected captain and looks for a very successful season. Address all communications to Gil Robinson, manager, No. 125 Forest st., Winchester Highlands.

[illegible] to arrange games with fast semi-professional teams away from home. The team is composed of fast players from Dedham, Norwood and Readville. Would like to arrange games with Gloucester, Newburyport, Canton, Hiltons of Norwood, Stoughton Mills and Hopedale and would like to hear from the managers of fast teams for Sunday games. Address William C. Hogarth, Wanderer A. A., Dedham.

The Romar A. C. are willing to meet all contenders for the championship of the State. The Romars desire to play Derry and Keene, N. H., teams, teams around Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island and also Woonsocket independent teams. Anyone wishing to arrange games with the 1910 champions communicate with John Craven, No. 4 Fenwick street, city.

The Olympic A. A. baseball team, claimant to the 18-19-year-old championship of Worcester County for last season, desires to arrange games for the season of 1911 with the fastest amateur teams of the state giving guarantees. George St. Cyr, No. 211 Mechanic street, Leominster.

Seven or eight youngsters wanted to try out for a new baseball organization in Somerville to be called the Somerville Red Sox. Must be willing to help in any way to raise the interests of the club. Call or write to Manuel Cunha, No. 14 Lincoln parkway, Somerville, Mass.

Louis Courtney of Randolph, one of the fastest ball players in that section, is at Williston Seminary at Easthampton and will play shortstop for that team this season. For the past couple of years Courtney has played sensational ball for the Randolph team.

The Oakland A. C. have organized for the coming season and would like to play any 14-15 year old teams in the State any Saturday after April 19. Half fares taken and given. Joseph Holmes, No. 5 Meander street, Boston.

The General Electric apprentices have reorganized a strong team for the season and would like to hear from fast amateur and semi professional teams. Average age, 20 years. George E. Grover, No. 675 Western avenue, Lynn.

The Malden Literary Club is out for the season and would like to arrange games with 16-17 year-old teams in the State. Games wanted for Saturdays and holidays beginning April 19. James Goldman, No. 1 Wyeth street, Malden.

The Victors of Chelsea want to arrange games with 13-14-year-old teams in or around Greater Boston. Half fares given or taken for ten men. Joseph J. Gerrior, No. 370 Crescent avenue, Chelsea.

A crack catcher and outfielder, both good hitters, would like to play with some fast 16-year-old team for coming season around Boston. Lawrence Nicolini, No. 848 Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester.

The Williams of Medford, formerly the South Medford Reserves, would like to arrange games with 13-14-year-old teams in the State. Uniformed teams. John McGonagle, No. 130 Waverly avenue, Revere.

The Emerald Club would like to arrange games with 17-18-year-old teams. Give or take half [illegible] William Lapsley, No. 45 Calumet street, Roxbury.

Rhodes Bros. and Co., Brookline, has organized a strong team for the season. C. Duffy, Rhodes Bros., Brookline.

DUFFY OFF FOR WEST.

Chicago White Sox Manager Starts for Training Tour.

Hugh Duffy, the little leader of the Chicago White Sox, last night said farewell to a host of Boston friends, before starting for the Windy City to take up the reins of management of the South Side team of the American League.

The Dorchester veteran of the diamond leaves Boston at 11.30 o'clock on Monday morning for Chicago, and will lose little time in getting his party of players together for the start a week later to Mineral Wells, Texas, for the Spring training trip.

John Collins of Newton Upper Falls, who is the leading candidate for the position of first base upon the White Sox team, will not leave with Hughey, but will start for Chicago later in the week.

Duffy declared that he was firmly of the opinion that the White Sox had a great chance for the American League pennant. He places great reliance in both Amby McConnell and Harry Lord, the former stars of the Boston Red Sox.

One of the most interesting events associated with Hughey's march upon Texas with his team, is the probability of a series of games with the New York Giants in the Lone Star State, and the bringing together for the first time of Mathewson and Walsh.

Collins Joins Rustlers.

William S. Collins, one of the best outfielders on the Rustler's staff, has sent in his signed contract from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where has has been spending the Winter. He will join the training squad at Atlanta, Ga.

300 ATHLETES COMPETE IN C. A. C. INDOOR GAMES

Soldier Boys Pitted Against Crack School and College Lads Make Fast Time In Feature Events—Many Thrilling Finishes Keep Large Gathering On Edge

OVER 300 athletes took part in the big indoor athletic meet of the Massachusetts Coast Artillery Corps held last night in the Irvington Street Armory. Most of the races were well contested, the thrilling finishes in the dashes and middle distance runs putting the house in an uproar.

Young Roosevelt Did Not Run

Kermit Roosevelt, son of ex-President Theodore Roosevelt, who was slated to run in the 1,000-yard run, did not compete.

The relay races between the different companies and those between the big high schools of Greater Boston were all keenly contested, the results in most cases being in doubt until the finish line had been reached.

The meet was attended by a large number of society people, who were out in force to see the soldier boys battle with the great galaxy of track stars which Harvard had entered in the various events. The gay dresses of the young society leaders of the Back Bay and Brookline added a picturesque touch to the meet.

A large number of Harvard followers were also on hand to take in the games, and were well repaid with some fine work on the part of the runners from across the Charles. The work of Harvard's middle distance flyers was exceptionally fine, they having matters pretty nearly their own way.

Foster Out of Dash.

Reggie Foster, the great Harvard sprinter, did not compete in the 75-yard dash, as he wanted to be in the pink of condition for the relay race with the speedy Tech runners.

The meet was started with the trial heats of the 75-yard dash, which was closed to all but members of the artillery corps. The final heat was won by G. F. Dustin of Third Company, after a spirited contest with P. H. Savage of the same company. Third place went to B. A. Mower of the Seventh Company. The time of the race was 8 3-5s.

The next event on the card was the seventy-five yard handicap. Entered in this event was most all of the local school and college stars. It was necessary to have eight trial heats and three semi-finals to sift down the great number of sprinters who were out to win this event.

The race was won by L. A. Wilson, the speedy Tech flyer.

Wilson was given a hard tussle for the premier honors by L. R. Levi of Boston Latin. Levi ran a heady race, and came pretty near pulling down the coveted [illegible].

Third place was captured by I. Howe, who carried the Light and Dark Blue of English High. The time for the race was 7 4-5 seconds, which was four-fifths of a second faster than the seventy-five yard closed race.

Wall Scaling Feature.

The dashes were followed by the wall-scaling race, in which the boys in blue showed their skill in toppling the high timbers. The race was won by the First Company, after a spirited contest with the Eighth and Third companies.

The 1,000-yard run was by far the best race of the evening. The event brought together about sixty fast middle-distance men, chief among whom were the Harvard cracks.

At the start Barrett Smith, who ran unattached, with a liberal handicap, took the lead, closely followed by the other high mark men. Herbert Jacques, the Harvard crack, was on scratch, and began to cut after the field at a terrific pace.

At the half way post Jacques worked his way well up in the field, and threatened to overhaul the leaders.

The men came down the homestretch all bunched, Barrett Smith managing to breast the tape a few yards in front of Haifensitne of the Brookline Gym. Third place went to Newton of Harvard, who was pressed closely by the speedy Jacques, who finished with a great burst of speed.

The prettiest relay race of the evening was that between the Harvard freshmen and Troop C, Rhode Island National Guard, which went to the Cambridge men.

The victory for Harvard was due largely to the corking work of W. A. Barron, who took the lead in the sixth lap after a hard fight, and touched his own man fully ten yards in front of the guardsmen.

The seventy-yard low hurdles was won by T. B. Cummings, who wore the Crimson of Harvard. Cummings was pressed close for first place by the great Reggie Foster, who finished a few feet in the rear. G. B. Cummings of Tech won third place.

The high jump was won by H. Barwise of the Malden Y. M. C. A., with a handicap of 5½ inches.

The veteran Bob Fowler teaming up with Joe Silva of the South Boston A. C. breasted the tape first in the ten mile relay race in the fast time of 47 minutes 58 seconds.

COLGATE DEFEATED BY WILLIAMS, 32-28

Berkshire Boys Carry Off Honors in Neck and Neck Game.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Feb. 18.—In the closest game of the season Williams carried of a 32 to 28 victory from Colgate to-night. The Berkshire five was in splendid form, except for passing.

The shooting, as a whole, of the purple quintet was greatly improved, while the Colgate five proved weak in this respect.

Gilmore's shooting was a feature of the game, while Hammond and Loeber starred for the visitors.

Hammond started the game with a remarkable shot from three-quarters the length of the floor, but Williams's players came back, scoring 14 points before Colgate had another basket from the floor.

Then came Colgate's turn, getting three baskets in succession. A basket by Gilmore and goals from foul put the score 27 to 12 in favor of Williams.

In the second half the same neck-and-neck race began, but never once did Colgate get ahead of Williams, although once they came within two points of tieing the score. Lewis made a sensational shot from three-quarters the length of the court this period.

The line-up:

WILLIAMS. — COLGATE.
Gilmore, l.f. — r.b., Collins
Freeman, r.f. — l.b., Shradieck, Rich
Victor, c. — c., Loeber

By the small margin of two-thirds of a point Brookline High defeated Technology by a score of 36 1-3 to 35 2-3 in the annual indoor track meet run off at the Technology Gym yesterday afternoon.

Over 300 spectators banked the sides of the track, and Brookline society was out in full force. The gym was the mecca of the undergraduate social life and the united cheering and singing from the two schools lent color to the meet.

It was Sheddon winning the forty yard hurdles that decided the victory for Brookline High. Tech showed some good work in the mile, but was able to place only two men when the entire three places should have been easy for their squad.

The summary:

35-YARD DASH—Won by Wilson, T.; second, Nordell, B., and Bowler, T. Time—4 3-5 seconds.

KNAPP WINS GOLF TITLE.

Beats Out Boston Man in Remarkable Game in Florida.

PALM BEACH, Feb. 18.—One of the finest exhibitions of golf ever seen at Palm Beach resulted in the thirty-six hole final for the South Florida amateur golf championship between Joseph Palmer Knapp, of Garden City, and H. P. Farrington of the Woodland Golf Club, Boston.

Knapp won by 2 to 1 but only after a match where neither player was more than one up at any time during the afternoon round. Farrington led at the end of the morning half by one hole, having been two up at one stage of the round.

Knapp laid four stymies in the morning and prevented his young opponent from trying to put down some reasonable putts.

It was absolutely perfect golf from start to finish. Knapp scored a 65 for the holes played and if he had played out the last hole and secured a 4 he would have been only one stroke worse than the record for the course.

The cards:

Knapp—Out [illegible]; In [illegible]

Farrington—Out [illegible]; In [illegible]

CALL OFF TITLE RACE.

Brockton Horsemen Split Even Until Sleigh Breaks.

BROCKTON, Feb. 18.—Canterbury Girl, owned by Fred W. McLauthlen and May Patchen, owned by C. E. Pettigrew, raced two heats on the West Elm street snow path this afternoon in an effort to settle the speed question.

May Patchen won the first heat, and Canterbury Girl the second; the race then being called off because a runner broke on Pettigrew's sleigh.

A feature of the racing was the clash between Henry Murphy and his son, Thomas. Murphy, Sr., was behind Harvard and his son drove Jack. The latter [illegible] and won [illegible] heats.

After this race Canterbury Girl went out on the track again and was defeated in two heats by Cornelius Thornell's Redondule.

Makarias Defeated.

The Boston Y. M. C. A. basketball team, that was recently reinstated into good standing, defeated the Makarias of Quincy at basketball last night in the Technology gym, by the score of 45 to 12. Cherry at forward, and Benson, at back, played a good game for the winning combination, and scored more than half the points between them.

The lineup:

BOSTON Y. M. C. A. — MAKARIAS.
Cherry, r.f. — l.b., Nichols, McKenzie
Clark, Ross, l.f. — r.b., R. Bates, N. Chapman

MELROSE FIVE EASY FOR OLIVER AMES

North Easton Boys Hold the High School and Win, 42-27.

The Oliver Ames High School basketball team of North Easton had an easier time than expected in its game with Melrose High yesterday afternoon at Melrose, and won by the score of 42 to 27.

The winners are the strongest contestants for the high school basketball championship of the State, while the Melrose team was a runner up, but now the Melrose team has been eliminated.

This was the first Saturday that Roger Winship, the speedy player for the losing aggregation, has not had everything much his own way and scored baskets at will. He did, however, score six goals from the floor.

Jack Nelson and Tracey played a good fast game and each scored six goals from the floor and Nelson also scored ten goals from fouls.

The lineup: [illegible]

Score—Oliver Ames 42, Melrose High 27. [illegible]

BOSTON A. A. LOSES IN A HOT FINISH

Gissing of N. Y. A. C. Captures Furious Inter-City Relay Race in New York.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—By fairly hurling [illegible] final five yards, [illegible] Gissing, the [illegible] middle distance [illegible] the New York A. C. relay [illegible] victory over the flying four of the Boston A. A. in the inter-city [illegible] relay race, the feature [illegible] of the New York A. C. games at Madison Square Garden to-night.

Gissing was the [illegible] man on the Mercury Foot squad and his great spurt a hundred yards from the tape enabled him to shake off Merrihew, the Boston crack, in [illegible]. The time was 3 minutes [illegible] seconds. Gissing won by less than a yard.

The New York A. C. team was composed of Edwards, Wood, Walther and Gissing. The vanquished outfit was made up of Willard, Lee, Front and Merrihew and ran in the order named.

Willard drew the pole position and started away in the lead. Edwards made only one bid to pass his Boston rival but Willard held him safe and handed Lee a lead of three yards over Leroy Wood, a newcomer.

Wood made good Wefer's contention [illegible] as a speeder, for he soon overtook Lee [illegible] Wood in [illegible] touched [illegible] off Walther [illegible] ten yards [illegible] of Front, the New England champion.

Front, however, spurted from the start and soon [illegible] the four-lap position for Boston. Merrihew started in the last relay [illegible] yards ahead of Gissing. The latter [illegible] behind Merrihew and passed him [illegible] with a hundred yards of the finish.

In the next few [illegible] recovered the lead [illegible] sprinted madly, Merrihew clung to him to the last five yards, when Gissing made his final successful effort.

One world's record was shattered before a throng of 8000. Pat Walsh of the N. Y. A. C. was the athlete who created the new mark. He threw the 56-pound weight for height over the bar for [illegible] distance of 15 feet 1¾ inches, supplanting Jim Mitchell's record of 14 feet 10 inches, made in 1904.

Abel R. Kiviat, the sensational little runner of the Irish American A. C., gained [illegible] on the Baxter cup by winning the one mile invitation scratch [illegible] field of six classy [illegible]. Kiviat won from Oscar Hedlund, the New England champion, with less than a yard to spare. Jack Tait, [illegible] Canadian champion, finished third, five [illegible].

Harry Gissing, one of the favorites, dropped out after three-quarters of a mile. Kiviat led for a quarter of a mile and [illegible] the pace, setting [illegible] George Bonhag. At three-quarters of a mile Kiviat again took [illegible] and maintained it to the finish.

Summary of the meet:

[illegible]

BAXTER CUP ONE MILE.

Won by Al Kiviat, Irish American A. C.; Oscar Hedlund, Brookline Gym A. A., second; Jack Tait, Toronto, Canada, third. Time 4 24 3-5.

REVERE TACKLES CHELSEA IN FAST GAME IN GREATER BOSTON BOWLING STRUGGLE

Murray & Irwin Team Gets a Chance to Improve Its Standing After These Two Get Together in Clash on the Alleys

By ED COGSWELL.

WITH Revere tackling Chelsea Square in the Greater Boston-City League at Thursday night there comes an opportunity of Murray & Irwin making a gain on the leaders in the exciting contest being waged between the two teams, as the latter five ought to have easy picking against the Allstons.

Murray & Irwin, though four points back of Chelsea Square, are filled with confidence in being the pennant winners. In securing Paul Porb[illegible] the admirers of the team believe they have made a ten strike in having strengthened the five to a wonderful degree.

The next best match on for the week looks to be between Malden and Carruth on the latter's alleys. Only two points separate these teams, so that both will put forth every effort in getting the odd point in the match. The other games in the league are East Cambridge at Boylston, Winthrop at Elite and Prospect at Adams Square.

Malden, the leaders in the Suburban League, have a postponed match with Knights for this week, while their schedule calls to meet Square at Chelsea. Everett, which is right on the heels of Malden in the race, will stack against Knights over their own alleys. The remaining matches are Everett Square at Woburn, Klova at Boulevard, Chelsea at Auditorium, and Revere at Broadway.

The Hersey Manufacturing League has closed its season with the Tigers the victors, having got 51 points to 29 [illegible]. Athletics were second in the standing, a couple of points back of the leaders.

At the New Boston alleys tomorrow night the A. O. U. W., goes against the Odd Fellows in a special match, the players being the pick from each league. On Saturday night at the same alleys the A. O. U. W., meets the Baker's team in the State Street Club League. The make-up of the latter will be H. Roca, A. T. Baker, C. Rorke, T. Hennigan and J. Owens.

By the way, two league records were beaten last week in the State Street Club League, when Hoey of B[illegible] team rolled a single string of 151, a [illegible] three-string total of 336.

In the Corporation League the fight is stiff between Bickner & Fuller and N. E. T. & T. Co., there being only a point between the two teams. Gordon is leading in the individual average with 95, a point in front of Field.

ALL STAR SCHOOLBOY SEVEN SELECTED BY AMERICAN

Three Melrose High Players Win Places on the Honor Roll.

ALL-INTERSCHOLASTIC HOCKEY TEAM.

Phillips (Milton Academy) F.
C. Wannamaker (Melrose High) F.
Osgood (Arlington High) F.
Fritz (Rindge M. T. S.) F.
McDonald (Melrose High) C. P.
Page (Melrose High) P.
Buttrick (Arlington High) G.
Johnson (Medford High) sub. F.

WITH the hockey season nearing its end and the championships in the various school leagues practically settled the AMERICAN comes to bat with an all-interscholastic hockey team.

The Canadian sport has made a great hit with the school boys and the season has been very successful. Much interest has been manifested, the games have been close and many good players have been developed.

Three leagues, composed of high schools of Greater Boston, namely the Interscholastic, Preparatory and Interpreparatory, have been organized throughout the season, but the real interest and the best teams were in the Interscholastic league, and, with one exception, that of Phillips, all the men picked for the AMERICAN'S team, played in that league.

Melrose High the Best.

Melrose High has practically won the championship in that league and it furnishes three players for the high honor seven. Rindge, the second team in the league, furnished one man, and Arlington High, the third team in the league, has two star players.

Milton Academy is not connected with any league, but has one of the best teams in the State and is able to cope with any seven.

The boys picked for the honor team are all great individual players and at the same time can get down to fine teamwork. The team would have one of the fastest sets of forwards ever bunched together and should be able to play against any varsity team.

It would have a stonewall defense and with such a high class goal tender on duty the cover point could go up and rush with the forwards.

Wannamaker a Star.

Clarence Wannamaker, of the Melrose High team, is one of the best schoolboy players developed in this State for several seasons. He is a fast skater and in most of the games he has been able to skate through his opponent's defense.

He holds the season record for the number of goals in a single game with eight which he made in a league game against Dorchester High. He has been the high scorer during the season for his team and much credit should be given him.

Phillips, another forward, is also a star individual player and has shown much team work during the season. He has been a good scorer in each game and has been a conspicuous figure on the Milton Academy team that has hung up the record of fifty-one points in five games this season.

Osgood is the captain of the Arlington High seven and one of the foxiest players in the school circles. He knows every trick in the game and when necessary knows how to work them but he is a good player and does not resort to any tricks as often as he could. He is a speedy man and in the scrimmage all the time.

Team Lost Without Fritz.

Captain John Fritz of the Rindge M. T. S. is the fourth forward. He is the same to his team as is C. Wanamaker to the Melrose team. He has been ineligible several times during the season, and when out of the game the Rindge team goes to the bad.

He is a speedy skater and an accurate shooter and in many games has been the whole Rindge team.

The defense, composed of McDonald and Page of the Melrose High team, would be capable of stopping everything that could get by the forwards.

McDonald is a fast player and equal to many forwards. He is in the game all the time and in many of the games does as much rushing and scoring as the forwards.

In the game with the Hope Street School for the Inter-State championship, he played as the fifth forward and that was enough to rush the players from Little Rhody off their feet.

Page is a clever player and stays and minds his position with great skill and little gets by him.

Buttrick Always There.

Buttrick, of Arlington High, at goal is one of the coolest players seen on the ice this season. He standh before the coveted space, watching like a cat and can stop the puck coming from almost any direction.

In the game against Melrose High for the championship, the Melrose forwards would have piled up ten points if Buttrick had been an ordinary goal tender.

As a substitute forward, Johnson of the Medford High team has been selected. He is a classy player and if his team had played as many games as the other teams from which players had been picked, he might have won a regular position.

HOCKEY NEWS

The Milton Hockey Club, connected with the Cunningham "Gym.," East Milton, will close its hockey schedule next Saturday afternoon at Cunningham Pond, East Milton, when it will clash with the Melrose High champions. The team has been playing a very fast game this season, is now in fine form and should give the Melrose boys a battle to the finish. Dr. L. R. Burnett [illegible] is diligently training the seven for the contest.

The Brookline High School hockey team was disbanded by the executive committee [illegible] Friday night [illegible] The committee notified Captain Anderson and the manager that the games in the Preparatory League with Newton High and Cambridge Latin would have to be forfeited and that all practice matches must be called off. [illegible] members played against [illegible] under assumed names.

Washington's Birthday the Milton High School seven will wind up its schedule when it meets the strong Somerville High team at Cunningham Pond, East Milton. The team has had an exceedingly good season and has put the team in one of the fastest sevens in and around Boston. Captain Emerson is to be given great credit for the work of the boys considering the many difficulties contended with early in the season.

Rindge M. T. S. certainly handed out a nice surprise to Arlington High in their game for second honors in the Interscholastic league. Captain Fritz and Kipsley got back into the game and made things hum. Fritz scored three of the four goals for the Cambridge boys and did some great passing. Osgood scored two goals for Arlington.

Medford High has now a fair lead in the Interpreparatory League and should win the championship. They have been rather lucky in the league games this season, but they won and that is what counts. They defeated the Noble & Greenough seven in a league game by the score of 2 to 1 after ten minutes of extra playing.

Fred Hoey, who has gained a reputation as a fair hockey referee and who has officiated more games this season than any other man at Franklin Field Dorchester, is planning an all-Boston High School seven, the pick of stars to contest, providing the conditions are right, the leading championship seven outside Boston.

Cambridge Latin went out to Southboro Tuesday and left a sore spot out in the St. Mark's camp. The St. Mark's team had been playing good hockey and had just handed Mechanic Arts a bad drubbing, when the Cantabs come along and beat them 3 to 1. They were after the game, but were a little shy on the shooting.

The Browne & Nichols team got away with its first game in the Interpreparatory league game with Roxbury Latin winning by the score of 3 to 0. Don Packard, Greenwood and Cann all regulars for the losing team did not play and the Roxbury followers say that accounts for the defeat.

The whole Dorchester High School hockey team is under suspension for staying out of school and playing a game at the Boston Arena without notifying the head master. They got into a game with the Andover team on Thursday, however, and were defeated, 15 to 0.

That was some game between the Melrose High team and the Milton Academy team which resulted in a 1 to 1 score. They played fifty minutes, but that was not enough. Each team has still to lose a game this season, and when they meet in a return match on Washington's Birthday at Milton, a big crowd should turn out.

Mechanic Arts was given two setbacks during the week. Monday the Somerville High seven pounced upon that seven for a 12 to 0 score, and St. Marks trimmed them to the tune of 11 to 1. Mechanic Arts started off the season in good style, but has not been doing good lately.

This mild weather and rain will soften up the ice and as it is near March 1 many of the boys believe that they have had nearly the last of outdoor hockey. The schools that have outdoor rinks said good-by to the game a week ago.

Phillips for Milton and McDonald for Melrose were the stars of the Melrose-Milton game, and scored the only points for their teams. Both teams did great all around playing and not so much individual work was shown.

The Wellesley High team has not participated in a hockey game for several weeks on account of no ice, and many of the boys are beginning to think that they should put away their skates and look up their baseball paraphernalia.

Captain Johnson has been playing the greater part of the game for Medford High, and much credit should be given to him. In the league game with Browne & Nichols he scored both goals, the final being in the last few seconds of ten minutes extra play.

Somerville High won its fifth straight game on the ice by defeating the Mechanic Arts team, 12 to 0. All the Red and Blue forwards took a hand at the scoring and played all around the Boston boys.

St. Marks made it a runaway game with Mechanic Arts and won by the score of 11 to 1. Armour did some good shooting and all around playing and scored four goals.

Milton Juniors Best.

The Milton Juniors defeated the Pacific Juniors of South Boston at the Cunningham Gym, at basketball by the score of 12 to 6. Reid and Shand excelled for Milton and Murphy and Reardon for the visitors.

The lineup:

MILTON JUNIORS.		PACIFIC JUNIORS.
Reid, r.f.	l.f.,	Murphy
Shand, Keith, l.f.	r.b.,	Hickey
Robertson, c.	c.,	Donovan
McLeod, Everett, l.b.	r.f.,	Kennedy
Coles, r.b.	l.f.,	Reardon

Score—Milton Juniors 12, Pacific Juniors 6. Baskets from floor—Reid 3, Shand 2, Murphy, Reardon, Kennedy. Baskets from fouls—Shand, Keith. Umpires—Ward. Referee—Burnett.

BASKETBALL NEWS NOTES

The schedule of the strong Milton Five, which has an exceedingly good record this season, having taken the scalps of the leading Y. M. C. A. teams of the State at the Cunningham gymnasium, has been extended to the middle of March. The Silent Five, Milton Midgets and Milton Juniors, also connected with the gymnasium, have filled out all their open dates to correspond to the former teams schedule. Dr. L. R. Burnett, director at the "gym," witnesses every game played and quickly stops any bad features.

Dr. L. R. Burnett, director of the Cunningham gymnasium, East Milton, is strongly opposed to basketball teams playing without central organization rules and thereby using any tactics possible. Such tactics and partial referees are killing the game, he thinks, and it is now only in its infancy. All teams should play under the A. A. U. rules and regard the rules throughout, and impartial officials selected to keep the game clean.

The Brockton and Randolph teams of the now defunct Bay State League will play a series of games in Brockton and in Randolph, the first game to take place in Brockton Tuesday night. Manager Farrell of the Brockton team has an exceptionally strong team and intends to maintain it until the close of the season. He is making an effort to have the company's team of Gloucester, of which Jere O'Neil of Randolph is manager, play a series of games in Brockton.

The two games Brockton Y. M. C. A. had booked with Taunton Y. M. C. A. for February 22 and March 25 have been cancelled by Manager Harold V. Lawson because the Herring City team has disbanded for the season. Manager Lawson is ill with the measles and Joe Reardon, the crack forward of the team is laid up with a bad knee. The team is severely handicapped by the absence of these men, but will keep right on playing and make a final spurt for the State championship.

Milton High's aggressive quintet will not finish its schedule until March 22, playing some of the hardest contests on the schedule. Washington's Birthday, they will meet the strong Braintree High team in a return match at Milton, February 25, Weymouth High, at Milton, March 4, Mass. Normal, at Milton, March 13, Weymouth High, at Weymouth, and on the evening of March 22 will wind up their season with Sharon High School at Sharon.

A series of basketball games between the Oliver Ames girls and the girls from Winchester High, [illegible] High, Melrose High and Malden High, as Mrs. Mass, Somerville, the coach of the girls team of the Oliver Ames School is trying to arrange, would surely make a hit. Much interest has been taken in the way the fair sex have been playing the game and many would like to see the State championship decided.

The Dorchester High School alumni team is playing a very fast game. Although starting rather late in the season, the aggregation has met and defeated some of the best quintets that games could be arranged with. Manager Delaney, for the benefit of the Dorchester lovers of the game, has extended the schedule into March, and has some great attractions at the High School gymnasium.

From now on the West End House Juniors will play most of its game at the Blossom street ward room. The team has won most of its games and therefore challenges any $5.00-pound team to play at or away from home. Half expenses given or taken. Following is the lineup: D. Freedman (captain), W. Berger, S. Seinger, M. Schneider, A. Cohen and M. Kimmell. Address S. L. Seiniger, 9 Eaton street, city.

The Winthrop Grammar School Alumni challenges any 110-pound team in the State to play at home or away, as preferred by opposing team. Revere and Milton Midgets preferred. The team is composed of F. Malone, r.f.; H. Orcutt, l.f.; H. Edwards, c.; Captain Charles Wheeler, r.b., Manager E. Monarch, l.b. This team is out for the championship and wish good, clean, fast teams. Ernest Monarch, No. 45 Read street, Winthrop.

The former Boston Latin team is now playing under the name of the Warren Avenue "preps" and is beating many of the strong high school teams. Friday evening they beat the Winthrop High School, which was in the running for the [illegible] a week ago, when Winthrop's defeat by the Oliver Ames High School. Fish was the high scorer of the day with seven baskets from the floor.

The High School of Commerce basketball team closed its season Friday by defeating the West Roxbury High School 26 to 17. The Fenway boys had a good team and would have been among the teams to fight for the championship had not the ban been put on.

The Crescent A. C. of Dorchester will extend its schedule to the middle of next month, and would like to hear from some strong teams that [illegible] games at or away from home. S. F. Hoyt, [illegible] Harbor View street, Dorchester, is the manager.

The Neponset Five would like to hear from teams averaging 110 pounds wanting games. The second team, the Neponset Midgets, is also open for battle with eighty-five-pound teams, and certainly can play some. For games address Charles Hoar, No. 53 Chicatawbut street, Dorchester.

Haverhill High practically won the school basketball championship of Essex County Friday by defeating the St. John Prep. school, 23 to 10. Brickett, Ferguson and Young put up a winning game for Haverhill and scored most of the points.

It looks as if that record of twenty-six baskets from the floor in a single game, hung up by Winship of Melrose High, would stand this season anyway. Jack Nelson of the Oliver Ames High had the first record of the season with eighteen baskets, then Eastern of the Westfield High School came across with twenty-three.

The Franklin High School basketball team has been under the ban during the week, but the second team played a regular scheduled game with Winchester High and won, 19 to 15. Williams, Fitzgerald, Murray, Sullivan and Spoone were the players ruled out for a week.

The Wellesley High basketball team has been coming along in great shape and has defeated most of the high schools out in its neck of the woods. Howard Thomas has been the mainstay on the quintet, and has scored many points.

The High School of Commerce second team took an easy game from the West Roxbury second team, 3 to 2. The Highland district boys were lost in the game and scored but one basket and one foul.

Winchester High went down to defeat again when it ran up against the Quincy High five, losing, 24 to 9. Captain Manning of the winning team played his usual game and was the high scorer.

Steve Moran put up a good game for Commerce Friday and made seven baskets from the floor, being the high scorer. Costello and Kennedy also showed their old time form.

Quincy High put one over on the Milton High quintet in its annual game winning 18 to 13. Manning and Chapman played their usual fine game. Manning scored eleven out of the total number of points.

A game should be arranged between the Oliver Ames School and the Westfield High School. Neither team has been defeated on the floor this season, while in turn they have defeated all the best teams in their part of the State.

The Wellingtons of Roxbury have a few open dates for this month and would like to hear from the strongest 130-pound basketball teams in the State. W. F. Breen, No. 43 Palmer street, Roxbury.

The high schools of Plymouth county are having a good fight for supremacy. Abington High defeated Rockland High, 37 to 19, Thursday. Brett shot eight baskets from the floor and Coodell got five.

The Princeton A. C. of Malden is without a game for Washington's Birthday and would like a game with some 90-95 pound team away from home. For game write to Hubert F. Cunniff, No. 116 Adams street, Malden.

The fast St. Mary's team of Dorchester challenges any team in the city. Harry Leonard, 15 Summer street, city.

LANGFORD-LANG FIGHT GREATEST IN 18 YEARS

Boston Champion Meets Australia's Best Heavyweight Tuesday in London's Biggest Bout Since Slavin Met Jackson—Battle 20 Rounds for a Purse of $17,500.

SAM LANGFORD of Boston and Bill Lang of Australia meet Tuesday night in London in the greatest battle of the heavies which has been fought in Great Britain in nearly twenty years. It is the first elimination contest in the effort to find a man who can take Jack Johnson's measure. It is considered the "biggest" fight since Johnson beat Jeffries at Reno July 4 last.

Hugh D. McIntosh, the Australian promoter, has promised the winner a match with Johnson, and agrees to make the purse big enough to attract the dusky holder of the world's title.

Women Will See The Battle

Joe Woodman, manager of Sam Langford, the sable and herculean boxer, has sent to the Sunday AMERICAN from London samples of the most extensive advertising ever known in England, for the twenty-round contest, which will be fought for a purse of $17,500 at the Olympia Annex, London, and which is being boomed by the greatest publicity campaign ever known in sporting circles, in every part of the British domain.

Not since Peter Jackson and Frank Slavin fought their memorable battle at the National Sporting Club in "Lunnon town" in 1892 has any boxing bout attracted the attention in England that is being focussed upon Langford and Lang, and the largest crowd in the history of the British ring in this generation seems certain to be present at the great London amphitheatre, when Referee Eugene Corri calls the Boston "tar baby" and the Antipodean boxer into action. Many women, some of them fashionable, will see the fight.

High Prices for Fight.

Prices for seats at the coming bout will be upon a scale only charged in this country for a championship heavyweight contest, and Sam Langford, who should win in about six to eight rounds, and who has wagered $1,000 that he disposes of the Australian in less than ten rounds, should take down with Joe Woodman a beautiful financial nest egg.

For the best ringside seats it will cost the sportsman $52.50 in American money, while the private boxes are taxed at $120. The cheapest bleacher seats will cost about $3, and then prices go up to about $5.25, $10.50, $15.75, $26.50 and $52.50.

McIntosh, the Australian promoter, with James E. Britt, the former American light weight boxer, who serves as his secretary, has placarded every corner of England, Ireland and Scotland and Wales with their immense posters, one of the most entertaining of which reveals much rosy matter about the boxing of the future and reads as follows:

> Two white boxers stand out as being vastly superior to all others of their race now in active training. Bill Lang, champion of Australia, and Al Kaufmann, of America, and of these two, Lang is conceded by all experts to be the better. This concession is based on fact, not opinion. Lang and Kaufmann met in Philadelphia last Spring, and until he had the ill luck to break, beyond all power of using, his right hand, Lang was proving himself superior in every department of the sport to Kaufmann. The latter, by declining a return match, gave confirmation to the estimate placed upon Lang's abilities by those who are best judges. Therefore, upon the shoulders of Lang, champion of Australia, and the best British boxer living, devolves principally the huge task of regaining the white man's supremacy in the sport of boxing.
> Should he defeat Sam Langford when the pair meet for the international championship at Olympia Annexe, Tuesday evening, February 21, the way to a contest with Jack Johnson for the championship of the world is wide open to him, and Mr. McIntosh has guaranteed him the match. If, however, Langford wins in the coming encounter, then two representatives of the colored race, Johnson and Langford, stand between the white race and an honor it held for much over a century.

While the sympathy of English sporting men is largely with Lang, one of "the white hopes," and also because he comes from England's colony, there seems to be no question but what Langford should bring home the bacon. McIntosh seems to be dead set upon having Lang returned the winner, as he figures what a monstrous gathering could be attracted for a contest between Lang, if he beat Langford, and Jack Johnson in Australia.

Looks Like a Dream.

But this forecast, which the English papers have been urging, looks to be an idle dream. Langford will doubtless be returned an easy winner, and should rule as good, if not better, than a 2 to 1 favorite, and have no very considerable task in dropping Lang in about six to eight rounds as stated.

There can be no question that at the end of hostilities between Langford and Lang, there will be no enormous offers made by the rival promoters in London for a match between Sam and Jack Johnson, to be held during the coronation ceremonies in England.

In the meantime there must be considered "Tex" Rickard and Jack Gleason of this county, who will probably meet every bid made by the London promotors, and then raise the offer at that, for the heavyweight battle for the world's championship to be held in Nevada.

The result of the Langford and Lang encounter should be known in Boston about 6 o'clock Tuesday evening.

SOUTH BOSTON LAD IN A LIVELY BOUT

Eddie Murphy Meets Sammy Smith of Philadelphia in a Contest at Catchweights.

The boxing bout between Sammy Smith of Philadelphia and Eddie Murphy of South Boston at catchweights, which features the card at the Armory A. A. Tuesday evening, should prove one of the best contests of the Winter between 135-pound boys.

Miah Murray of the Triple A's has no hesitancy in declaring Murphy, the pride of South Boston, as the best boy in the 135-pound division hereabouts, and is confident he will give Smith, the much-touted Philadelphian, a merry bout all along the journey of twelve rounds.

Murphy is immensely popular in Boston, for he is known to be a sturdy puncher with an excellent wallop in both hands, and as game as a red hackle. Smith comes here with a most enviable reputation, having carried a shade with "K. O." Brown in a memorable encounter, but he realizes that he has a hard task at hand and will complete his training in this city.

There promises to be a good deal of speculation on the Smith-Murphy bout with the boys quoted as about even.

The match, being at catchweights, will bring the boys into the ring Tuesday night close to 140 pounds, and it looks sure to be a sturdy battle, with both boys wading in from the first tinkle of the bell.

EVANGELINE REX WINS.

Manchester Mare Defeats Cameron's Aintree in Ice Race.

HAVERHILL, Feb. 18.—Evangeline Rex, 2.19¼, the Manchester pacing mare, won three straight heats from Cameron's Aintree, 2:10¾, on the Lake Saltonstall ice course this afternoon, maintaining her supremacy for the quarter mile races. The ice course was sloppy because of the thaw, but the horses went away in good shape, the Manchester mare making the first quarter in 31½ seconds, a neck ahead of Aintree.

In the second heat, Evangeline went away with a rush and maintained a two lengths' lead to the finish. Aintree led in the third heat and seemed a winner when Tremblay, driving Evangeline, in a closing brush won by a half a length, in 32 seconds flat.

Walter R. Cox of Manchester drove Aintree, he having formerly owned him, and his chances were well liked, but the Manchester mare was in better fettle, and showed a marked superiority in all three heats. A large crowd turned out for the event. There was much speculation and several thousand dollars changed hands upon the race.

CRESCENTS TO PLAY HERE.

Canadians to Have Two International Hockey Games in Boston.

Two international hockey contests will be played at the Boston Arena this week. The Crescents of Halifax, champions of the Maritime provinces, will be here Friday night to meet the Technology team and Saturday evening will wind up with a game against the crack Boston Hockey Club.

A big excursion party will accompany the Crescents and provision has been made for several hundred fans at the two days' tourney.

The Crescents are the pick of Nova Scotia and it is the first time that a representative seven has been sent from there to cope with the best American hockey combination.

The visitors will be reinforced by the choice players on the Amherst and Wanderers, the other two members of the league to which the Crescents belong. McGraw, the crack coverpoint of the Wanderers, and Hilton, goal of the same team, will be with the Crescents. Twaddle and Lowther, the best pair of the Amherst seven, are two others that will be with the Crescent squad when they play their doubleheader here.

CORBETT SAYS MORRIS IS A GOOD FIGHTER AND A SQUARE ONE

But the "Oklahoma Giant" Has Not Yet Enough Experience to Battle Champion.

By JAMES J. CORBETT.

HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION JOHNSON would have us believe there is no cause for worry on his part over the occasional good showing by one of the pugilistic "hopes" and that there is little danger of his losing his grip on the title for a long time to come.

Still Jack must give the matter considerable thought, for he recently has let out a roar that that Oklahoma marvel, Carl Morris, is a faker and that he wins his fights per "arrangement." The champion also alleges a proposition was made to his own protege, Walter Monahan, to "lay down" to Morris.

From what I have heard of the young man from Sapulpa (I believe that's the name of the town), and I am personally acquainted with several of his closest friends and well wishers, it will be advisable for the ebony champion to keep as far away as possible from the man he accuses.

Morris is after one man in pugilism, so his friends claim, and that man is the champion. He would not object to an impromptu mixup with the negro in the least, and particularly now that the provocation is so great.

I do not consider Morris such a chump as to make the proposition that Johnson charges in the indictment, and from what his friends who have known him since childhood tell me, Carl is not the sort who would stoop to such methods at this stage of his career, or at any time, for that matter.

From all accounts, he is a pretty smart youngster, educated and level headed, and would realize that overtures of this kind on his part would put an awful dent into his quickly earned reputation.

Has Knocked 'Em All Out.

Morris has done everything asked of him to date and in every instance has won his fight with a knockout. True, the only man he licked who ever possessed a "rep" is Marvin Hart, and that gentleman has been "all in" for several years. A man who was at the ringside tells me that Marvin was in bad shape and could not give a good account of himself. Hart was a good man not so long ago, and has a decision over Johnson to his credit.

Jack says he was robbed in that fight but that's what they all say when they lose. Even if Hart was not in the best of condition when he met Morris, his experience and knowledge of the game should have carried him through ten rounds or more against an ordinary novice, but Carl handed the Kentuckian a good licking in three rounds which would go to prove that he can fight a little bit.

Several Oklahoma admirers of Morris recently waited upon me and requested that I consider a proposition to take charge of the boy, and went so far as to arrange for Morris to call upon me.

When I discovered that the young man already had "signed up," as the ball players put it, and was the proud possessor of a full fledged manager who probably never had even seen a boxing glove, I informed the well meaning gentlemen that there was no need for a conference.

I am much in earnest in my hunt for a likely aspirant for heavyweight honors and would be willing to give up a year or more of my time to help develop the right material if it should happen along, but I have to pass up the managers. There is enough work attached to the handling of the pupil without excess baggage in the person of a boy manager.

Needs a Lot of Training.

However, I don't mind saying that if I were in charge of Morris I would go ahead slowly when it came to the matchmaking. The boy knows practically nothing of the science of boxing, and would be the rankest kind of a sucker in the hands of a really clever man just at the present time.

A systematic course of training for a year or two would be my plan with an occasional tryout against one of the second raters. Morris is young and has a long career ahead of him if properly handled—provided the right sort of stuff is in him. His success will depend upon himself. All the training and boxing instruction will not make a champion unless the proper material is there to work on.

I note where a millionaire oil man has taken an interest in Carl and purchased the contract from manager number one. The new backer has arranged to build and equip a gymnasium for his charge and to enlist competent teachers.

That's the right way to begin, and if Mr. Oilman will take a word of advice from one who has been through the mill, he will cut out the fights for the present, and especially that one contemplated with Al Kaufman. The latter would be too much for Morris at this stage, and a defeat might not do the youngster any good.

Great care should be exercised in the selection of an instructor, and whoever is placed in charge should be given full and complete authority. There should be one boss of the training quarters and his word law.

There are a few good men in the market, but only a few. I mean men who know how to properly condition a boxer and superintend the boxing instruction as well. By all means do not neglect the boxing lessons.

Jeffries thought all he had to do to get right for Johnson was to get off the fat and develop the wind, and his training consisted principally of road work and hill climbing and the heavier kind of gymnasium stunts. The boxing could take care of itself, argued Jeff. The cleverness would come back to him during the fight, he contended. He made a great mistake, as he must realize now.

Here is a [illegible] man who has the strength and physique. With the e points in his favor there is a chance that he may [illegible] way through the second [illegible] a worthy challenger [illegible] and with the great [illegible] reality that he has soon [illegible] be taught scientific [illegible] Practice is the only [illegible] perfect in any [illegible] exception to the rule.

Old Time Kidney Punch All Right.

About all we read in the fistic columns these days is an appeal from some one or other to cut out the deadly kidney punch. A month ago the old punch was doing business along, but not a word of complaint was made until the English sport critics had taken up the subject and recommended that the objectionable blow be pruned from the rules.

In a way I believe it would prove a good thing if the blow was not allowed, that is as [illegible] who attempt its use. We see it only in clinches and its use to [illegible] is to prolong [illegible] feature of modern boxing [illegible]

In the old days there was a blow called the kidney punch that was delivered in open boxing, and it was not only a clever and beautiful sample of the manly art but as fair a punch as any in the book. However, as George Dawson says, "that blow is no longer used or even understood by any boxer now in the ring."

The new permitting hitting with one hand free when the opponent is holding [illegible] the [illegible] of kidney punch within the laws of the game, and if it is the desire to eliminate what I considered an undesirable feature of boxing it will be necessary to revise that section of the code.

There is nothing clever or scientific about the blow and it is brought into play only in clinches. When the men hug and hold and slam at each other's back with the free hand the exhibition can hardly be dignified by the name of boxing.

HEDLUND IN THE MILE.

Should Capture That Event at Boston College Meet.

Oscar Hedlund, the Brookline [illegible] miler, will be the centre of [illegible] at the annual meet of Boston College which will be held in the college gymnasium to-morrow night.

Hedlund is stated to start in the one mile run from scratch, and if past performances count for anything the [illegible] should capture first place. Hedlund has won this event [illegible] College games for the [illegible]

"Tracy" McGovern, the crack Boston College High mile runner, [illegible] this event, and with a liberal handicap he should make the famous Oscar go at top notch speed throughout the grind.

As usual the relay races will be a big feature of the night's programme, the management having matched most of the schoolboy teams against their chief rival.

AMERICUS TELLS HOW HE PLANS TO WIN WRESTLING TITLE

Southern Champion Confident of Defeating Gotch in Bout Here

By AMERICUS

[illegible] Schoenlein, world's former light heavyweight champion, regarded as the next American to hold the wrestling title in the event of Gotch going down to defeat or into retirement. Schoenlein is a member of a distinguished Southern family, a graduate of the Maryland Institute of Architecture and a college man.

[illegible]

That is what I hoped to do [illegible] Dr. Roller turned from [illegible] a fortune, later to return to his [illegible] and use his remarkable talents [illegible] science of medicine.

I was ambitious from the start of my wrestling career, always looking forward to the time when I might [illegible] for the world's championship, but [illegible] realizing that I was handicapped in weight up to the last year when I became to all intents and purposes a full-fledged heavyweight and have since met all the best men in this country either in handicap or finish matches and have made good.

Feels Sure of Winning.

"Those who have seen me [illegible] that my system of attack is the [illegible] will bother Gotch. The latter [illegible] been troubled by men shorter [illegible] self and this notably true of [illegible] who defeated Gotch, and [illegible] the champion in a [illegible] my system with success. I feel [illegible] that I am on the right track and [illegible] will prove this to-morrow night when I meet Gotch in Mechanics Building.

"Handling wrestling as a rule means that the hand speed [illegible] meditate upon the defensive [illegible] the opposite and have found that the best method of work in case of this kind is to assume the aggressive from the start of the bat and to keep after your man as though you were giving instead of receiving a handicap.

"I have followed [illegible] with Hackenschmidt and Zbyszko and in both cases instead of being a mark for the punishment that these men can hand out I did a little of the punishing myself, with the result that when the hour limit had been reached my shoulders had not been pinned for even a single fall.

Battle With Gotch.

"Gotch did better because of the fact that he got the jump on me in the first bout at Kansas City. He [illegible] to [illegible] find me and won the first fall in 41 minutes. In the second I got [illegible] in roller [illegible] and [illegible] his tremendous strength enabled him to hold me.

"At that, it was only after we had both gone through the ropes and out into the audience.

"I was bruised from the impact with the floor and in the fast work that followed Gotch got a toe hold which forced me to yield in twenty-two minutes.

"With the toe hold cut out as it will be to-morrow night, I feel certain that Gotch will have his troubles. In fact if I did not think that my chances of winning were better than ever I would never have consented to meet him. 'A match well made is half won,' you know, and I agreed to meet him with that axiom in mind. I am in excellent shape, and am satisfied to let the result of the contest speak for itself."

MOTOR RACES AND SHOW HAND IN HAND

New Orleans Has Three Days of Automobile Racing and a Week of Motor Show.

The third annual Mardi Gras speed car [illegible] will be run at the Fair Grounds track in New Orleans, beginning next Saturday, February 25, and continuing through [illegible] 7th. In conjunction with the races [illegible] automobile show will be conducted in the grand stand building, the show opening [illegible] at noon and remaining open during the race meet.

[illegible] the motor car show twenty-eight dealers have bought space. Large motor [illegible] exhibits and eight accessory exhibits have also been contracted for, while several applications for space have been refused because all available room has been [illegible].

The races have drawn the largest entry [illegible] record for a mile track meet. No less than twenty-five cars have been entered, while the probability is that five more cars will be named before the meet. Bert Burnham and Arthur Chevrolet [illegible] with Buicks.

RECIPROCITY AND THE AUTOMOBILE

The Influence of the Motor Vehicle in Favor of Reciprocity Is Being Felt at This Time.

Reciprocity between the United States and Canada is the subject of pending official action on the part of two great governments, which goes to show that war makes boundary lines and trade erases them. The automobile industry say the automobile is taking a prominent part and its influence in favor of reciprocity is being felt at the present time to a far greater extent than the average man is likely to appreciate. Buffalo is the scene of a great [illegible] show and it is the home of a large and prosperous automobile manufacturing industry with plants covering every phase of the work and facilities that are second to none. Buffalo is at the gateway which leads from a great republic to a mastery dominion and intercourse between the citizens on either side of the line has long since beaten a path between Buffalo and the great business centres of Canada. At the Buffalo show this year the Canadian dealers in automobiles are in [illegible] and they represent a strong situation.

High-Grade Cars in Foreign Market

American Manufacturers Making Preparation to Exploit and Develop the Foreign Market.

Undoubtedly the successful sale of American automobiles in foreign countries has suffered through the fact that until recently the bulk of the export trade has been made up of low and medium priced cars, says C. A. Emise of the Lozier. The buyer naturally forms his estimate of the American product through the cars which are offered to him at the foreign agencies, and which are exhibited at the various shows abroad. Naturally cars selling in America at prices ranging from $750 to $2,000 do not represent the best in the American industry.

The manufacturer of the better grade of American automobiles has found such a profitable field at home that he has made little effort to extend his trade into foreign countries, and the result has been that the best American cars have been seen only in the hands of tourists, and little opportunity has been given the foreign buyer to judge of their real merits through a test experience. Now that the building of the higher priced American machines is making an effort to secure a foothold abroad, it is found that a prejudice exists against the imported automobile on account of the unsatisfactory experience with the lower price machines which have been sold abroad.

The builder of the higher grades of American automobiles has now reached that state where an attempt is being made to invade the foreign field and firms like the Lozier who formerly built and exported the Cleveland bicycle, as well as other builders of high priced American machines, who in the bicycle days formed valuable connections abroad, are making a determined effort to introduce their cars in the principal cities of the world.

Miller Buys Atlas.

Mr. Charles W. Miller, head of the Miller Transfer Company of Buffalo, which uses a large number of taxicabs and baggage transfer wagons in several large cities of this country, was one of the most enthusiastic attendants at the Chicago commercial show. He spoke most glowingly of the work that is being done by his taxicabs and emphasized his belief in the same by placing an order with the Atlas Motor Car Company of Springfield, Mass., for a dozen more Atlas taxis.

McIntyre Makes Change.

A. H. McIntyre, who has long been identified with the local motor industry, has been appointed Boston manager of George A. Hawes, manufacturer of Panhard oils, and has established his headquarters at No. 899 Boylston street.

DARING DRIVERS LOOKING AHEAD

Field of Famous Racing Men Have Eyes Directed Towards International Championship.

Headed by the famous racing motor pilot, Lewis Strang, as captain and manager, the three-car Case team has been entered in the 500-mile International Sweepstakes Race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway next Decoration Day. This trio of cars will be driven by Strang, Louis Larsonneur, the French driver, and Joseph Jagersbarger. Three reserve drivers have been named, so that all of the cars will be manned throughout the seven-hour grind, even if the original drivers are unable to take their cars all the way through.

The team this year is looked upon as one of the most formidable contenders in all of the big events, and the entry of the entire outfit in the race at the Speedway indicates that the prize of $25,000 looks good to the drivers, while the honor of winning a race which will decide the "international championship" is alluring to the manufacturer.

Strang's entry was the first made after the preliminary announcement of the race, and the other two have just been made. This brings the total number of entries thus far made up to nine. The Speedway management takes this as an indication that, probably, more than thirty cars will start in the event. The entries do not close until May 1, but the entry fee for each car increases from $500 to $750 after March 1.

Among the drivers who are planning to enter within the next two or three weeks are Johnny Aitkin in a National "40," C. B. Baldwin in an Inter-State "50," Louis Disbrow in a Pope-Hartford, Frank Fox in a Pope-Hartford, Harry Knight in a Westcott Special, Jack Fleming in a Pope-Hartford, Howard Wilcox in a National, Charles Merz in a National, Joe Dawson in a Marmon special, Eddie Hearne in a Benz, Harry Grant, twice winner of the Vanderbilt cup, in his big Alco, Spencer Wishart in a Daimler Mercedes, W. H. Turner in an Amplex, Ralph DePalma in a Simplex, Ralph Mulford and Joe Horan in Loziers, Fred Ellis and Harry Wood in Jackson cars, Wild Bob Burman in a Buick, Arthur and Louis Chevrolet in two special cars, Frank T. Dearborn in a Fiat, Sydney Smith in a Fiat, Bruce Brown in a Benz, and Hughie Hughes, the English driver, in a special mount. This list contains every great winner of [illegible] and will be supplemented by others who are not named their cars, such as Harry Lytle, who is abroad after a foreign car, probably a Napier, Arthur Greiner, [illegible] Billy Knipper, Monty Roberts, Caleb Bragg, the millionaire driver of Cincinnati, and others.

JACKSON AT NEW ORLEANS.

M. H. Bates Receives a Letter from Driver Speer.

[illegible] Mardi Gras races scheduled for New Orleans on February 25 to 27 two Jackson cars are entered. One, a big Jackson "40," will be driven by Sam Speer, who has been doing great work with the [illegible] in the Southern contests. In a recent letter to President M. H. Bates [illegible] Jackson representative, Speer [illegible] he was forced to [illegible] at New Orleans last month.

"My front hood strap broke in the first mile and it opened up like a balloon and came down on top of my head," writes Speer.

"The race was a thirty minute distance event, and I stopped at the pit and tried to replace the hood, but found that it was bent so badly that it was impossible. I lost the lead I had but got away ahead of three of the field and secured second place. With the hood off and no one was throwing oil, and with the dust and oil getting upon the [illegible] my goggles were soon useless.

"At times my both eyes filled so that I could not see for several seconds. The track was an ordinary dirt affair which had been used the week before by the horses and at the turns the cars threw so much dust that they were completely hidden from the people in the stands.

"I was penalized the first time for stopping and the record as announced was Marquette Buick, 26¼ miles, Jackson, second, 25¾ miles. [illegible] 26¼ miles. In the five mile free for all against the bigger cars we were second and made the fastest mile."

Speer will also be pitted against Strang, De Palma, Bragg and the other stars in the coming meet.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

Kenneth M. Blake Says Business Never Looked Better.

"I don't know how it is with others," said Kenneth M. Blake of the Locomobile Company yesterday, "but we have felt a decided pick up in business of late. Generally before the show it falls off for a time, but it comes back pretty soon afterward.

"One sign that we regard as peculiarly a healthy one is the demand for our rebuilt cars. We think it speaks well for the new product when folks are so eager to get used cars if they can't have others. We have even to send to other cities to get them if we can in order to accommodate those here who want them. When these cars are rebuilt and refinished and with our guarantee behind them we regard them as every bit as good as new machines, and apparently there are many others who believe with us in that regard.

"New cars are moving quite as well as we could wish and certainly we have nothing to complain of about the volume of business we are doing."

AIR MEN PRAISE APPPERSON

Ely and Willard Have Good Words for Automobile.

Two of the foremost aviators in the country—Eugene Ely and Charles F. Willard have come forward with words of praise for Apperson cars. During the recent performances of the bird men at Los Angeles and San Francisco, Apperson cars were placed at the disposal of these two for their trip between the cities and the aviation fields.

Ely, who, by the way was mechanic for Max Rosenfeld, of Frisco, when the latter drove racing cars, says he has always considered the Apperson to be one of the foremost of American cars. Willard says he "has long known the Apperson as one of the best cars in this country but the opportunity to get such a demonstration of it over the hills of San Francisco was certainly a pleasure."

Light Bill Hearing.

The committee on roads and bridges will give a hearing on the light bills, six in number, at its forenoon meeting to-morrow. Since the first hearing held a week or so ago the Legislative Committee of the Massachusetts State Automobile Association has been busily engaged in accumulating evidence and framing arguments, and it is expected that at the hearing Monday some new testimony will be given the committee in favor of the passage of the bill. Most of the arguments for the bill at the previous hearing were made by motorists, but it is expected that Monday some horsemen and owners of horse-drawn vehicles using the highways, will appear in favor of the measure.

Tires 10% Oversize

25% More Mileage—At No Extra Cost

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires save one-fourth on tire bills by being 10% oversize.

They save another one-fourth by making rim-cutting impossible.

Yet they cost nothing extra. That is why 64 leading motor car makers have contracted for these tires for their 1911 models.

Ordinary Clincher Tire

The No-Rim-Cut Tire

All ordinary tires—clincher tires—have hooks on the base to hook into the rim flanges. That is how the tires are held on.

Goodyear-No-Rim-Cut tires have no hooks on the base. They stay on without hooks—and without tire bolts—because the base is made unstretchable. It can't be forced over the rim flange.

Into the base we vulcanize 126 braided piano wires. They contract under air pressure, so the inflated tire is held to the rim by a pressure of 134 pounds to the inch.

That is our patent—the only practical tire base which can't stretch. Because of it our tire sales last year multiplied three times over.

The Two Results

One result is this:

Rim-Cutting is completely avoided in Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires. The removable rim flanges are set to hook outward, so the tire comes against the rounded edge. With the clincher tire they must be set to hook inward.

And those thin rim flanges digging into the tire cause all the ruin of rim-cutting.

Another result is this:

The No-Rim-Cut tire begins to flare right from the base of the rim. Thus we can make it 10% oversize and still fit the rim.

We do that. We give you this 10% extra air—10% extra carrying capacity—without any extra cost.

We do that to avoid overloading—to carry your extras, like top, glass front, gas tank, extra tire, etc.

Without that extra size, with nine cars in ten the cars are loaded beyond the elastic limit. The result is a blow-out.

No Extra Cost

The avoidance of rim-cutting means a saving of 25% on tire bills.

The 10% oversize, on the average, adds 25% to the tire mileage. These two features together cut tire bills in two.

Yet they cost nothing extra. Motor car owners who know the facts demand Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires. Write for our latest tire book.

Flanders "20" $700

Highest Value Now Offered in Automobiles

E-M-F "30" $1000

We are showing The Flanders "20" Roadster and Runabout models at $700, the four-passenger Suburban $725, and the much-admired Coupe at $975.

These cars are all mounted on the Standard Flanders Chassis, which has in its first year demonstrated that the superior facilities of the E-M-F Company's manufacturing plants and engineering experience have produced a car at a world-beating price and quality.

The Flanders "20" is the car that performed one of the greatest endurance feats ever accomplished. From Quebec to Mexico City, over roads seemingly impassable, over uncharted highways, through mud and water and every climatic condition, this car was piloted 4,127 miles—a trip that will go down in history as a record of human and mechanical supremacy over such difficulties that proved this car to be the greatest value in the motor world.

The latest achievement of the Flanders "20" (Suburban type), carrying a full complement of passengers, just completed, at Los Angeles, Cal., the most marvellous non-stop performance in the history of motordom. 10,872 miles in a night-and-day continuous journey over country and city roads, made under the supervision of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

No car selling at any price, or rated at any horse power, has ever achieved such a triumph as this.

The E-M-F 5-Passenger Standard Touring,

The E-M-F 4-Passenger Demi-Tonneau,

The E-M-F 2-Passenger Roadster,

All $1,000.00.

The E-M-F "30" Standard Chassis is also equipped with a Coupe Body that for luxury and comfort is unsurpassed. This car is listed at $1,450. All of our body types are of the latest and most up-to-date design, beautiful in lines and appointments, and made of the best of material.

We have on exhibition at our salesrooms the various important parts, such as crank-shafts, cylinders, pistons, cam-shafts, gears, clutches, axles, etc. You can readily see the kind of materials and workmanship that have made the Flanders "20" and E-M-F "30" so popular.

INSPECT THESE CARS AT OUR SALESROOMS. Ride in one. Test by any and every comparison. You will discover WHY you do not have to pay a fancy price for a quality automobile

FLORIDA BEACH RACES SCHEDULED FOR THE NEAR FUTURE

Jacksonville Motor Club Anticipates Making a Few World's Records During the Racing on Pablo Beach the Latter Part of March.

The great meet to be held at the Atlantic-Pablo Beach, near Jacksonville, March 27 to 30, is to be of an international character, with American and foreign cars vieing for supremacy over nature's greatest speedway. A speedway which has proven faster and safer than any course ever built or designed up to the present time by man.

It would seem that to travel at the greatest speed ever yet attained, one must go back to nature, and to a course where twice a day, with the flow and ebb of the ocean's tide, a speedway is built where all dreams of speed heretofore have been surpassed.

It was only a few years ago when the world was startled by reading that a mile had been covered in thirty-nine seconds over the Florida sands, and the name of Willie K. Vanderbilt became the dean of speed kings.

Since then those same sands have been the scene of even more wonderful performances. The speed wise and unwise began to figure that perhaps some pilot of the future, more daring than others, would equal or surpass a speed of two miles for one minute, but few thought it would ever be done.

Then the cables that girdle the globe carried the message that Demogeot, the daring Frenchman, had hurled his space eater over the course for two miles in the phenomenal time of fifty-eight seconds and a fraction. The speed dream was realized. Those who had vainly hoped that two miles would be made while the second hand on the watch was slowly ticking off its time, were satisfied, and now again the wise and unwise were dreaming. It is not enough that the motor car has attained the greatest speed of any mechanical contrivance, or that it has surpassed nature's previous best performance, the dreamers are hoping for even greater speed.

American cars have held the mile and kilo marks since 1906, when Ross, with steamer, set the mile marks at thirty-four seconds. It was cut to twenty-eight by the daring Marriott and was not lowered until last year when Oldfield placed it at 27.33, where it is at the present time.

Christie is now anxious to lower his mark and has added cylinders to the rear of his car as well as to the front, so that it is now a great doubleheader, so to speak, and if his arrangement to have it driven by Caleb Bragg plans out, the indications are that an American car will again hold and come back into its own. Caleb Bragg is the young Cincinnati millionaire who defeated Oldfield so decisively at the Los Angeles motordrome.

HONORED BY THEIR FELLOWS

Joe Dawson and Harry Grant, who have thrilled thousands.

DAWSON AND GRANT HONORED AT BANQUET

[illegible] Given Royal Reception by [illegible]

[illegible]

It was a gathering of the men most famous in local motoring circles, and a [illegible] world's records at the wheel of speedy cars.

Dawson is spending a few days in this city as the guest of Mr Wing, the local manager of the Marmon car, which [illegible] natural that Mr. Wing should arrange this little meeting in his honor.

The affair was entirely informal, being all the more enjoyable therefor. President A. A. [illegible] of the Bay State Automobile Association officiated as the toastmaster and his remarks were particularly [illegible]. He paid a glowing tribute [illegible] guests of the evening [illegible] work that both [illegible] of the country and especially of the many world's records that Dawson has established with the Marmon car.

He recalled [illegible] that Dawson was raced so consistently everywhere from the Atlantic to the Pacific [illegible] and the Marmon car finished the last racing year with [illegible]

[illegible] the honors, he was perfectly willing that Grant should [illegible]

[illegible] his Alco long before his friends around a dining table.

[illegible] long notice to make. He was pleased with the [illegible] the dinner had afforded himself and his friends.

A few short remarks were made by many of the following guests: J. W. O'Brien, C. J. Batley, M. H. Gelenine, W. H. Stevens, F. H. Lee, Howard Linerk, E. P. Waber, H. W. McNear, James Fortescue, J. M. WHAT CONSTITUTES "STOCK CARS"

[illegible] of A. A. A. Draws Line So Sharply That All Can Now Tell What's What.

[illegible] rules for 1911 [illegible] American Automobile [illegible] made no effort to [illegible] as would tend [illegible] a belief [illegible] of "stock [illegible]

The stock car definition has been rearranged and classified and is now divided [illegible] each setting forth clearly its particular requirements.

The registration fee is provided to defray the expenses of the technical examination at a factory before a car can be registered and listed as a "certified stock [illegible]."

A paragraph provides that a minimum of twenty-five cars must have actually been completed before a stock rating can be obtained. The ultimate percentage necessary to constitute a stock model may be 50 or 150 cars, but 25 of such model [illegible] stock rating.

The importer of foreign-built cars is placed upon the same basis as the American manufacturer, in that his total importations take the place of the total product of the American makers in calculating the percentage outlined in Para[illegible].

[illegible] basis the [illegible] same as during [illegible] stated than [illegible] boards [illegible] of the Technical [illegible] are clear [illegible] different classes [illegible] to hold [illegible] stock and [illegible] boards [illegible] will bear the [illegible] event [illegible] stock cars [illegible] in order that the [illegible] be left in doubt as [illegible] has frequently been the case in the past.

The classifications remain unchanged with the one exception that a reduction [illegible] made in the [illegible] stock [illegible] of the division of Class II.

BATCHELDER TO TOUR.

Representative of the A. A. A. Plans a Transcontinental Trip.

In order that the executive committee of the American Automobile Association shall be thoroughly informed as to the needs of the entire membership, President R. P. Hooper planned a transcontinental trip for A. G. Batchelder, chairman of the committee, and that official started February 16 on a trip which will take him to the Pacific Coast by the northern route, while the return will be made by the southern route.

The information secured will be transmitted to the executive committee, which will [illegible] position to appreciate [illegible] of the whole country. Chairman Batchelder will attend [illegible] gatherings of several State [illegible] special meetings of clubs and sessions of boards of directors, besides consulting with many others involved in the 40,000 membership of the association.

The itinerary includes Minneapolis, Omaha, Cheyenne, Salt Lake City, Denver, Twin Falls, Utah, Portland, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Phoenix, San Antonio, Houston, New Orleans, Montgomery and Atlanta, besides other cities which may be added to the list.

WRETCHED ROADS OF JAPAN

Hupmobile Completes 5,000-Mile Tour in Japan.

Japan, with its vein of hills throughout the length of the entire kingdom and its narrow, rugged roads, has long been the despair of the touring motorist. The Japanese with their usual progressiveness and adaptability have [illegible] since taken [illegible], but until the advent of the lightweight Hupmobile [illegible] country touring was practically out of the question in the Flowery Kingdom. Up to that time the cars in use were mostly of foreign make, too heavy and too low of clearance for the heavy going necessary to accomplish runs of any distance.

Recently [illegible] finished a tour of 5,000 miles, which covered the entire [illegible] Japan. Starting at Tokio, he drove first to Yokohama and thence down [illegible], from there skirting the western [illegible] as far north as Aomori, the extreme northern city in Japan, returning back along the eastern coast as far as Yokohama and then back to the starting point at Tokio.

IS NO LONGER A RICH MAN'S TOY

The Automobile Has Passed the Period Where It Can Be Considered as a Fad.

"That the automobile has passed the period where it was known as a fad and the rich man's toy is a certainty," says Walter E. Flanders, president and general manager of the E-M-F Company. "The motor car has become a necessity, and we could not do without it any more than we could get along without the telegraph, telephone or railroad. It is performing a service far better than any other invention known; it has taken its rightful place in our every day life, it has brought the city nearer the country; it has wiped away border lines; it has brought us better roads; it has made the sick well and brought back good health where medicine failed.

"With nearly four hundred thousand cars in use in the United States and the number increasing, the statement that the automobile is now a tool of civilization admits of but little argument. The so-called pleasure car is to a large degree an absolute necessity to a great number of people who could not be forced to give it up after learning its advantages.

"The motor car is an inevitable evolution that could not be balked. It has given employment to thousands of people. The industry has pulled up with it hundreds of accessory concerns who employ another large army of workmen. If all the motor car makers and allied trades should close their doors simultaneously more people would be thrown out of employment at one time than was ever witnessed in the mercantile world. The motor car is a necessity, it is here to stay, and its utility purposes make it a serviceable vehicle that progressive business and professional men cannot do without."

BUSY AS A BEE.

L. B. Butler Is Doing Something in the Truck Line.

L. B. Butler of the Butler Motor Company has been kept busy this week with orders coming in for the new four-cylinder one-ton and two-ton trucks. He says: "It is true one truck sells the other. Since placing an order with the Purcoxia Company for a two-ton four-cylinder, I have sold the Davis Ice Cream Company of Cambridge, J. S. Nelson & Sons, Salem; G. C. Raymond, Salem, and Bailey's Express of Wellesley. The Davis Ice Cream Company have had a Rapid in service for the past five years and due to increase in their business they were obliged to add to their equipment another motor truck. This second order which I have received from them shows their confidence in the Rapid truck after five years' experience."

GOODYEAR SEEKS NEW VICTORIES IN THE AIR

Well-Known Tire and Rubber Manufacturing Plant Is Seeking Fame In Aeroplane Line.

By F. A. SEIBERLING.

A new feather was added to the trophies in the Goodyear Company's cap a few days ago when contracts were closed which will allow this firm to furnish all rubber fabrics needed for Wright Brothers' and Glenn Curtiss's aeroplanes and for all balloons and aeroplanes made by Captain Baldwin.

It has just taken us a little less than thirteen years to rise above our competitors in a figurative sense and now we are going to do it literally. The idea that the manufacturers of engines were the only persons in the automobile trade who would find a place in the aeroplane world is very erroneous. Under the contracts just mentioned we will be called on to provide bumpers, shock absorbers, tires for alighting wheels, various weights of waterproofing and many other accessories.

What is more to the point, all of these goods must be of the very best quality obtainable. In air machines every part is dependent on every other part and human life and thousands of dollars is the sacrifice demanded for a single fault in material or workmanship. The most carefully made and expensive waterproof material obtainable is used for the aeroplane wings to keep them from going heavy with moisture from frogs or rain while wheel tires are especially light and resilient.

The popular impression that the late Charles Goodyear, who invented the process of vulcanizing rubber by the use of sulphur, founded or was one of the organizers of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, is quite a mistake. This firm started in business in 1898 and has had a most phenomenal growth since that time.

Another popular error is the belief that no car can be run with a deflated tire without injury to the tire. Our no-rim-cut tires have been tested repeatedly and will wear as long as if inflated.

WARREN PLANT ADDITION.

Detroit Manufacturer Branching Out in New Territory.

President Homer Warren, of the Warren Motor Car Company of Detroit, announced yesterday that work will be begun in a few days on a second big new factory building for the company. It is to be a sister building to the one which was recently completed in the Motor City.

The contracts for the new addition were let some time ago, and the contractors announce that they are ready to break ground this week. The building will be rushed to completion. The new plant is to be 68x178 feet and two stories in height. There is also a third building being planned for construction this Summer. It will be for the testing, repair and blacksmith departments.

The Warren-Detroit transcontinental car, the "Wolverine," is now passing through Iowa on its way to Frisco. Jack Muirhardt, the driver, hopes to be out of the Gumbo section before a thaw sets in, which would mean, at this season, that the car would virtually sink out of sight.

Seeking a Name for Three New Models

A Chance for New England Motorists to Get In on the Awards Which Will Be Made Very Soon.

The Cole Motor Car Company of Indianapolis, Ind., manufacturers of the Cole 30 automobile, are seeking a name for three of their models. They have adopted a novel method of putting the situation up to the public by asking the visitors of the Brooklyn, N. Y. and Newark, N. J., automobile shows to hand in suggestions. A prize of $25 is to be given to the party who gives three correct names, but if the three names comes from three different persons, the money will be divided.

G. E. & H. J. Habich Company, No. 117 Massachusetts avenue, New England distributors for the Cole 30 cars, asked L. S. French, publicity manager for the Cole 30 factory, who originated the idea, why it was not possible to allow Boston in on the deal. As a result, the Habich firm has received word that the New Englanders will be allowed to enter the contest and should they submit the names that are to be selected, the money will be paid to them.

Some time ago J. J. Cole, seeing the necessity of adopting a runabout that would meet with universal popularity, built several models. Two of the models have been retained, one now being known as the Gentleman's Roadster, and the second as the Speedster. But Mr. French wanted better names for these cars, and also for the firm's four-passenger touring car now called the toy tonneau.

TRUCK DISC CLUTCH BEST.

All Things Considered, Gramm Says, It Does the Work.

"Clutches in motor trucks have more to do with the long life and perfect working of the car than almost any other part," says B. A. Gramm of the Gramm Co., one of the ablest truck builders in the country.

"Years ago it became apparent to me that the clutch must be larger and of ample dimensions to take care of the most severe strains in commercial car work, and that the kind of clutch used in a pleasure car could never do for long life in the commercial.

"The three-fingered jaw clutch, as used on planetary transmission types, is very good for light pleasure work, but certainly is not a success for heavy commercial work. Some cone clutches work very nicely, but the great majority have a tendency to 'grab' and produce very bad results on the balance of the truck.

"The very best type, as I see it, and the one that, if made right, is absolutely perfect and gives at all times complete success and long life in a truck, is the multiple disc type. However, makers who use bronze and steel in their disc are certainly laboring under an error in commercial work. Theoretically, it is all right, but in daily practice it has been proved wrong.

"The multiple disc clutch for trucks should have the disc of considerably larger diameter and of good material and they should be made absolutely plain, without interfering springs, and should be encased thoroughly, and only a very light oil should be used. Heavy oils will cause a gumming that will mean heavy friction in the discs, which is injurious in shifting the gears of the transmission, but where a light grade of oil is used and the clutch is occasionally washed out with kerosene, not only perfect results will follow but a truck will be found to wear in all its parts at least five times longer than with any type of clutch."

MOTOR TRUCK PARADES.

Display of Commercial Vehicles Planned for Wednesday.

An actual demonstration of the practicability of the commercial vehicle has been planned for Wednesday next by the Manhattan Motor Truck Company. Something like a quarter of a hundred of Mack trucks, all in actual service in and about this city, will then make a run of some two hours in duration through the streets of Boston. The trucks will start on Ferdinand street and then cover this route: Columbus avenue to Heath street (Roxbury); Washington street, over Charlestown bridge, Main street to Sullivan square, Rutherford avenue, over Craigie bridge to Charles street, Boylston, Copley square, Huntington avenue, Massachusetts avenue, Tremont street to the Ferdinand street garage, where lunch will be served. The parade will start at noon and continue until 4 p. m. The trucks will be of all capacities from one to five tons, and will all be Mack trucks.

A Good Match.

Senator Morgan is trying to arrange a race at Daytona between David Bruce Brown in his Grand Prize Benz car and Felice Nazzaro in his big Fiat racer. It is proposed to hold the race on March 28, with a purse of $2,000 to the winner and $1,000 to the loser, provided one of the cars breaks the existing mile record. As Barney Oldfield, with his Blitzen Benz, made a record of 27.33 seconds for a mile last year, it is hard to see how cars with half this power can be expected to beat it.

NEW EXECUTIVES IN THOMAS PLANT

Executive Force of the E. R. Thomas Co. Secures Services of Some Capable Officers.

New executives going with the Thomas Company of Buffalo as announced from Detroit the past week tend to make this concern the most efficient motor car manufactory in America.

Edward P. Chalfont, who has been general sales manager for about two years with one of the largest manufacturers of high-grade cars in America, with headquarters in Detroit, has resigned his position in that company to become associated with the E. R. Thomas Motor Company of Buffalo as president, and three other officials, who are just as prominent, have resigned to accept positions in responsible capacities with the Buffalo concern. These are F. R. Humpage, who will be general manager of the Thomas plant, Albert L. Lovejoy and John Ramsey.

Mr. Chalfont is one of the most widely-known automobile men in America. For some time previous to joining the Detroit concern he was general manager of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, and he accepts his new position as a marked advancement in his career, having now connected himself with one of the most progressive automobile concerns in this country.

It is understood a well known New York banking house that is handling the financing of the company reports that a large amount of money is available, estimated to be $10,000,000.

Mr. E. R. Thomas is about to return from a short cruise in the West Indies at which time he will continue to be closely associated with the affairs of the company and devote his best energies to keep the Thomas cars to the front in the automobile industry.

With Power of Attorney.

It is very likely that if any automobile legislation is to be passed in New Jersey it will be accomplished only by the insertion of a power of attorney clause, by way of satisfying the demands of the farmers. Those who are interested in automobiling don't want to do this, but they may have to make this concession if they want the reciprocity clause enacted.

James Joyce Takes A Short Vacation

Prominent Motorist Severs His Connection with Famous Manufacturers and Seeks Rest Before Undertaking New Task.

James Joyce, who has been for five years in charge of the automobile department of the American Locomotive Company, has resigned. This news will be heard with regret by his host of friends, but he has long felt the necessity for a short rest. He is one of the best known men in the industry, having entered it from the old bicycle days. In 1897 he was with the Pope Manufacturing Company—the pioneers in the then fast developing bicycle business. He was known at that time [illegible] and was intrusted with important things by Colonel A. A. Pope. Later, when the New York Transportation Company was formed he became assistant to the president of that organization with headquarters in New York, and on his shoulders fell much of the detail of the management of that company. It was this organization which introduced taxicabs into New York City.

He resigned from that position to accept the factory managership of the A. and V. Tire Company, which established itself at Milltown, N. J., in the plant now occupied by the Michelin Tire Company. Resigning from that position after several years he became associated with Milton Rudsong, now Packard manager in New York, in the conduct of the Electric Vehicle Company of Hartford. Then came the offer from the American Locomotive Company, and for the last five years Alco cars and Alco trucks have taken all his time. Several companies have already approached him, but he has not made any decision as to his future connections and will not until he has had a rest.

War in the South.

According to a dispatch from T. E. Fitzgerald of the Florida East Coast Automobile Club, the proposed match race between the Benz and Fiat cars, which was scheduled to be held at Ormond on March 27, has been declared off, and in its place Barney Oldfield and his stable of outlaw cars and drivers have been substituted.

This apparent indorsement of Oldfield evidently means that the Florida East Coast Automobile Association has declared war on the A. A. A., which is doubtless due to the fact that the A. A. A. granted Jacksonville the sanction for the beach races which were sought for by the Ormond Daytona crowd.

SEATTLE BUYS CADILLACS.

Coast Joins Other Municipalities on Cadillac Ownership List.

The Seattle Fire Department after testing a [illegible] of automobiles of different makes, has ordered two 1911 Cadillac "30's" from the local agent, M. S. Brighton.

Fire Chief Boyle chose the Cadillac only after a severe test of the different cars. The service required of a motor car by a fire department is of a peculiar nature, necessitating as it does, lightning-like, dependable and economical service.

The Cadillac has proved itself peculiarly adapted to the needs of municipal departments. The city engineering department of Seattle purchased a Cadillac some time ago, while New York and Brooklyn use [illegible] Honolulu for municipal service.

It doesn't take a very wise head to tell that [illegible] much more rapidly than they need or and that the automobiles are getting a racking they shouldn't have to stand, just because of this excessive speed.

The path to success in tire making is a straight and narrow one.

Deviation from quality—slackness of workmanship, hasty inspection—scrambling for big contracts at the expense of tire quality—these are not the methods that have built up our business in

AMERICAN FACES IN THE SALONS OF PARIS

Portraits of Uncle Sam's Daughters by Famous Artists to Dominate the Exhibition.

A DETERMINED WESTERNER

Isabelle Pearson of Duluth Sells Life Insurance to Get Funds for Study In France.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—From present promises the portraits of well known American women will dominate the next Salon.

William Warden, a rising young American painter, is putting the finishing strokes upon a portrait of Lady Carrington, who was formerly Miss Juliet Warden of New York. She is very well known in English court circles, her husband having been Equerry to Queen Victoria. The young painter is her cousin. The portrait is admirable and has already attracted a great deal of comment.

Jules Cayron, who painted a remarkable picture of Mrs. William Ellis Corey for her chateau in the valley of the Chevreuse is also busily engaged upon several portraits of American women for the coming Salon. He painted the beautiful Countess Nostitz, the American wife of the Russian Military Attache.

Another of Cayron's Spring exhibits will be a portrait of the Countess Odon de Penar, formerly Miss Livermore of Boston. A great many critics think he has emphasized the large eyes and sveltenss of Mrs. Corey. Others declare the likeness is perfect and the picture one of the finest the artist has ever painted.

Pushing American Students.

Your American girl student really surprises and delights us. For instance, Miss Isabelle Pearson, of Duluth, decided she would be one a great organist. She had no money for her worthy enterprise, but she owned a life insurance policy which she sold for one thousand dollars. Then she went gaily to our greatest organist, M. Guilmant, and boarded him in his den. Today now this young girl has carried off a first prix as organist, and in a few days will be off to London town to take an examination for the Royal Academy of Organists.

This is the kind of push and energy that we Frenchmen admire.

It seems to me that American women are a very busy people. Following up the principle of practice making perfect, a number of well-known American women are taking a course of dancing lessons from no less a person than Madame Jean de Reszke. Judging from the immense sums de Reszke has already reaped from American women, added to what his wife is reaping from her lessons in dancing, this family will soon be numbered among the millionaires of the world.

One of their most promising pupils is Countess de Gontaut Biron, formerly Miss Martha Leishman. This young widow dances beautifully. Mrs. Stanton Sickles, daughter in law of General Sickles and wife of a former secretary of the American Legation at Brussels, is also an accomplished member of this exclusive dancing class.

Then there is Mme. Iturde, wife of the Mexican Minister; Mrs. John G. Leishman, wife of the American Ambassador to Rome, and the Russian-American Countess Nostitz.

Miss Haywood's Art Perquisite.

Miss Florence Haywood of New York has written a book on the art of the Louvre, our famous national gallery of painting and sculpture. Recently the young authoress has been conducting parties of American artists through the gallery delivering artistures.

It has been noticed that these parties have access to the building on days when it is supposed to be closed, for instance, Monday is cleaning day in all our galleries and on Thursday they are closed. But this in nowise prevents Miss Haywood and her wealthy friends from being admitted and making tours of inspection. How has this young American managed to get possession of our national gallery when all the rest of the world is shut out? The Minister of Fine Arts is the only man who can explain it, I guess.

Americans taxpayers are writing angry letters demanding an explanation. They would like to know why a foreigner who does not pay taxes should have the privilege denied them.

HAIR AND DIVORCE.

Bride Had False Teeth, Too; Husband Quits

GENEVA, Feb. 18.—There was an amusing scene in the court at Frauenfeld when a well-dressed man asked the Magistrate whether he could divorce his wife if she had found out she wore false hair and false teeth.

Upon the Magistrate saying he could do so, adding in the matter, the man became angry, and, pulling out a set of false teeth and some golden curls from his pocket, said: "I found these things on the table, and we have only been married a week. My wife has deceived me, and I want a divorce."

On being told to consult a lawyer, the man left the court in anger, brandishing the curls and saying that he was determined to have justice.

High-Priced Prison Cells.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—The public accounts containing the vote for prisons show that in the new jail to be built at Toulon each cell will cost $1,000. There seems little doubt that the inmates will have peace and quiet, but liberty will be denied them.

Royal Spendthrift Tries to Borrow $2,400,000

Princess Louise, Aunt of King of Belgians, Has Spent $1,200,000 She Inherited from Leopold.

BRUSSELS, Feb. 18.—King Albert and his aunt, Princess Louise, sometime wife of Philip of Coburg, are "at outs." The Princess has succeeded in spending the $1,200,000 she inherited from King Leopold, and is trying to borrow as much more on account of her inheritance from the ex-Empress of Mexico, Charlotte.

Empress Charlotte is now very old and has been insane for forty-five years. Since the tragedy in Mexico, when Maximilian was shot, the ex-Empress has lived in Belgium, and for the last twenty years she has been quite harmless. Her fortune has been put under sequestration, and is grown to the sum of $12,000,000.

Of this fortune Princess Louise will inherit some $2,400,000, and this she wants to borrow on post obit. She has asked King Albert to consent to the contemplated loan, but Albert refused his sanction. Then there were stormy scenes, for the Princess Louise has a violent temper, and the king lost his. Meanwhile, a dozen usurers are hovering about the Princess Louise, hoping that the royal spendthrift may yet persuade the King to give his signature.

Gold Bricks Found In Royal Treasure House

Only They Were Real Gold and Were Discovered by Manuel's Ex-Subjects.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LISBON, Feb. 18.—The treasure chamber beneath the Palace of Necessidades has been opened and examined by the Minister of Public Works at the request of King Manuel, who feared for the safety of the crown jewels and certain personal property of the royal family.

The jewels and valuables were found in the underground chamber intact. An inventory showed them to be worth upwards of $2,000,000. Among the jewels was a diadem of ex Queen Amelia and a necklace given her by her father, the Comte de Paris, valued at $200,000. There was found also a table service of solid German silver weighing over a ton, also a crown and sceptre of gold, studded with precious stones; also several bricks of gold, the largest weighing forty-five pounds.

The Minister of Finance announces that all valuables which are the private property of Manuel and his mother will be returned to them. Those belonging to the State, such as the crown and sceptre, will be placed in the National Museum.

Dwarf Buys Trousseau; $250,000 Life Insurance

Mlle. Comes From Hungary; is 26 Inches High, 26 Years Old—Will Soon Go to France.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—One of the smallest women in the world has been staying at the Savoy Hotel. She is only twenty-six inches in height, and her years are just as many.

Her name is Mademoiselle Anita and she comes from Hungary. She is engaged to be married and one of the objects of her visit to London is to buy her trousseau. Pretty and vivacious, she will no doubt make an exceptionally attractive bride.

Apart from her shopping, Mlle Anita is here for the purpose of arranging a $250,000 insurance on her life.

"She is not engaged for exhibition anywhere. She purposes visiting one or two British cities, and afterward she will go on to Paris. From there she will proceed to Berlin to meet her fiance.

Mlle. Anita speaks four languages—English, French, German and Hungarian.

PLOT AGAINST THE VATICAN

Freemasons Said to Plan Abolition of Foreign Representatives.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

MILAN, Feb. 18.—The Milan Catholic newspaper Unione publishes some amazing revelations about a plot organized by an international group of Freemasons in Paris with the object of forcing the Vatican to dismiss the diplomatic representatives accredited to the Pope.

According to the Unione, the Freemasons have formed a league of influential intrenuses and initiated a propaganda for the abolition of diplomatic representatives. Several letters have been sent to the Freemasons asking them to join the league. The Vatican is reticent, and refuses either to deny or confirm the existence of the alleged plot.

PRIMA DONNA'S ANKLES.

Court Decides Photographs Did Not Lie About Their Size.

VIENNA, Feb. 18.—The ankles of a prima donna were the "bone of contention" in a law case heard in this city. It was a question of the slimness of Mlle. Salina's ankles, which were represented in a photograph as less elegant than she thought they were in reality.

She refused to pay for the photographs, and the artist sued her for the money. The judge ordered Mlle. Salina's ankles to be measured and compared with the pictures by photograph experts. Their evidence was to the effect that the camera had not lied, and judgment was given against the prima donna.

NEW CANADIAN TIES NEEDED, SAYS STEAD

English, Sure of Loyalty, Favorable to Friendly Relations With America.

WORLD UNION OF ENGLISH

Desire Now Is for "Wedding of Uncle Sam and Madame Britannia."

By WILLIAM T. STEAD.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—We are all much pleased at the [illegible] which has been made by Champ Clark's facetious remark that reciprocity opens the door to annexation. Annexation is a bad word. Assimilation, permeation, fraternization—any of these words would have been better. To annex means to tie on what does not belong to you, with or without the consent of the annexed, and as far from resenting the idea that closer political union will naturally follow from greater commercial intercourse, there is nothing more decently to be desired.

Canada Is Loyal.

We are so sure of Canadian loyalty that we encourage rather than discourage every increase in her intimacy with the States, whether that be commercial, judicial or political. What we desire after the tiff of 140 years ago is that John Bull shall regard Miss Columbia, or, if you prefer it, Uncle Sam should woo and wed Madame Britannia. Now Canada is a cosy parlor for courting.

The Speech by Knox.

Secretary Knox's eloquent words as to the ties that unite Canada and the United States might well be applied almost without alteration of word to Great Britain and the United States. When he says there is not the slightest possibility that a racial and moral union will involve any political change he goes too far, for as other ties multiply political change will become necessary. A general arbitration treaty is a forerunner of many such.

United States of the World.

Dreamers are already talking of the United States of the World, and it is not such a far cry to the United States of the English speaking world, and Clark's speech, although intended as a joke, has set people's minds moving in the right direction.

Remember that it was Cecil Rhodes, the high priest of British Imperialism, who declared that he attached as much importance to the Anglo-American union that if it could not be obtained otherwise than by uniting the adjoining states as to be federated with the American public he would apply for admission.

CLOTHES A TARGET.

French Soldiers' Need of Less Glaring Uniform Urged.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—It is announced by Le Journal that the Minister for War has at last decided the time has come when the French army must adopt a less conspicuous uniform than that it at present in use. General Brun, it is stated, has ordered the drafting of a measure to be submitted to Parliament providing for the change.

Up to the present, France is the only great power which has retained the old style of uniform for its troops. The change which is now suggested is due, it is understood, to experiments carried out at the School of Musketry at Chalons. There it was found, as was already well known to every soldier in the world, that the blue coat and red trousers of the French infantry make them conspicuous at all distances than a uniform composed of a single color, either gray or gray-blue.

CONSCIENCE FUND.

Collected Holiday Gift Twice Returns $25 to Bank.

VIENNA, Feb. 18.—The sum of $25 "conscience money" has been received by the manager of a well-known Vienna bank from an Austrian who emigrated to America more than sixty years ago.

It was formerly the custom for apprentices to call at Christmas time on the firms with which their masters dealt for trifling presents. The old emigrant in a letter explained that he cheated the bank in question by calling twice for a Christmas gift, disguising himself on his second call in a shoemaker's apron. He duly received a second present of a florin.

The act has so weighed on his conscience ever since that he decided this Christmas to repay the florin to the bank with interest for sixty years. The bank manager has given the $25 to a charity.

BULL FIGHT IN STREETS.

Men and Women Injured Before Animals Are Captured.

MADRID, Feb. 18.—Casualties including three ex-matadors broken arms or legs, three men seriously hurt and several women slightly injured, accompanied an improvised bull fight in the streets of Sevilla.

Three young bulls, while being driven to herdsmen, took to flight, and the opportunity proving too good for the sporty Sevillians to lose, a "corrida" was organized in the streets. The street immediately became the arena of the wildest excitement, which lasted three hours, at the end of which time the struggle was transferred to an open square, the approaches to which were blocked by carts.

Here the amateur bull-fighters finally managed to capture and subdue the animals.

YANKEE CLIMBERS OUTWIT THE KAISER

Barred from Court Unless "Presented" Elsewhere They Work Petty German Royal States.

BOOK ON ROYAL LUNATICS

Daring Professor Marshals Mad Monarchs from Nabuchadnezzar to Louis II

By COUNT VON ELPHBERG

Special Cable to Sunday American.

BERLIN, Feb. 18.—The Kaiser's court officials have [illegible] that they are so much [illegible] cans who have and [illegible] presented."

Every year for decades several hundred of Americans have claimed this privilege. Applicants [illegible] so numerous that the Kaiser announced that he would not receive more than twenty Americans in any one year, and these had either to be presented by the American Ambassador or prove that they had been received at some other European court. By a Napoleonic stratagem, several Americans, who had no claim whatever, not even that of being multi-millionaire, have shown at court. This is the stratagem they have followed.

They began long ago by visiting the minor German States like Anhalt, Coburg Gotha and Oldenburg, where the local sovereign, having hardly ever seen an American, received the visitors with open arms and asked no questions about their positions. From these third-rate courts the Americans repaired to second-rate courts, like those of Strelitzarg and Dresden. Here they presented credentials from the third rate courts which they had just left and were duly received and entertained.

They departed with their pockets full of letters of introduction from their hosts. Lastly they descended upon Berlin, flourished their imposing credentials from the second class courts and the Berlin court officials could not refuse recognition of these credentials without running the risk of offending important German royalty. So the Americans were duly received by the Kaiser, while had they applied direct, to Berlin neither the United States Ambassador nor the court officials would have lifted to their pretensions.

A profound sensation has been caused by the public appearance of a book by the famous medical professor P. Coralesh, entitled "Lunatics as Monarchs and Leaders of Nations." The book was published under the auspices of the Medical Review of Munich. Coralesh pronounces the Russian Emperors, Peter the Third and Paul the First, insane, while there is an interesting chapter of King Louis the Second of Bavaria. The professor also demonstrates the Nero homosexual and Saul were epileptics. He proceeds to [illegible] to show the insanity of Mohammed, Swedenborg and Joan of Arc.

The current issue of "Simplicissimus," the daring illustrated paper which ever mercilessly lampoons those in authority, has been confiscated, owing to two vivid cartoons aimed against the Berlin police. One shows a condemned murderer on a scaffold revised by the police because he was their friend. The other shows bloodshed on the police shield caused by the brutal treatment of peaceful demonstrating crowds as revealed at recent trials.

BISMARCK BOOK.

Third Volume of Autobiography to Await Kaiser's Death.

BERLIN, Feb. 18.—It is announced that the third volume of Bismarck's autobiography will not be published during the lifetime of the present Kaiser.

The first two volumes were published some years ago, and contained many interesting revelations of the political events of the period of Bismarck's official career and many sidelights on the history of those times. The third volume is known to contain a drastically unfavorable verdict on the present Kaiser, written in connection with the circumstances which led up to Bismarck's dismissal from office in 1890, two years after William II's accession to the throne.

Marital Jars Laid Before Vatican

Mrs. Guernsey Curran

High Court of the Rota Invoked to Straighten Out the Postley Curran Tangles.

By VANCE THOMPSON

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—News reached the parlors Paris friends of the Postley-Curran families that that interfatigable campaigner, Mrs. Clarence Postley of New York, has carried the [illegible] of her domestic [illegible] but [illegible] to the Vatican.

It is understood that Mrs. Postley is proceeding on the advice of the pastor of San Silvestro Church, of which she is a great benefactress. She has every hope that the Catholic Church will declare her daughter Rhea's marriage null and void, as it took place in the Church of the Heavenly Rest in New York. But the case of her son is more difficult, as Hiriam Curran and Miss Cora were married by Father Prendergast of San Francisco and it is of the pipe.

[illegible] to find the necessary dispensation [illegible] of [illegible].

Mrs. Postley has also been informed by trained specialists that a specific disposal [illegible] required before her daughter can marry Guernsey Curran, as the bloom[illegible] her former husband's brother [illegible] puts the legal moot of affinity.

Mrs. Clarence Postley and Mrs. Curran are in Florence, but will go to Rome for the decision of the Rota and the session of their Week. The Rota is a congregation of cardinals for matrimonial cases and takes [illegible] cial by Pius X it has decided no [illegible] unless cases such as those of the Princess Bonaparte, the Princess de Caraman [illegible] the Castellane troubles. The Postley suit [illegible] No 48 Rue Bassano, Paris [illegible] up, but it will be accepted after [illegible].

The Singers in the News.

From Nice comes the news that Minnie Singer, if the Sewing machine family, has [illegible] "a flower man." He likes [illegible] names he knows up and down the Riviera. The origin of this distinction [illegible] his having paid forty dc [illegible] for a [illegible].

Mr Singer is also known to be interested in babies, and Madame Laurent Girius is [illegible] his weakness, played upon it. The forty d'ogre went to the Society for the Protection of Children. The news spread and every flower girl along the Riviera [illegible] up. Mortimer Singer for sums ranging from twenty to forty dollars.

When he [illegible] they tell him a story of [illegible] more and at Monte Carlo [illegible] are renting babies with the object of [illegible] the sympathetic Mr. Singer.

All the Singers are making records this year. The Princess de Polignac is the acknowledge leader of Paris society, although she shocks it by proudly boasting of [illegible] sewing machine and telling how the noble house of de Polignac has profited by virtue of her father's invention.

Winnie Singer has just made a record [illegible] a big sum at poker.

His daughter, Princess Obiza, has won [illegible] of golf, even to the hazing of Mr. Balfour and the Duchess of Marlborough.

Frank Sidger has also made a conquest and Mrs. Marvell Singer's record combat in having brought out her daughter, quite the prettiest and most accomplished girl in Paris.

HONEST CABMEN.

"Lost and Found" Department Shows Many.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—At the Paris Prefecture of Police there is a big department for "Lost articles." It has been said that there are no honest cabmen in Paris. But judging from the last number of articles turned over to the Prefecture by a single day the assertion is unmerited.

There are ninety-six pocket-books, for instance, waiting owners to reclaim them. There was a good sized check, to say nothing of pawn tickets galore. Most of the pocketbooks contained considerable sums of money. There were also three hundred umbrellas. This is evidence not only of honesty, but of very wet weather.

The police hope to establish a local article at the Prefecture establishes a good reputation for honesty on New Year's Day.

Denounces Cigarettes.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—M. Schlosseng, a member of the French Institute of Science and director of the Pasteur factories, has delivered an interesting address, in which he utterly condemns cigarette smoking tolerates cigars, and is enthusiastic as regards pipe smoking. M. Schlosseng has demonstrated that the combustion of tobacco in a pipe produces a small quantity of formic aldehyde than combustion in a cigarette. Inasmuch as formic aldehyde acts in diminishing the injurious element of alcohol, this is all in favor of the pipe.

EONA MAY GETS AN OFFER OF $3,750 PER WEEK IN VAUDEVILLE

Success of Mrs. Leviahn in "The Belle" Revival Brings Her Stage Temptations.

LADY GRANARD CRITICISED

Wears an Enormous Diamond Tiara [illegible] and the Latter Refuses Her.

By CHESTER D. OVERTON.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, Feb. [illegible] remarkable [illegible] special Mrs. Cornwallis-West's performances of [illegible] New York has not shaken her [illegible] to retire forever from [illegible].

[illegible] seems has been as emphatic as that of Mrs. Leviahn. On Thursday night Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck, Prince and Princess Louis of Battenberg and Princess Louise were in a box. Equally flattering was the record-breaking line for Mrs. Leviahn. At dinner each evening savoy court was jammed with the London [illegible] Mrs. Leviahn [illegible] which supported Mrs. Leviahn included Mrs. Langtry, formerly Miss Pamela Bishop [illegible] New York.

Leader Mrs. Leviahn's apartment at the Savoy Hotel, overlooking the Thames, is filled with huge floral pieces. One showing the British and American flags is made up of tuberoses, hyacinths and red roses. Under [illegible] the American colors is the sentiment "Lest we forget."

Speaking to the American correspondent, Mrs. Leviahn said:

Will Welcome Rest.

"I shall be glad, really when the opening night is over. I say frankly to the figure of the theatre now. Next week my husband and I go to Cannes to golf. This whirl of the stage has not aroused the least yearning to return. All I now there in support [illegible] to be a lady fit to [illegible] about, a [illegible] theatre, but my life is now completely changed. I have resolved to pass country places near Windsor and love to golf and travel, with an occasional glimpse of the city gaiety. I find this sufficient compensation for the fun and thrills of a stage career.

"I can say generally which is the better [illegible] as a [illegible] married life or a successful professional life. I should say the quality of the husband has much to do with the case and the temperament of the woman involved."

Asked whether it was not ethically [illegible] to boast the success of the judgment of her talents, she laughed and said:

"That's a compliment and not a question. That applies to Bernhardt, Duse or Melba but not to poor little me. It would be pitiful if the women of such talents as theirs retired from the stage. They are peerless and cannot be replaced. I feel that I am excused and may consider my own welfare first. I have been invited to go for charity once a year for a week, but I shall decline.

Tells of Great Offer.

"I have just received an offer from a music hall manager of $3,750 a week for [illegible] in vaudeville. I [illegible] that [illegible] it is jolly to be about again after four years' idleness, but I don't care to wear the expensive [illegible] My maid, who has been with me for years, said the opening night was 'just like old times.' Personally, I prefer the new ones."

Mrs. Leviahn was admitted to be the handsomest and best-dressed woman at a notable party given by Lady Astor. Dressed in red and [illegible] lady of her popular husband, just retired from active service in the navy. Mrs. Astor wore a wonderful gown of rose [illegible] satin, with a large cluster of diamond flowers across her corsage, and in her hair another strap of the same stones.

After Mrs. Astor, the most effective figure was the beautiful countess of Mar and Kellie, in white satin with diamond and pearl ornaments.

The party was remarkable for the number of people present who are distinguished in the world of diplomacy, politics, art and literature.

Lady Astor is one of the few American women who are not attached to England that she does not care to leave it even at this time of year, except for a flying visit to Paris to buy new gowns. During the coronation season Mrs. Astor will resume her series of wonderful dinner parties for "dukes and diplomatists."

Too Much of a Tiara.

The Countess of Granard offended some critics by wearing a large diamond tiara at the opening of Parliament. The Tatler, however, says:

"One of the newest processes, Lady Granard, gave out of demonstration of the fallacy that a large tiara is worn by small women head an ill-round. Lots of such vast dimensions that the lady herself was very nearly forgotten underneath it."

Lady Granard is a niece of Ambassador and Mrs. Reid and of Mrs. George Cavendish Bentinck, the criticism is discussed widely.

The Raven skirt is no longer a trash of the Paris manequins, but a fashionable reality. Bond street dressmakers are adding these new effects for dances. A young women in the fashionable crowd at the Carleton Hotel wore one of pink silk with a slit skirt so that each movement of the body revealed dainty trousers of pink silk boned at the ankle with gold cord. The trousers and the skirt of the gown were trimmed with cord the same.

Sister Veda of Mazdaznan Cult

MAZDAZNANS PUT OLD AGE TO ROUT

THIEVING, gambling, immorality all the sins will lose their hold on a person and a desire to live and do [illegible] will succeed all wrongful habits, if [illegible] becomes a Mazdaznan, according to Sister Veda. Don't try to reform yourself [illegible] Mazdaznan reform you.

[illegible] a Mazdaznan one must stop eating flesh of any kind and follow [illegible] especially [illegible]

[illegible] Mazdaznan one must [illegible] Sister Veda [illegible]

Sister Veda is the [illegible] of the Mazdaznan meetings in Huntington [illegible] Sister Veda is a wealthy woman [illegible] speaks several languages and has [illegible] abroad [illegible]. She has been a Mazdaznan [illegible] two years. [illegible] Mazdaznan [illegible]

Members Have Special Names.

Sister Veda [illegible] to [illegible] the Sunday AMERICAN [illegible] name [illegible] Mazdaznans [illegible] New York, Lowell and other eastern cities particularly [illegible] Sister Veda [illegible]

To be a Mazdaznan is [illegible] easiest of all things. You do not have to be converted, to enjoy an hysterical change of heart or lay down for yourself a set of impossible rules of moral and mental conduct.

To be a Mazdaznan you stop eating everything that is killed [illegible] dead flesh is poisonous [illegible] death [illegible] begets like. Eat death and you will [illegible] That is natural like. All animals die by the tooth or claw of other animals. We can live long by refraining from killing things.

"To be a Mazdaznan you breathe consciously, breathe deeply, breathe so as to fill the upper part of your lungs first. Then you won't have consumption. You will become intellectual. You will absorb all that is vital in heaven's free air and will obtain the best of it. Fill the upper part of the lungs first, then all of the lungs. Do this conscious breathing just so often every day. Fix your eyes upon something not less than three feet [illegible] forget [illegible] away and concentrate your mind upon it while counting the breaths in and out, one, two, three, four, five, six, seven and so on.

Finds Fountain of Youth.

"To be a Mazdaznan observe the other necessary rules of health. Study the words of Dr. Hanish, our leader, who at seventy-five years looks to be less than thirty. Eat little salt, much fruit, drink little water. But otherwise do as you have a mind to.

I have been a Mazdaznan only two years. But I am growing younger instead of older. That is the [illegible] of our cult, in which the sick become strong, the old young, the young younger and all live to a ripe old age, progressing in knowledge and spirituality, but retaining [illegible]

"There are no restrictions laid upon Mazdaznan followers. If you are a thief study the Mazdaznan faith just the same and go out and steal just the same. Get arrested and jailed. Suffer the consequences and learn your lesson. But do not eat meat and do breathe rightly and soon the desire to steal will be gone.

"If you gamble go forth and express yourself at the gaming table. Get enough of it. Lose your money and go to your wife and get all mixed up with the loan sharks and grocer's bills and suffer and have it over with. But do not eat meat and do breathe correctly and soon the desire to gamble will have disappeared.

"Don't Try to Reform."

"If you waste your time and strength making love promiscuously, keep at it. Go ahead and make a fool of yourself. Lose your fair name. Make trouble for yourself. Pay the penalties. But do not eat meat and do breathe correctly and soon the error of your ways will assert itself and you will quit the immoralities and be happy in the sunshine of pure life conduct.

"So through the whole category of misdemeanors. Don't try to reform yourself. Go ahead and pile up the suffering. But if you cease to eat meat and if you continue conscious breathing you will soon come to see like Solomon, that 'all is vanity and vexation of spirit' except right living and right thinking.

"You ask about Mazdaznans in other cities who have been known to dance or to jump or to take dew baths in the morning sunshine. There are fanatics in every church, of course. If one wishes to take a sun bath, let him or her do so. If there are consequences, let them suffer the consequences. They will quickly lose the desire to do foolish things. They will progress and become sensible."

SAN FRANCISCO FAIR WILL BE BEST EVER

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 18.—The world's fair [illegible] in 1915 will be [illegible]. The plans provide for an exposition which will far outdo [illegible] Paris, Chicago, St. Louis and everywhere else.

More [illegible] spent upon buildings [illegible] and exhibits than was ever [illegible] before in an enterprise of this kind.

The [illegible] will be as beautiful as [illegible] to make them and the architecture of the buildings will represent [illegible] of every known style. Visitors to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition will witness a sight they can never forget, for millions of money, genius and indefatigable effort will be expended to astonish them.

San Francisco will not only invite all the world to the Golden Gate, but when visitors arrive will have something to show [illegible] will be well worth a journey [illegible]

The [illegible] is to celebrate the opening of the [illegible] canal. Citizens of San Francisco [illegible] as the greatest port on the Western coast of America commenced [illegible] for the exposition as soon as the [illegible] of the canal began.

By the time their show opens they will have had more than ten years to prepare for it.

Since the earthquake and fire San Francisco has been rebuilt. It is a beautiful new city with superior hotels, theatres, parks, stores, buildings and stores. It is a pleasure loving, industrious, openhanded [illegible] warm hearted population.

Hospitality is a tenet of faith here and the glad hand will be extended and the [illegible] people from all over America, Europe, Asia and Africa.

There will be ample accommodations for the immense concourse of visitors and they will find rates reasonable.

Heirs of Maine Man Missing for Twenty-five Years Seek Estate.

LEWISTON, Feb. 18.—John Flaherty disappeared twenty-five years ago and has never been heard from since. Under the law he is presumed to be dead and the Probate Court has been petitioned to appoint an administrator to dispose of the property the missing man inherited from [illegible] relative. The heirs to Flaherty's estate are Catherine [illegible] Flaherty of [illegible] and Mary [illegible] and Bridget A. Cluch of Portland, his sisters.

CHARLES RIVER TO BE ANGLERS' PARADISE

Perch and Trout to Abound in Landlocked Waters in Another Year

If there be fish in the sea as good as ever were caught, the same may be said of the Charles River Basin, where within a year, the authorities say, one may angle a dinner out of the depths of that landlocked water. One is sure to get a good mess of white perch and reasonably certain of landing at least a course of brown trout when the Metropolitan Park Commissioners [illegible] the bars.

With [illegible] of the [illegible] and some [illegible] sand acres enclosed, there is [illegible] to be great sport by and by. With little ado the Fish and Game Commission has liberally stocked the waters, and Dr. George W. Field, instructor in [illegible] biology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and employed by the Fish and Game Commission, says that first class [illegible] for the adherents and disciples of Izaak Walton will be ready at the basin [illegible] from then on, he says, with careful [illegible] and conservation, the sport will [illegible] prove and the annual catch [illegible] case.

How River Was Stocked.

The Fish and Game Commission has stocked the water as follows:

In 1909 it put in 1,500 brown trout "fingerlings," which means trout about one finger in length, 325 adult brook trout, the world-famed "speckled beauties," native to or endemic in North America only, and the aristocrats of all the fish family; 475 white perch, one of the best (many think the best) pan fish [illegible] found in salt water alone [illegible] propagated in fresh water. 1,5[illegible] brown, or European, trout. Last year 183 adult white perch were added.

It is proposed to plant some hundreds of the gamey black or small mouthed bass, pike, perch and pickerel.

The fingerling trout put in the basin a year ago last Fall ought to be a parent fish now and big enough to give much joy to the angler as he battles to land the beauty.

Another fish to be a great source of pleasure and profit in the basin is the Potomac River catfish, one of the best of food fishes. About twenty years ago the federal government stocked Martha's Vineyard waters with the variety, using only nineteen parent fish. The annual catch of this splendid species is now worth more than $5,000, and all the descendants of the original plantation.

Fish Will Stay in Basin.

That gives an idea of what one may expect in a few years in the Charles River Basin.

"The problem," said Dr. Field, "is to stock with fish which get along very well together. The trout and bass are surface fish, that is, they feed on the surface; the perch and catfish feed on the bottom."

The problem of keeping the fish in the basin and preventing their escape to sea through the lock of the basin's dam is a small one, in Dr. Field's opinion.

"They will not want to go out into salt water," he said. "The trout will live well upstream and breed there, coming down only after spawning. The other fish also will stay in the basin."

There is a possibility that some salmon may go in and spawn, but it is improbable, as the water of the harbor is not only too much polluted for a salmon's liking but it is not cold enough to suit that discriminating fish.

William A. Scott, the head of the fishing tackle department of the Iver Johnson stores, believes that the prospect for fine sport on the Charles River Basin is splendid. He does not think that brook trout, the species known as salmo fontinalis, can be reared successfully there.

The Gamey Brook Trout.

"That is the very finest fish in the world," he said, "and must have absolutely pure water to thrive and be at its best. The waters of Maine in spite of all precaution are each year becoming more or less polluted and the brook trout is diminishing. I fear this splendid fish—which is an absolute aristocrat—must go. All other kinds of fish are increasing where modern methods of stocking and conservation are employed. But I fear the problem of the brook trout is beyond us. We have to go further into the wilderness each year to get him at his best. The brown trout and the rainbow varieties do better as they are hardier. Yet neither of them are game."

There are no carp in the Charles River Basin and none will be put there as the carp is a gourmand and thrives at the expense of the other and infinitely superior varieties and it is coarse and rank compared with them.

The Metropolitan Park Commission has not yet decided what it will do in regulating the catching of the fish or how long an open season will be allowed. Just who shall be allowed to fish and when the fortunate ones may angle remains to be determined.

DROPS $30,000 VIA RUM ROUTE, 7 YEARS

Prisoner Devoted Seven Years to Solution of the "Capacity" Problem.

Fellow students in original research in Boozology deeply sympathize with Max Meyer of No. 338 Salem street, Malden, who is serving a sentence of six months in the Middlesex County House of Correction. They are of opinion that Mr. Meyer is one of the Grand Army of Martyrs in the Cause of Science. According to the [illegible] heard before Judge Bruce of the Malden District Court, the prisoner [illegible] for the last seven years devoted all [illegible] to the solution of the [illegible] of intoxicating [illegible] seven years by strict attention to that business.

Mathematicians at Work.

Strange as it seems to those interested in the scientific aspect of Boozology, Mrs. Meyer grew somewhat peevish at her husband's devotion to science, especially when [illegible] resulted in the expenditure of $30,000, the Meyer fortune [illegible] in which he was pursuing his researches into a subject which has baffled the most learned dieticians since the days when the late Noah, who settled down [on] Mount Ararat, invented the booze and went into the wine [illegible] business.

Expert mathematicians have been figuring just how large a quantity of intoxicants Mr. Meyer consumed in the seven years in which his wife asserts he spent that $30,000 for drink. This would give an approximate average expenditure of $4,286 a year or $15 a day, exclusive of Sundays. These experts regret Mrs. Meyer's failure to go into complete details as to whether her bibulous spouse drank only beer, restricted his liquid diet to whiskey, flew high onto the champagne line or mixed his drinks.

Would Cost $15 a Day.

However, on the basis that he drank only beer and drank alone (which is hard to be considered) they have figured it out that $15 a day would permit him to swallow 150 hods or scuttles of the foaming amber liquid. This would be about thirty seven and one-half gallons a day, or 11,250 gallons a year, not counting Sundays, making a grand total of 78,750 gallons for the seven years. This, they say, would mean a foaming sea of beer in which the biggest Dreadnaught of the navy might comfortably float. Assuming Mr. Meyer took the ordinary bar glass, the quantity of course would be reduced by a trifle over one-half.

If Mr. Meyer drank whiskey, the ordinary bar whiskey at 10 cents a throw, his daily $15 would mean 150 drinks. With about twenty drinks in the average quart as sold over the bar, this would give him about 7½ gallons a day, or approximately 14,700 gallons in the seven years. If he went the champagne route his finances would permit of a daily average of about three and a third quarts of champagne.

The probability is that he drank something on Sundays, in which case his average would not only be reduced, but some of the money must have gone for the rental of the Sunday sandwich.

Also the investigators reluctantly admit his liquid average might be lowered by the discovery that he spent some money for cigars or cigarettes and perhaps for food. Also he may have been a "good fellow" and spent some of his money for treating. However, they are willing to give him the benefit of the doubt.

GIRLS TO APEAR IN BARNARD MEMORIAL CHILDREN'S FESTIVAL

MISS THERESE WEISCOPF

MISS ELOISE WEISCOPF

CIHLDREN TO DANCE IN ANNUAL FESTIVAL

THE children's annual festival conducted by the Barnard Memorial, which is located at No. 10 Warrenton street, will be held in Mechanics Building on Washington's Birthday. The entertainment will be in the main hall and there will be extra music, new costume dances and patriotic marches. The novel dancing will be under the direction of Mrs. Lilla Viles Wyman, and there will be general dancing free to all children. Theresa and Eloise Weiscopf are to take part in the program.

There is every reason to believe that the great hall, which will accommodate 6,000 children and their parents or friends, will be filled. Parties of children from churches and Sunday schools will find this a rare opportunity for organizing festival parties and having a most enjoyable time on the holiday.

A good lunch at a reasonable price will be served and ample room for private lunches will be at the disposal of those who attend. The dancing and the marches will provide an enlivening spectacle for old and young

$1,000,000 ROBBERY IN BANK OF ROME

Burglars Kill Two Night Watchmen and Loot Vaults of Institution.

ROME, Feb. 18.—The great Exchange Bank, near the Stock Exchange, was looted by burglars early. The burglars killed the two night watchmen, who were attempting to defend the vault of the institution, and escaped with a vast sum of money. The crime was the most daring in the history of Rome.

It is reported that the burglars secured more than $1,000,000, though a complete count of the cash in the vaults will have to made before the exact loss is determined. There were at least five men in the gang, and they had either a wagon or an automobile to carry away the booty.

Among the funds stolen were many bags of gold, which could not have been carried through the streets without arousing suspicion.

When the bank was opened this morning the two watchmen were found dead. The alarm was sounded immediately, and every policeman in the city was placed upon the case.

Mayor Nathan is personally directing the hunt for the criminals and every outgoing train is searched.

It is believed the burglars are Anarchists, a large number of whom had been attracted to the city by the visit of King Peter of Servia.

William Rockefeller Better.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—At the office of William Rockefeller to-day it was stated that the financier's condition was much improved. He passed a comfortable night.

Comfort for skin tortured babies and rest for tired, fretted mothers.

A warm bath with Cuticura Soap, followed by a gentle anointing with Cuticura Ointment, is generally sufficient to afford immediate comfort in the most distressing forms of itching, burning and scaly eczemas, rashes, irritations and inflammations of infants and children, permit sleep for child and rest for mother, and point to permanent relief when other methods fail. Peace falls upon distracted households when Cuticura Soap and Ointment enter. No others cost so little and do so much.

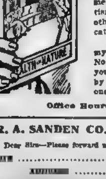
Gives Men This Vitality of Youth

Vitality is the thing which makes success. It gives men that compelling power which sends them forth eager and equipped to meet and overcome all obstacles; it is the thing which gives the young soldier courage to face death. It is the thing which inspires and holds his sweetheart's love and faith. No matter what your age, I can give you this same vital strength. I can restore the health you have lost from any cause; I can make you "young" and keep you "young." From an intimate and studious observation of possibly 100,000 weakened men, I say to you that VITALITY or the lack of it means all the difference between a healthy man and a half man. The man who bubbles with vital strength will exert a pleasing influence upon all with whom he comes in contact; women are naturally attracted to him, as are men. Lack of vitality is a negative condition, and it even repels. You wear my HEALTH BELT all night; it sends a great glowing, health-giving current of electro-vitality into your nerves, blood and organs; it takes all the "kink" out of your back and all the coward out of your make-up; it puts you right up in the "feeling fine" class, and keeps you there. No stimulation, no false results; just a sure return to health and courage. The special electro-vital suspensory, free with each belt. Recommended also for rheumatism, pain in the back, kidney, liver, stomach and bladder disorders, it makes you feel young and keeps you feeling young forever.



Let Me Send You This Book FREE

It fully describes my Health Belt and contains much valuable information. One part deals with various ailments common to both men and women, such as rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder disorders, etc. The other part is a treatise for men. Both sent upon application, free, sealed by mail.

If in or near this city, take the time to drop in at my office, that you may see, examine and try the Belt. No charge for advice, either at my office or by mail. If you cannot call, fill in the coupon and get the free book by return mail. It is better than a fortune for any one needing new vigor

SLEEP AT SWITCH? NO! SWITCH GONE

Detailed Narrative of Grim Tragedy Unrecorded at Lexington Carnival.

There's an old wheeze about woman's hair. It goes this way.

"When it comes to woman's hair nowadays, you can't tell which is switch."

At any Men's Club or stag party you can raise a laugh by pulling this joke. Men think it funny, making game of the way their poor wives and mothers and sweethearts dress their hair.

Women don't think it's funny, though. They know that hair-dressing and all it means is a serious affair. Suppose a group of women are talking. Let one interrupt:

"Oh, say, I've learned a lovely new way to do up my back hair."

Every topic is tabled indefinitely till the new way is explained, with demonstrations and all. Most women would rather get a new and nifty way of handling their hair than be the mother of the Gracchi.

Allowing for the general gravity of the subject of woman's tresses, imagine then, the depth of despair indicated in the following "Lost and Found" advertisement just published in Boston:

LOST, while tobogganing Lexington carnival, brown hair switch. Please communicate with B 835, reward.

She Waited Weeks.

Picture it. There she was, out at the long-deferred Lexington carnival. She had waited weeks and weeks for Winter carnival weather. The weather came and the carnival was held.

There she was at the carnival. She was tobogganing. Her cheeks glowed with rosy color. Her eyes sparkled. She was serenely confident that she looked her prettiest. Probably she wore one of those fetching toques on her head. She was cosy in furs and a pretty suit. She squealed with delight as she shot down the toboggan chute at breathless speed.

Suddenly, with that extra sense which women have, she felt that something was wrong. She surveyed her costume hastily in the searching comprehensive way that women do. She gave herself sundry pats here and there. She put one exploring hand to her head, to her hair. Horrors!

A woman's shrill scream rent the air. Men turned pale. Women collapsed.

Her escort reached out with protecting arm.

"What's the matter—are you hurt—lean on me—would you like a glass of water—or a carriage—or shall I telephone—do tell me."

That Vanished Feeling.

She gasped: "I've—I've lost——"

"Yes, yes, dear, what is it—your pocketbook."

"No—I've lost my—I've lost my switch, if you must know."

And she sat right down and wept bitterly, for it was a beautiful switch and it matched her own grown-on-her-head hair to a fraction. And she knew she'd never get another like it, so there!

So she advertised it. With reward, too. It was a "some" switch.

She wonders who's wearing it now. Maybe it was found by some other woman of the same shade of hair and without any conscience to speak of. Maybe the other woman is wearing the switch now and has pocketed the coin her husband gave her to buy a new one.

Maybe it was trampled in the snow and will not be found till next Spring. It won't be any good then. Besides they may not be wearing switches next Spring.

Girls who go tobogganing on the municipal coutes at Franklin Park are warned to look to their switches.

STATE WATER INQUIRY.

Connecticut Commission to Study the Question of Drouths.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Feb. 18.—The fresh water supply of the State is to be surveyed with a view to greater conservation and to prevent drouths, to learn all that is possible about supplies for towns and cities, and the amount of water power within its borders.

The survey has been planned by a State commission. The Legislature is expected to appropriate money for the work, and the United States Geological Survey has offered to duplicate any reasonable amount decided upon by the solons at Hartford.

NEW LONDON, Ct., Feb. 18.—The Lawrence Theatre, the oldest in New London, was gutted by fire to-day. Loss $40,000.

Mme. Lipkowska Has Three Proteges
Boston Girls Get Tips on Singing

Mme. Lipkowska and girls she has aided. From left to right, Florence Osgood, Eleanor Bennett and Susan Rossi

MME. LIPKOWSKA

FROM the open window of a suite at Huntington avenue and Gainsboro street came the tones of a rich soprano voice. The Conservatory girls, hurrying on their way to take their lessons, paused as they heard it, and walked slowly, while the clerk at the soda fountain of old Dr. Putnam's drug store said to an old lady from the Hotel Bartol:

"I guess that's Madame Lipkowska practising."

But it was not Lipkowska. Up stairs in the spacious apartments of Lipkowska were several young women, more or less nervous, each with a music roll in her lap. An accompanist sat at the piano, Lydia Lipkowska in a comfortable house gown leaned against the magnificent instrument and smiled encouragingly at Miss Eleanor Irene Bennett who was doing the singing.

When Miss Bennett had finished it would be the turn of the other girls, for Lipkowska was hearing voices this morning.

Woes of a Prima Donna.

The young woman with the voice is the bane of the successful soprano singer. She writes letters, rings doorbells and demands a hearing with more persistence than a book agent. The fame of Lipkowska has brought her share of attention from budding artists, but unlike many singers she is willing to hear those whose letters are most interesting.

Miss Bennett, who is the daughter of H. J. Bennett, claim agent of the electric road at Fitchburg, Miss Florence P. Osgood, daughter of Mrs. Helen Osgood of No. 1 Regent street, Roxbury, and Miss Susan M. Rossi of No. 200 Hanover street were selected by the prima donna for trial, and they arrived with palpitating hearts and a do or die expression.

Lipkowska does not speak English, although she knows Russian, French and German, and none of the young women could talk with her except through an interpreter. Yet she discussed with them in the most careful manner the quality of their voices and their mistakes or successes in singing.

"This is the second time that Madame Lipkowska has heard me," said Miss Bennett to an AMERICAN reporter. "I heard her first in a concert at Fitchburg, and as I am ambitious to become an opera singer I wrote to her telling her my hopes and my admiration for her own art.

"She replied so sweetly that I was charmed and she invited me to come to her apartments and sing for her. At first I was afraid to do so, but her letter was so urgent and thoughtful that I came. She had been very kind and given me many little hints which will undoubtedly improve my singing. She has corrected my breathing, my trilling and my bravura, and she has told me such encouraging things about my voice that I shall continue my studies with greater ardor than ever."

Miss Florence Osgood was equally delighted with her experience.

"She took me herself to the piano and stood beside me all the time I sang. I was frightfully nervous to think that a famous artist who has sung in the greatest opera houses in the world should be there ready to criticise my singing. I really couldn't sing at all, I was so excited, but she was patient and kind and has a way of making you feel perfectly at ease. And then through the interpreter she explained to me many things which showed it was not a perfunctory hearing; that she actually found things to admire as well as to criticise.

"Of course I have sung much better at home when there was no one around to frighten me than to-day, but madame has invited me to return and sing for her again, and next time I will not feel uneasy at all."

"I am so glad to have sung for Madame Lipkowska," said Miss Rossi. "I have heard her in opera many times and cannot understand how such a busy artist can find the time to hear girls who have no claim whatever upon her, not even the claim of nationality, for she is a Russian, and my people are Italian. I am sure she would be a wonderful teacher. If I could sing for her half a dozen times I am sure I would make more progress than in many months under ordinary teachers. I have been studying voice ever since I left high school, and I hope some day to go on the operatic stage myself.

"When I applied for a hearing from Lipkowska I had little hope of getting it, but now that she has encouraged me I can continue my studies more hopefully."

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 56

Distribution the Problem of the Twentieth Century

The great problem of the 20th century is distribution—how to get goods where they are needed.

As hands serve the body conveying food to the mouth so distribution serves production—taking goods from the place where they are made to the place where they are used. Many factors enter into distribution—the agent, the jobber, the wholesaler, the retailer, the consumer.

The man who has solved his distributing problem has worked out one of the most baffling parts of his business. Just as oil lubricates a bearing so advertising lubricates the whole process of distribution. It makes the consumer, the retailer, the wholesaler, the jobber, the agent, turn to your goods.

Some people think of distribution in an unsound, illogical way. They think if they can get their goods to the jobber, that is all the distributing they need to worry about. Others cut out all intermediary factors and go direct to the retailer. These consider their distributing problem solved when they get their goods on the shelves of the dealer.

Think of the danger they run—lack of aggressive salesmanship for their product on the part of the intermediary factors or the salesmen in the store. Think how often goods are not properly displayed because there is not a demand on the part of the consumer to stimulate a display on the part of the dealer.

The whole solution is general advertising. General advertising is the logical method of helping the distributing factors of your business. It is the sound method of reaching the ultimate market, which is the lever on all of the distributing machinery.

Start a strong consumer demand on the dealer and you start the dealer to ask for the goods either of the manufacturer direct or of the wholesaler, jobber or agent. The greatest difficulty that modern business has to overcome is an inefficient distributing system. When business solves the problem of distribution it will have solved the problem of ideal factories, men out of work and many of the ills and trials that civilization entails.

Advertising is of various kinds, general and intensive. Intensive advertising is newspaper advertising and the most direct and forceful of all advertising. It is the advertising that reaches the individual oftener than any other kind and goes to him with the introduction of the paper that he likes. The merchant finds it most effective in bringing people into his store and the manufacturer will find it most effective in getting people to ask for his goods. Some papers have great weight in the local field. Some papers reach more people in the country than others.

Take the New England field. There is no paper that has so large a circulation as the Boston American. It reaches almost 400,000 readers each day and it's the paper that reaches the masses and the classes who are the great consumers.

MRS. H. A. STINESS CABLES FOR DIVORCE

Granddaughter of Ex-Governor Sprague Determined to Have Knot Cut.

PARIS, Feb 18.—Mrs Henry A. Stiness a granddaughter of ex Governor Sprague of Rhode Island, has written and cabled to her Providence lawyer to go ahead with her divorce from the young man are married four years ago

Mrs Stiness was Miss Ines Sprague before her marriage and is the daughter of William Sprague Jr [illegible] forth [illegible] sympathy for [illegible] [illegible] Wheaton of Cleveland after the death of young Sprague, and who is at present the wife of [illegible] Rode a [illegible] aire Porto Rhan

Son of Chief Justice.

Mr Stiness, whom his wife is about to divorce, is the son of the former Chief Justice of Rhode Island He is a Providence lawyer The formal charge against him is non-support, and this is easily proved, as Mrs Stiness has been in Paris over a year, during which time her husband has con[illegible]

Mrs Stiness [illegible] Paris lawyers about [illegible] France and they advised her to get it in Rhode Island There is one child a [illegible] the [illegible] of Providence also have to do [illegible] The tragedy of this divorce is emphasized by the fact that the [illegible] couple eloped from Ines Sprague's grandfather [illegible] at Canonchet Narragansett Pier four years ago. When leaving America after the historic house of Canonchet had been burned, Mrs Stiness promised her [illegible] not to seek a divorce for one year

Families Are Foes.

Her application for divorce has infused a temporary energy into her grandfather, the last of the war Governors, who is dying slowly, for he looks upon the Stiness family as his deadliest enemies ever since [illegible] Stiness pronounced such harsh [illegible] against him when the vast Sprague interests were before the courts When his granddaughter informed him that she had just taken measures to rid herself of Stiness the brave old warrior sat up in bed and fought the battle [illegible] over ag[illegible]

"OH YOU BROCKTON!" THAT'S PAST THE CENSOR; BUT NO "OH, YOU KID!" SAYS MAYOR

"O, you kid!"

"Me for you, bun!"

Never no more; not in Brockton, Plymouth County, Massachusetts, U. S. A.

The first Brockton daredevil who smokes cigarettes and stays up all hours—away up until 9 and 9.30 p. m.—hanging around Main-street corners from Belmont up to Pleasant street and pulling the "O, you kid!" chatter on the pretty girls of Plymouth's only city, is liable to arrest and a fine of $20. If he hasn't got the money, City Marshal Micah B. Allen says the cut[illegible] twenty days

Marshal Allen got his orders the other day from Harry C. Howard, the handsomest Mayor in New England.

Mayor Howard who is thirty-three years old and a native son, is a building contractor He is a member of the firm of George Howard & Sons Company When he was seventeen years old he superintended the construction of the public library at Dexter, Me. Now he has undertaken the contract of cleaning a New England city of the corner loafer who, grown bolder with the tolerance of years, no longer is content with merely commenting on the women who pass, but dares to address them flippantly and sometimes in an insulting manner.

MAYOR HARRY HOWARD

Hits Three Bullseyes.

The new Mayor of Brockton rang the bullseye three times in the week just past, getting the police to go after these corner gangs, securing a promise of better train service from the New Haven railroad, and putting an end to boxing matches.

Brockton would be glad to see the streets cleared of the corner tough, frequently in clean linen and good clothing provided by hard-working mother and sisters. Brockton rejoices and is glad because the Mayor has secured the New Haven promise to do something better than an hour-and-fifteen-minute trip to Boston—twenty miles away—and to stop the sending of Boston trains by way of West Quincy and East Milton.

With reference to boxing matches, however, opinion in Brockton seems to be divided The Mayor says the boxing clubs had grown too numerous and were pushing the game too hard. There were two clubs, Bill Foley's Bay State Athletic and Ben Chase's Shoe City Athletic. Friends of the Mayor say that he was "forced by a growing public sentiment to take drastic action."

Bill Foley, that gentleman's followers declare will be very much surprised if the young Mayor fails to hear in no uncertain tone from the various antiquarian and historical societies.

Some Ancient History.

"Far be it from me," said William, standing last night at the corner of Main and centre streets and taking right smart care not to say, "O, you kid!" "far be it from me," William observed, "to take umbrage at, or exception to, any order promulgated by the Main Cheese; and yet, at the same time, methinks His Honor is [illegible] familiar with the history of our noble city.

"Man alive! if there is one city in all the world that ought to be wide open on the athletic stuff, here she be—Brockton, Mass. Maybe the Mayor doesn't know it. I wasn't hep myself until the other day here, when his order comes out—me having a show booked for Wednesday night—and a friend steers me to Bradford Kingman's 'History of North Bridgewater' published by the author at Boston in 1866. [illegible] of the settlement in 1650, the settling of the North Parish after 1700, the incorporation in 1856, making the town in 1871 and putting us on the list of cities in 1881.

"I don't go in strong for literature, but there was a chapter there on 'Early Habits and Customs' that made me sit up and wonder if the Mayor knew he had shot a hot right to the kidneys of precedent. Listen, kid—and say, if you're writing this, cut that 'kid stuff.'"

Bets and Stimulants.

Mr Foley read:

The people of Brockton (the "North Parish") in the [illegible] in its early settlement were on a footing of remarkable equality. In the social gatherings of the young people dancing was a favorite amusement, generally using a fiddle. If that could not be had, they used to dance by whistling and singing the tune.

Wrestling was very common especially at raisings and social and public gatherings. When at the raising of buildings the labor was over [illegible] stimulated to the treat [illegible] [illegible] This sport [illegible] [illegible] older persons [illegible] in the same exercise. Wagers would be laid, and a little more stimulant taken to give elasticity and strength to the parties. In course of time parties would get in earnest; angry words and defiant gestures would be made, and it generally ended in a fight. These wrestling matches, we are happy to say, are nearly gone by.

"There you are," said Mr. Foley, "there's history straight from the book! Two hundred and ten years old. the game is in Brockton and the Mayor puts it to sleep after we had cut out the laying of wagers, the taking of stimulant and the angry words in which our naughty forefathers used to indulge in in the good old days. What's the use, k—I mean cull—what's the use?"

"Cut It Out," Says Mayor.

Mayor Howard, well groomed and dapper looking said he wasn't going to enter into a controversy with anybody on the question of the boxing clubs, but intimated that the game had been overplayed "I had received many complaints," Mr Howard said, "and I felt compelled to take action I sent word across the street to the City Marshal to 'cut it out,' and I expect the Marshal will do his duty"

Complaints from all sections of the city about the service on the New Haven led the Mayor, he said to take the question up with the officials of the road He got their prompt agreement to instal a better service beginning to-day

"And the third bullseye?" Mr Howard was asked

"Meaning?" His attitude of waiting was that of a rising young statesman.

"O, you kid!"

Mr Howard was serious

"Well" he said, "I presume Brockton is not unlike other cities in being plagued by the corner loafer This action of mine in [illegible] upon the marshal to clear Main street of a nuisance was no sudden impulse. I have been giving it thought for years. Coming into power being personally responsible if I tolerated it another day—I determined to make the streets of Brockton clean and safe at all hours for women and girls"

Now in Boston.

"But," an inquisitive Bostonian was prompted to say, "what have you got to do with the police? The Mayor of Boston might order and order and ——"

"In Brockton," said young Mr. Mayor, smilingly, "the Mayor of the city appoints the city marshal. In Brockton, also, the Mayor appoints new policemen from the civil service list, subject to the approval of the Aldermen. He also has the power of removal."

City Marshal Allen, who has been on the force twenty-four years and in charge a twelvemonth, admitted that the "O you kid" order had come over to East Elm street from City Hall, and said that fifty-[illegible] had been instructed that [illegible]

"[illegible]," said the marshal, "as the first fresh young man will find out when we get him"

Mr [illegible] sending out six "inspectors" in "plain clothes." Being each as well known in Brockton as W. L. Douglas or the [illegible] or Hathaway's, the "plain clothes" men were held up at every corner by such questions as "Anybody sick, Mike?" and "Lo, Bill! Allen ain't canned yer, has he?"

So the marshal cut out the plain clothes stuff and issued general orders

There are some folk in Brockton who didn't vote for Harry Howard at the recent election Some of these gentlemen sneeringly allude to the new deal as "Reformitis." They "wonder how long it will last." They say that almost any day, now, the next move will be to condemn the paintings of "Peace" and "War" in the City Hall lobby, and ring in a hurry call for the kalsominers

If you've seen the beautiful painting of "War," in the lobby of Brockton's City Hall, you know that "Peace" has got very little on her and neither has "War."

Mr. Howard's friends laugh at the suggestion that the new Mayor is a mollycoddle They want to know didn't he go out here, the other day, and drive "Con" Thornell's Redondale, b. g., one mile over the West Elm street speedway in 2.12? Which, they say was some driving

Meanwhile, "Oh, you Brockton!"

SHAW WILL FIGHT COPPER POOL PLAN

President Quincy A. Shaw of the Calumet & Hecla Mining Company on his return to Boston took a hand in the present war raging over the [illegible] of this [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] against a [illegible] to control the stock of the main company and the other mining corporations to be taken in under the proposed consolidation of the properties President Shaw says.

"The directors of the various companies desire to protect the interests of the small stockholders to the fullest extent in their power under the law under which this consolidation may take effect That stockholders who, by virtue of their present holdings would only receive rights to a fraction of a share of the new stock, and to whom it might be a burden to buy the additional rights necessary to receive a full share of the new stock and so keep their present stock interest, we have arranged with the Old Colony Trust Company to have it issue its receipts upon the deposit of blocks of twenty rights which will entitle the holders to their proportion of the dividends on the new stock We believe such an arrangement will permit the small stock holders receiving the benefits of the consolidation without material expense in purchase of additional rights."

OSCEOLA'S REPORT OUT.

Company's Statement Shows It Didn't Earn Dividends.

The annual report of the Osceola Consolidated Mining Company, one of the Michigan mines scheduled to go into the Calumet & Hecla merger, shows a balance of assets as of December 31 1910, of $1,840,606; total income for the year ended December 31 last was $2,571,865, expenses and construction amounted to $1,813,279, leaving a net profit of $758,586 The $8 per share paid on the 96,150 shares of outstanding stock was not earned by $10,614

The company's 19,846,566 pounds of refined copper produced during 1910 cost [illegible] cents per pound a sum a trifle below that of 1909 and about a cent per pound below that of 1908 Of the above amount the company received 13.04 cents for the copper sold during the year. The present market is close to 12¾ cents a pound

The report shows that Rodolphe L. Agassiz is president, Quincy A Shaw is vice-president, while these gentlemen with Francis W Hunnewell T Nelson Perkins, Francis L. Higginson, George A Flagg of this city and James MacNaughton of Michigan are the directors. The office of the company is at 12 Ashburton place. The No. 5 shaft is down 4,625 feet from the surface and the No. 6 shaft 4,592 feet.

GIRL WHO HUNTS FOR THE OLDEST BOSTON COMMUTER

AIMS TO FIND THE OLDEST COMMUTERS

Travelers With Record Are Wanted by Miss Amy Lesser.

THOSE that live elsewhere but have their places of business in Boston are finally to receive recompense for their hurried breakfasts, mad flights to the station to catch the 7:42 and their journey home at night In short, the leaders of the vast army of commuters are to gain a slight compensation for their years of struggle with railroad time tables.

To Miss Amy Lesser of "The Commuters" Company, which comes to the Park Theatre, has been assigned the task of finding the oldest commuter in the matter of years, the oldest in the matter of experience, the one who travels the greatest distance each day, the one who has missed the train most frequently, the one who never missed a train, the one who has never-left-his-ticket-in-his-other-clothes the oldest woman commuters in the matter of age and experience and the woman commuter who makes the longest journey to spend the smallest amount of money

When these persons have been found their credentials passed upon and approved, a special night will be set aside during which they, as guests of Mr. Henry B. Harris, will be assembled at the theatre and given an opportunity to see their trials and tribulations presented in dramatic form.

HOW I KILLED MY SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Even After Beauty Doctors, Electricity, Powders, Pastes and Liquid Depilatories Failed

(From a Correspondent)

"Killed" seems a strong word to use, but that is just what I wanted to do to the hair that disfigured my face and arms—I wanted to kill it root and all so that it would never live again. It spoiled my looks, made me seem old and masculine, and hence interfered with both social and business success.

I tried the ordinary dissolvents and depilatories, but found them worthless—even dangerous. From a so-called specialist, I secured electrical treatment. It was painful and expensive, but I would have stood the suffering and cost, had I not found that the needle (electrolysis) often leaves scars that are even worse than the disfiguring hair itself.

So I gave up hope and in despair resigned myself to being called the "hairy lady" for the rest of my life. until a travelled friend persuaded me to try a new and easy method learned from the Japanese. In it, I found a way to actually kill the hair and I permanently removed the superfluous growth [illegible]

Having [illegible] experienced so many previous disa[illegible] I have decided to forget my own sensitiveness and for the benefit of my sex, I will gladly explain to others the method which cured me. It is nothing like the powder, paste and [illegible] that simply burn off the exposed hair and ruin the skin. It is a discovery only recently introduced into this country and so simple that any woman can use it in the privacy of her own room, and in only a few minutes time.

Many friends have said to me, "It seems too good to be true," but the test proved it true both for myself and others as well. If you will write [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Mrs. CAROLINE [illegible] OD, 112 B. R. Old P. O. St., Providence, R. I.

SPECIAL INDORSEMENT: As the method above referred to has been indorsed by doctors, true specialists and many other publishers we advise all readers thus afflicted to take advantage of Mrs. Osgood's offer and write her at once at above address.

How to Get Rid of Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way, and It Costs Nothing to Try.

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive, home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty-five years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of these. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased mucous membranes and arrests the foul discharge, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not poison the system and ruin the stomach, as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 202 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you by return mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal headaches, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet. Write him immediately.

BUICK STRIKES OIL

Buick Midway Well Comes In, Flowing 1,500 to 3,000 Barrels—Means That the Buick Properties Are Worth From 2 to 3 Million Dollars More.

THIS TELEGRAM TELLS THE STORY:

Moron, California, Feb. 17th, 1911.

BUICK OIL CO., Room 420, Marquette Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Buick Midway number one well came in to-day at one thirty P. M. under absolute control, flowing from fifteen hundred to three thousand barrels per day. Had sump holes ready. Capacity estimated fifteen thousand barrels. Are erecting 2 two-thousand-barrel tanks. Are negotiating with the Associated Co. for use of their fifty-five-thousand-barrel storage tank. Oil flowing through two five-sixteenth-inch holes. Heavy gas pressure. D. D. BUICK.

At last we are enabled to give the public definite and specific news. We have struck our first gusher and it is one of the best in the field.

Do you know what this means? Do you know that it answers every one of the critics and those who have scoffed and lied about Buick Oil? It tells our stockholders that their judgment has been right More than this, it tells in direct language the value of Buick Midway holdings.

Think of an oil well, that is to-day producing from 1,500 to 3,000 barrels At the present selling price of oil this means a daily value of from $750 to $1,500 to the well. This is not the important question, however The real proof of this lies in the fact that our Midway forty is a proven territory We can sink ten wells, yes, fifteen wells, to the acre. We have forty of such acres and this is just a small proportion of our holdings in this field. We do not intend to stop now that our well has come in, but the crew that has been working upon the No. 1 well will now shift their operations to Buick Midway No. 2, and another crew will be installed as soon as possible upon Buick No. 3 and No. 4 and No. 5.

The pipe lines, as you know, are close to our property. We will have no difficulty from this course. Our oil, as it flows from our well, will flow from our settling tanks and vats into the great pipe lines close by and from there on north to Frisco or west to the Pacific Coast, where it will be loaded into vessels or trains of cars and sent to market

We have repeatedly told the public that we would bring in this well and that it would be a big one. We have made good our predictions. The telegram we received and quoted above bears the announcement only that the well has come in. Later we shall receive full and complete information from Mr D. D. Buick who is upon the field and this information we shall send forth to our stockholders in a special report, published in the "Buick Oil News." We shall be glad to give this report also to every one who writes to us for it One week from today we shall also publish the very latest developments with respect to our No. 1 well, and our other holdings, throughout the press of this country. Thousands upon thousands of people have written us that they contemplated purchasing Buick Oil stock when we actually had struck oil When this announcement appears it will demonstrate the value of Buick Oil shares and the record this company has made in the sale of its stock heretofore will be as nothing when compared to the amount of stock that will be sold within the next six or seven days.

We have repeatedly told the public to buy Buick Oil We told you to do this when the shares were 50 cents, and thousands of stockholders did so. We now tell you to do the same when the stock is 75 cents for it is certainly going higher

The income which we receive from the sale of oil from our first well will not only enable this company to sink its future wells in a more rapid manner, but this single well has had the influence of stamping the Buick property as proven and valuable property The Buick Oil stock has now been taken out of the non producing class and is a producing company. We do not intend to rest upon our oars, but we do say that the No. 1 well proves absolutely the value of the Buick oil holdings of 640 acres. Work is soon to be started upon our 560-acre holdings in the Sunset Security field, and a little later we shall begin operations on our forty-acre tract, located in the Maricopa Sunset field. We have told you about the Buick Midway, we now tell you about our 560-acre tract and our 40-acre tract. The oil men of the Midway field are wildly enthusiastic over the bringing in of the Buick Midway No 1 well. This well has been the center of attraction for the past ten days, and our reports from the oil fields have proven to us that utmost excitement has prevailed among owners of oil lands adjacent to the Buick property Upon one side of us the Southern Pacific is reported to have paid three million dollars for a tract of land, upon the other is the California Midway, which has already brought in one gusher and is now down within a few hundred feet of oil sands The bringing in of the Buick Midway well has proven this entire region No wonder there is excitement For those who are lucky enough to own land in this vicinity one can feel almost certain that every acre will net them thousands upon thousands of dollars per day in income.

The people of the United States have had faith in D. D. Buick the founder and inventor of the Buick automobile They have been instrumental in the bringing in of the Buick Midway well, for they have purchased Buick Oil shares because of the record of D. D. Buick Now that Mr Buick's predictions have come true in one instance, this company will not only enjoy the most unheard of patronage so far as future sales of this stock is concerned but it is enabled by this glad news to forever silence the malicious critics who have been attacking Buick Oil and who have been endeavoring to dissatisfy its stockholders.

What do you think the earnings of the Buick Oil Company will be when we have 10 wells upon the Buick Midway forty, all of them bringing in 1,500 to 3,000 barrels of oil, or more per day? Selling our oil at 50c per barrel means that we will enjoy an income of $750.00 to $1,500 per day for each and every well put down if these wells run 1,500 to 3,000 barrels per day This means that our income would be on one acre alone $7,500 to $15,000 per day, or $2,742,500 to $5,485,000 per year. If such an income is possible upon one acre, what will the income be upon forty acres, and every acre in the Midway tract is, in our opinion equal to the land upon which our Buick Midway No. 1 well is located No man alive can figure out the profits to be derived from Buick oil They are merely speculative.

We feel that Buick Oil stock will go to several times its present price and we fully anticipate being able to return to our stockholders, in the nature of large dividends, ample profit upon their investment, simply from several of these wells. When our 560-acre holdings are being operated together with the 40-acre Maricopa Sunset and after we have several other wells gushing upon our Midway tract the earning power of Buick Oil stock will be colossal

Now is the time to buy Buick shares at 75 cents. Do not wait a single day Do not delay but purchase as many of these shares as your present income and mode of life will enable you to do It is our opinion that this company will not have to sell very much more of its stock and we believe from the thousands upon thousands of letters which we have received in the past, and are receiving to-day from all sections of this country, that we will exhaust every share we have for sale within a very short time.

Our No 2 well, which will be started immediately, should reach the oil body in 120 days and No 3 well should come in within a short time thereafter. It is our hope and ambition to have three producing wells on Buick Midway 40 by the middle of Summer and we believe that when these wells are producing that this company's stock cannot be purchased for two or three times the price it is selling at to-day for then it should be earning very large dividends

All questions of experiment are now in the past The future of this company resolves itself down to a purely arithmetical question

This company publishes a little paper called the "Buick Oil News" which appears twice each month The next edition of this publication will be out in about one week, and in this issue we intend to tell the story of the bringing in of this well in full detail. We hope to be able to have photographs of the well as it came in, and we will be glad to see that each and every stockholder or person interested in this company who will send in the coupon below, receives a copy of this publication.

We know exactly, foot by foot, the character of the ground we will have to pass through in our next wells at Midway We have all this information at hand, and this experience will enable us to perform the drilling of the new wells in about one-half the length of time and with fifty per cent. of the expense.

My advice to every man and woman who reads this advertisement is to inform yourself more of Buick Oil If you are not satisfied that now is the time to buy this Company's shares.

We have published a great book entitled "The Land Where Oil Is King," and in this book you will find the most interesting literature with respect to the California oil fields you have ever read. It gives you facts and figures which are almost beyond belief, but which are absolute proofs and even the children in California are well versed in this knowledge Those things which look to these Eastern men as almost unbelievable are matters of everyday interest to people who live in and around the great oil fields.

Men who but a few months or years ago were working for wages are to-day rich because of the investments and money they have made out of the California oil companies. Just a few hundred dollars invested in some of these companies have netted the stockholders thousands of dollars in profits per year, and what I expect to do before very long is to prove to the world the holdings of the Buick Oil Company are among the richest in the state.

The great book which we will send free, tells you of all these questions, and we will also send a copy of a little magazine published every two weeks, which we call the Buick Oil News, and this publication is filled with the news items, not only of the Buick Oil Company but of all news matter which is of importance to the oil industry

Do not hesitate to buy some of this Company's stock now, to-day, this very minute. Send in the coupon below for as many shares as you desire.

The following table will show you how to make your payments if you purchase on the instalment plan.

If you want to know more, however about this Company before you invest, send in the information coupon below and we will send this literature at once

WHEAT PRICES AT LOW LEVEL

Uncertainty About Anti-Option Bill and Reciprocity Cause the Break.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—Wheat prices touched the lowest levels on the crop during the week just closed, when May sold at 90¼c, July at 80⅞c, and September at 88⅛c. The high prices of the week were 92⅝c, May, 91⅛c, July and 90¾c, September.

The wheat market has ruled irregular the course of a week ago. Trade and entire lack of interest in the buying or selling of shares. It has been a waiting market, the chief uncertainty is the tariff bill. Uncertainty exists concerning both this and the reciprocity matter, and uncertainty is what is making the weak market.

The Winter wheat fields in the Southwest have had a good soaking, and this, in addition to other conditions, has brought about a combination which has practically stopped all investment selling. Trade is said to be very poor. Unfavorable weather has worked at the weekend for export business, and it is reported Europe was at those points better than a week ago. Primary receipts were of a general moderate character.

The Winter crop prospects in the South west have improved materially with the beginning of the July delivery. In many sections of the Winter wheat belt the selling their grain more freely than the four situation. Both in the primary and in the large markets receipts have been more depleted of late than is now. Large stocks of wheat are piling up at the seaboard positions, with no outlet seen in a very small way. Each week's increase in all the markets report their stocks as full. We have reached a place of wheat for a time at least in Europe to follow on crop conditions in the southern hemisphere, with the prospect for a good harvest, because the United States and Canada. If it should be rainfall, there will be big of Canadian wheat thrown upon the markets of this country, and it will place the image in the May future at Chicago in a very bad position.

The bear shorts in corn are firmly convinced that they will win in the present deal. The Patten Bartlett crowd continue to sell short corn during the week with a view on the bull side were good buyers.

As the ends in the country are now the chief for long of hands, this condition and that the farmers are overdue to move to market at the moment from the farm will increase material. Considerable corn is being sold for export, the shippers are trying to keep the matter as quiet as possible.

The markets of the world did not show any great scarcity of corn in the Argentine Republic. A cable from Buenos Aires yesterday told of the pressure of corn at that point.

Some of the short sales in oats have been covered during the week in order to avoid delivery. Cole buying is reported to have been a factor at times in the firming of in the movement locally of cash goods, a healthier price trend is seen.

LESSON ABROAD FOR RAILROADS IN U. S.

Germany Solves Problem with Appointive Body That Controls All Rate Matters.

By BOERSIANER

CHICAGO, [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] mission might do [illegible] was the subject of an address by [illegible] as AMERICAN article a fortnight ago. The [illegible] ment has now affected the railways themselves.

Court transportation companies may call in "government supervision" instead of "federal interference." When that valuable juncture shall have been reached, both the public and public corporations may be in a boxed to take a few leaves from foreign experience.

Shopkeeping England—as Napoleon called her—went through its trust throes long ago the commissaries of Great Britain acted the questions which are so engrossing to the United States.

The British statutes are clear and precise. There are no flaws in English corporation laws.

Parliament is not called upon to police this or that phase of finance and commerce. Trade is not meanwhile intimidated or attempted by what a commission may or may not do.

Germany, whose modern industrial history got a back less than forty years defined the system of commercial organization sharply and unmistakably.

Solved Long Ago.

Even the railway rate problem in its broad aspect was decided long before the matter had been brought to the attention of legislators in this country. Though the imperial government is very much of a railroads proprietor, it has unified the policies and the charges upon privately owned lines as well as the state railroad system of Prussia.

Rate matters are controlled by what would be equivalent in this country to a Senate in Germany. It is the "Bundesrath." Trade is represented by the governments of the 25 nations that compose the German commonwealth.

This body, from time to time, holds a conference for the revision of rates and rates. The railroads have selling powers in these meetings. The supervision is contingent upon their mileage. Thirty-one miles gives one vote, sixty miles gives two votes and so on.

The demand for the general conference is prepared by a permanent rate commission with representatives from the various railway boards. A subdivision of membership called the standing committee is made up of the representatives of agriculture elected by the combined governments members of the empire, five representing manufacturers and five the distributing commercial interests.

Benefit for Shippers.

The latter classes are chosen by the Chamber of Commerce of the country acting together. These fifteen and a number appointed by the Bundesrath formulate all rates equitably among all the zones of traffic into which the country is apportioned. The general scheme is especially designed that a shipper in one part of the country shall not be at a disadvantage by reason of his geographical location.

The chief board gets its information from local conferences through district railway boards. The latter are representative of agriculture, forestry, manufacturing, mining and mercantile industries. The shipper who is dissatisfied with a rate has his complaint with the board in his district and he may appeal from the judgment of that board.

Rate complications have become less with succeeding years.

Goldfield Consolidated Payments.

The price of Goldfield Consolidated stock justifies the belief that dividends at the rate of $1 per share per annum are not far long. In fact both president Wingfield and former General Manager Finlay stated frankly in their reports that the near future dividends of twenty cents per share rates from the sale of ore, and that the normal rate of such dividends is quarterly.

Heinze's Poor Excuse for Investing Money

Davis-Daly Ground, He Says, Represents Big Faulted Zone in the Butte Camp.

Work at the Davis-Daly property at the present time is confined entirely to development, and principally to driving cross cuts on the fourteenth and sixteenth levels. A cross-cut is being driven toward the footwall of the vein, which is now about three feet in width, and it is expected that it will strike the ore-bearing fissure within a few days. The ore on the fourteenth level is of a higher grade than that on the sixteenth level up to the present time have not been as good as those on the above levels.

President F. A. Heinze, spoke very optimistically about the property in the annual report to shareholders, which has just been issued. He says that while the Davis-Daly ground represents a big faulted zone in the Butte camp and that development to date has not been very extensive, it is small in proportion to the ground. It says that while the ground would run north and south it is considered probable that it would run east and west, breaking up and although developed to a depth of 1,000 feet, the ore shoots have not yet reached the lower grade.

This is the Heinze explanation for investing Davis-Daly money in other camps, and he takes the position that it is not the Grimsby custom of Messrs. Heinze and other properties who have found their property declining have done, and why not the Davis Daly?

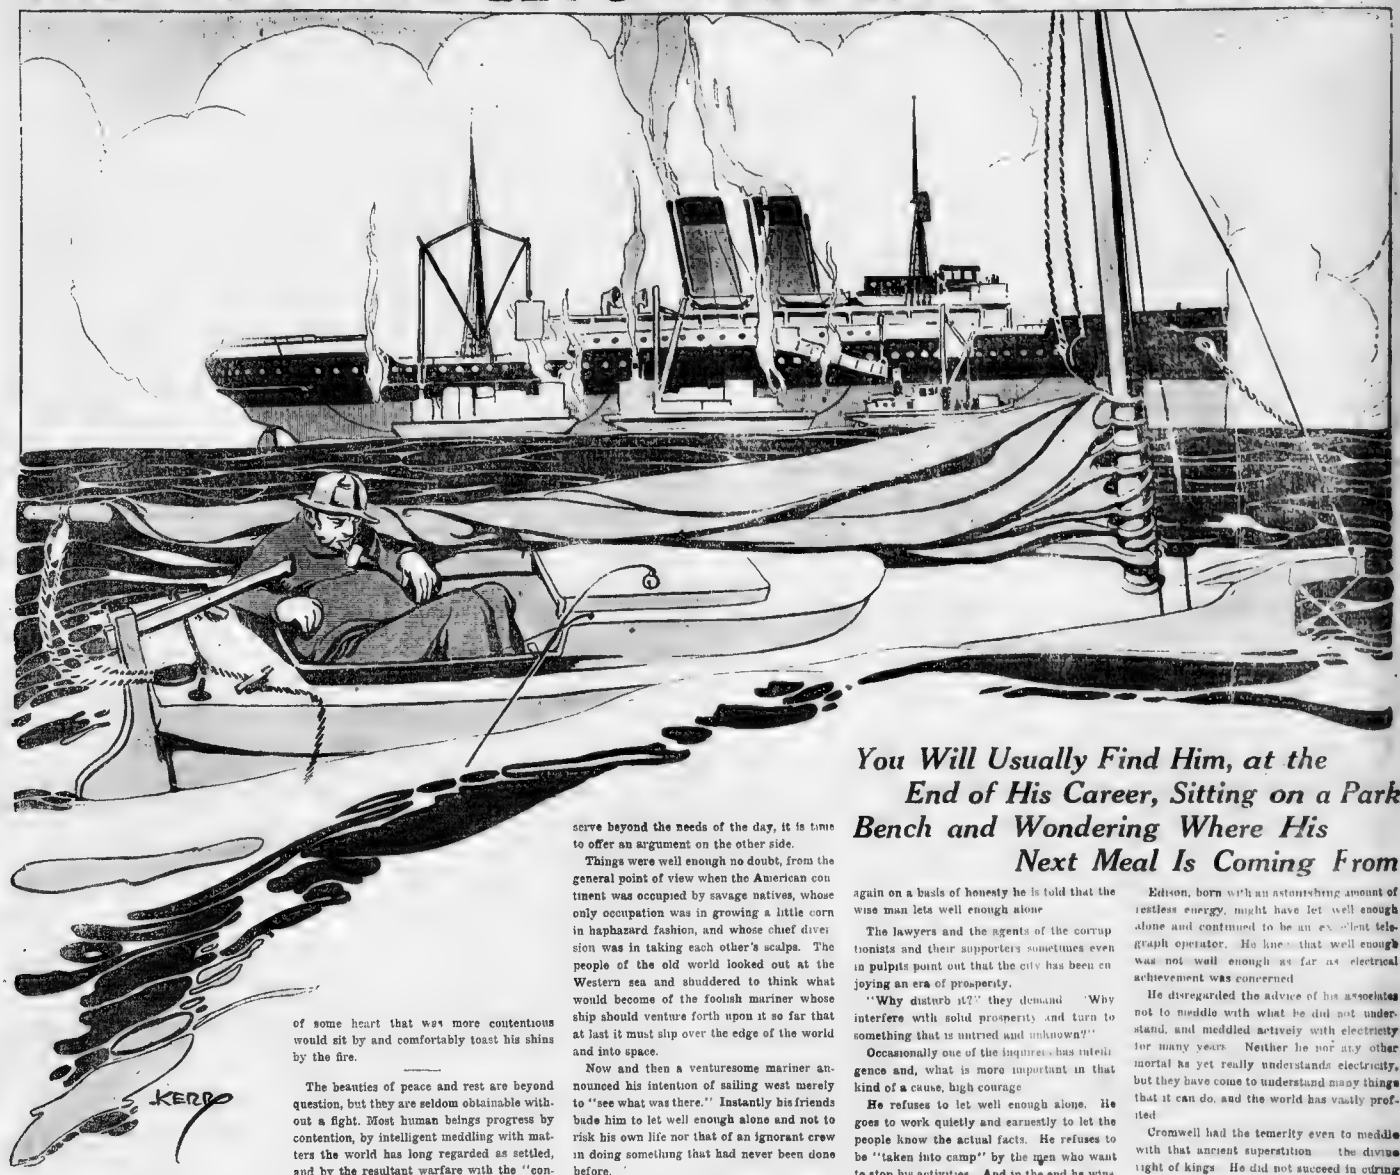
R. H. WHITE CO.'S "BUSY BARGAIN BASEMENT"

THE MAN WHO LETS WELL ENOUGH ALONE



You Will Usually Find Him, at the End of His Career, Sitting on a Park Bench and Wondering Where His Next Meal Is Coming From Copyright, 1911, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner.

IF was Thomas Moore, or some other apostle of contentment, who wrote:

"I knew by the smoke that so gracefully curled
Above the green elms that a cottage was near,
And I thought that if peace could be found in the world
A heart that was humble might look for it here."

If the poet had journeyed beyond the green elms to the cottage he might possibly have found peace—the peace of utter stupidity. More likely he would have discovered fully as much bickering and wrangling as on any street in a London slum.

Without knowledge of the particular cottage he has thus immortalized, it is difficult to say whether or not it would appeal to a "heart that was humble." Yet it may be imagined that before the fire was built that sent the smoke curling about the green elms there was a dispute as to who should build it; another dispute about who should bring up the wood to keep it going, and a third dispute about who should clear away the ashes after it was out. And we can well believe that the proprietor of the heart that was humble would in the end do all these things, while the owner of some heart that was more contentious would sit by and comfortably toast his shins by the fire.

The beauties of peace and rest are beyond question, but they are seldom obtainable without a fight. Most human beings progress by contention, by intelligent meddling with matters the world has long regarded as settled, and by the resultant warfare with the "conservatives," who want to let well enough alone.

You will discover that when a person of intelligence advances the argument that well enough ought to be let alone he is getting rather more than his share. A fat hog, with his feet in a trough, grunting savagely to frighten away the queue of little, pathetic pigs that stand lined up near by, is one of the most confirmed of conservatives.

But presently there appears a lean and hungry razor-back—a porcine Cassius, who is not quite so sure about the utility of letting things alone. There are a few preliminary grunts, a little active crowding, and presently the old order has been overturned. Well enough is not let alone. Beside the thinner razor-back at the trough is room for some of the little pigs. The displaced hog stands gloomily in the near neighborhod lamenting that things are not as they were, and wondering darkly what is to become of hogdom in the future when his divine right has been so wantonly called into question.

Perhaps it is wise, from his point of view, for the man who has the best of everything to preach the doctrine of letting well enough alone. But when you hear it preached by the failure, the no'er do well, the man who, despite his best efforts, can never get money enough to serve beyond the needs of the day, it is time to offer an argument on the other side.

Things were well enough no doubt, from the general point of view when the American continent was occupied by savage natives, whose only occupation was in growing a little corn in haphazard fashion, and whose chief diversion was in taking each other's scalps. The people of the old world looked out at the Western sea and shuddered to think what would become of the foolish mariner whose ship should venture forth upon it so far that at last it must slip over the edge of the world and into space.

Now and then a venturesome mariner announced his intention of sailing west merely to "see what was there." Instantly his friends bade him to let well enough alone and not to risk his own life nor that of an ignorant crew in doing something that had never been done before.

But the thirst for gold, always a moving factor in progress, at last grew so strong that it even defied superstition.

A Genoese sailor, convinced that the world was round and that by going west he would eventually come to the golden East, made up his mind that he was not going to let well enough alone.

His argument that he would be able to bring back untold treasure to enrich the Spanish throne at last resulted in his getting the money needed for the outfitting of a pitiful little fleet.

The result of the journey west that followed was the discovery of the American continent. Columbus did not let well enough alone, and because he did not he became one of the very greatest figures in the history of the world.

Now and then in a community that has been governed for years in the interests of a handful of greedy monopolists arises a man who asks to know why such a thing should be.

He sees not only vice and crime but legitimate business paying tribute to a corruptionist boss, who in turn is employed by bigger corruptionists, who wear thick cloaks of respectability.

When he suggests that it would be a good idea to overturn these conditions and begin again on a basis of honesty he is told that the wise man lets well enough alone

The lawyers and the agents of the corruptionists and their supporters sometimes even in pulpits point out that the city has been enjoying an era of prosperity.

"Why disturb it?" they demand. "Why interfere with solid prosperity and turn to something that is untried and unknown?"

Occasionally one of the inquirers has intelligence and, what is more important in that kind of a cause, high courage

He refuses to let well enough alone. He goes to work quietly and earnestly to let the people know the actual facts. He refuses to be "taken into camp" by the men who want to stop his activities. And in the end he wins, cleans up the city and gets the people some few of their rights. Unfortunately, there is that in human nature which prompts even the beneficiary of a municipal housecleaning to get indifferent by and by. Soon the bosses get back into power, and until the same man starts a new movement or passes his work along to another man, the people continue to smile placidly while their pockets are picked

---

When men pause in their fight to keep their heads out of water to ask themselves what they are really fighting for they usually answer:

"For contentment."

Each man hopes to end his days in peace and tranquillity—to retire, perhaps to a farm, perhaps to a city; there, as Goldsmith says:

"To husband out life's candle to its close
And keep the flame from wasting by repose."

But it is human, and particularly American, to be in a hurry about everything, and there are many who forget that contentment and youth are not meant to keep company.

For the old man to let well enough alone is well. If he has earned his days of rest he has no need to struggle longer; if he has not earned them there is no help. He is past the time for fighting. Under sixty, however, letting well enough alone is criminal folly.

Edison, born with an astonishing amount of restless energy, might have let well enough alone and continued to be an excellent telegraph operator. He knew that well enough was not well enough as far as electrical achievement was concerned

He disregarded the advice of his associates not to meddle with what he did not understand, and meddled actively with electricity for many years. Neither he nor any other mortal as yet really understands electricity, but they have come to understand many things that it can do, and the world has vastly profited

Cromwell had the temerity even to meddle with that ancient superstition the divine right of kings. He did not succeed in curing his fellow countrymen of it permanently, but he did put the fear of their subjects into all British monarchs forever, and sowed the seeds that grew vigorously afterward in American soil.

The world is possibly merciful and sympathetic for the weak, but it has neither mercy nor sympathy for the strong

There will come a day when the aged will be cared for, when the heroism of a mother in bearing children will be rewarded as well as the lesser heroism of the man who goes out to get shot at by the enemies of his country.

But there never will come a time when strength will not be expected to take care of itself, where peace and contentment will be given to any man who is not willing to fight for them.

What has been accomplished in liberty, in mechanical progress, in art, in literature, has been accomplished because of contentment and not because of letting well enough alone. Even the genius must fight with his desire to shirk his duty before he can give the world the benefit of his genius.

Had Keats let well enough alone he would have ended his young life as an apothecary's clerk. Washington would have won no higher distinction than that of a surveyor.

Contentment is the natural reward of toil, but, like everything else worth while, it is only to be gained by contention.

IVAN, THE FOOL---By Count Leo Tolstoy

(Copyright, 1904, by Dana Estes & Co., and Reprinted Here by Their Permission.)

"So she said to her husband: 'I cannot eat supper with a stinking peasant.'"

I

IN A certain kingdom, in a certain realm, there lived a rich peasant. He had three sons, Semen the Warrior, Taras the Paunch, and Ivan the Fool, and a daughter Malanya, the dumb old maid.

Semen the Warrior went to war, to serve the king. Taras the Paunch went to a merchant in the city, to sell wares; but Ivan the Fool and the girl remained at home, to work and hump their backs

Semen the Warrior earned a high rank and an estate, and married a lord's daughter. His salary was big, and his estate was large, but still he could not make both ends meet: whatever he collected, his wife scattered as though from a sleeve, and they had no money.

Semen the Warrior came to his estate, to collect the revenue. His clerk said to him:

"Where shall it come from? We have neither cattle, nor tools: neither horses, nor cows, nor plough, nor harrow. Everything has to be provided, then there will be an income."

And Semen the Warrior went to his father:

"You are rich, father," he said, "and you have not given me anything. Cut off a third and I will transfer it to my estate."

And the old man said:

"You have brought nothing to my house, why should I give you a third? It will be unfair to Ivan and to the girl."

But Semen said:

"But he is a fool, and she is a dumb old maid What do they need?"

And the old man said:

"As Ivan says so it shall be!"

But Ivan said:

"All right, let him have it!"

So Semen the Warrior took his third from the house, transferred it to his estate, and again went away to serve the king.

Taras the Paunch, too, earned much money—and married a merchant woman. Still he did not have enough, and he came to his father, and said:

"Give me my part!"

The old man did not want to give Taras his part:

"You," he said, "have brought nothing to the house, and everything in the house has been earned by Ivan. I cannot be unfair to him and the girl."

But Taras said:

"What does he want it for? He is a fool. He cannot marry, for no one will have him; and the dumb girl does not need anything, either. Give me," he said, "half of the grain, Ivan! I will not take your tools, and of your animals I want only the gray stallion—you cannot plough with him."

Ivan laughed.

"All right," he said, "I will earn it again."

So Taras, too, received his part. Taras took the grain to town, and drove off the gray stallion, and Ivan was left with one old mare, and he went on farming and supporting his father and his mother.

II.

The old devil was vexed because the brothers had not quarrelled in dividing up, but had parted in love. And so he called up three young devils.

"You see," he said, "there are three brothers, Semen the Warrior, Taras the Paunch, and Ivan the Fool. They ought to be quarrelling, but, instead, they live peacefully; they exchange with each other bread and salt. The fool has spoiled all my business. Go all three of you—get hold of them, and and mix them up in such a way that they shall tear out one another's eyes. Can you do it?"

"We can," they said.

"How are you going to do it?"

"We will do it like this," they said. "First we will ruin them, so that they will have nothing to eat; then we will throw them all in a heap, so that they will quarrel together."

"Very well," he said, "I see that you know your business. Go, and do not return to me before you have muddled all three, or else I will flay all three of you."

The three devils all went to a swamp, and considered how to take hold of the matter: they quarrelled as it quarrelled, for they wanted each of them to get the easiest job, and finally the decided to cast lots for each man. If one of them got through first he was to come and help the others. The devils cast lots and set a time when they were to meet again in the swamp in order to find out who was through, and who needed help

When the time came, the devils gathered in the swamp They began to talk about their affairs. The first devil, Semen the Warrior's, began to speak.

"My affair," he said, "is progressing. To-morrow my Semen will go to his father."

His comrades asked him how he did it.

"In the first place," he said, "I brought such bravery over Semen that he promised his king to conquer the whole world, and the king made him a commander and sent him out to fight the King of India. They came together for a fight. But that very night I wet all his powder, and I went over to the King of India and made an endless number of soldiers for him out of straw. When Semen's soldiers saw the straw soldiers walking upon them on all sides, they lost their courage. Semen commanded them to fire their cannon and their guns, but they could not fire them. Semen's soldiers were frightened and ran away like sheep. And the King of India vanquished them. Semen is disgraced—they have taken his estate from him, and to-morrow he is to be beheaded. I have only one day's work left to do: to let him out of the prison, so that he can run home. To-morrow I shall be through with him, so tell me which of you I am to aid!"

Then the other devil, Taras's, began to speak:

"I did not need any help," he said, "for my affair is also progressing nicely—Taras will not live another week. In the first place, I have raised a belly on him, and made him envious. He is so envious of other people's property, that, no matter what he sees, he wants to buy it. He has bought up an endless lot of things and spent all his money on them and is still buying. He now buys on other people's money. He has quite a lot on his shoulders, and is so entangled that he will never free himself. In a week the time will come for him to pay, and I will change all his wares into manure—and he will not be able to pay his debts, and will go to his father's."

They began to ask the third devil, Ivan's.

"How is your business?"

"I must say my business is not progressing at all. The first thing I did was to spit into his kvas jug, so as to give him a belly-ache, and I went to his field and made the soil so hard that he should not be able to overcome it. I thought that he would never plough it up, but he, the fool, came with his plough and began to tear up the soil. His belly-ache made him groan, but he stuck to his ploughing I broke one plough of his, but he went home, fixed another plough, wrapped new leg rags on him, and started once more to plough. I crept under the earth, and tried to hold the ploughshare, but I could not do it—he pressed so hard on the plough; the ploughshares are sharp, and he has cut up my hands. He has ploughed up nearly the whole of it—only a small strip is left. Come and help me, brothers, or else, if we do not overpower him, all our labors will be lost. If the fool is left and continues to farm, they will have no want, for he will feed them all."

Semen's devil promised to come on the morrow to help him, and thereupon the devil's departed.

III.

Ivan ploughed up all the fallow field, and only one strip was left. His belly ached, and yet he had to plough. He straightened out the lines, turned over the plough, and went to the field. He had just made one furrow, and was coming back, when something pulled at the plough as though it had caught in a root. It was the devil that had twined his legs about the plough-head and was holding it fast

"What in the world is that?" thought Ivan. "There were no roots here before, but now there are."

Ivan stuck his hand down in the furrow, and felt something soft. He grabbed it and pulled it out. It was as black as a root, but something was moving on it. He took a glance at it, and, behold it was a live devil.

"I declare," he said, "it is a nasty thing!" And Ivan swung him and was about to strike him against the plough-handle; but the devil began to scream.

"Do not beat me," he said, "and I will do for you anything you wish."

"What will you do for me?"

"Say what you want!"

Ivan scratched himself.

"My belly aches,—can you cure me?"

"I can," he said.

"Very well, cure me!"

The devil bent down to the furrow, scratched awhile in it, pulled out a few roots,—three of them in a bunch,—and gave them to Ivan.

"Here," he said, "is a root, which, if you swallow, will make your ache go away at once."

Ivan took the roots, tore them up, and swallowed one. His belly-ache stopped at once.

Then the devil began to beg again:

"Let me go, now, and I will slip through the earth, and will not come up again."

"All right," he said, "God be with you!"

And the moment Ivan mentioned God's name, the devil bolted through the earth, as a stone plumps into the water, and only a hole was left. Ivan put the remaining two roots in his cap, and started to finish his work. He ploughed up the strip, turned over the plough, and went home. He unhitched the horse, came to the house, and there found his elder brother, Semen the Warrior, with his wife, eating supper. His estate had been taken from him, and he had with difficulty escaped from prison and come to his father's to live.

Semen saw Ivan, and, "I have come to live with you," he said. "Feed me and my wife until I find a new place!"

"All right," he said, "stay here!"

Ivan wanted to sit down on a bench, but the lady did not like the smell of Ivan. So she said to her husband:

"I cannot eat supper with a stinking peasant."

"All right," he said, "I have to go anyway to pasture the mare for the night."

Ivan took some bread and his caftan, and went out to herd his mare.

IV.

That night Semen's devil got through with his work and by agreement went to find Ivan's devil, to help to make an end of the fool. He came to the field and looked for him everywhere, but found only the hole.

"Something has evidently gone wrong with my comrade," he thought—"I must take his place. The ploughing is done—I shall have to catch him in the mowing time"

The devil went to the meadows and sent a flood on the mowing so that it was all covered with mud. Ivan returned in the morning from the night watch, whetted his scythe, and went out to mow the meadows. He came, and began to mow: he swung the scythe once, and a second time, and it grew dull and would not cut—it was necessary to grind it. Ivan worked hard and in vain.

"No," he said, "I will go home, and will bring the grindstone with me, and a round loaf. If I have to stay here for a week, I will not give up until I mow it all."

When the devil heard it he thought:

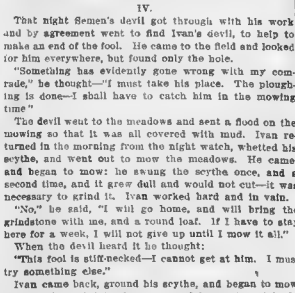
"This fool is stiff-necked—I cannot get at him. I must try something else."

Ivan came back, ground his scythe, and began to mow. The devil crept into the grass and began to catch the scythe by the snath-end and to stick the point into the ground. I went hard with Ivan, but he finished the mowing, and there was left only one scrubby place in the swamp. The devil crawled into the swamp and thought:

"If I get both my paws cut, I will not let him mow it."

Ivan went into the swamp; the grass was not dense, but he found it hard to move the scythe. Ivan grew angry and began to swing the scythe with all his might. The devil gave in; he had hardly time to get away—he saw that matters were in bad shape, so he hid in a bush. Ivan swung the scythe with all his might and struck the bush, and cut off half of the devil's tail. Ivan finished the mowing, told the girl to rake it up, and himself went to cut the rye.

He went out with a round knife, but the bobtailed devil had been there before him and had so mixed up the rye



"You have brought nothing, why should I give you a third?"

that he could not cut it with the round knife. Ivan went back, took the sickle, and began to cut it; he cut all the rye.

"Now I must go to the oats," he said.

The bobtailed devil heard it, and thought:

"I could not cope with him on the rye, but I will get the better of him in the oats—just let the morning come."

The devil ran in the morning to the oats-field, but the oats were all cut down. Ivan had cut them in the night, to keep them from dropping the seed.

The devil grew angry:

"The fool has cut me all up, and has worn me out. I have not seen such trouble even in war time. The accursed one does not sleep—I cannot keep up with him. I will go now to the ricks, and will rot them all."

And the devil went to the rye-rick, climbed between the sheaves, and began to rot them: he warmed them up, and himself grew warm and fell asleep.

Ivan hitched his mare, and went with the girl to haul away the ricks. He drove up to one and began to throw the sheaves into the cart. He had just put two sheaves in when he stuck his fork straight into the devil's back, he raised it, and, behold, on the prongs was a live devil, and a bobtailed one at that, and he was writhing and twisting, and trying to get off.

"I declare," he said, "it is a nasty thing! Are you here again?"

"I am a different devil," he said. "My brother was here before. I was with your brother Semen."

"I do not care who you are," he replied, "you will catch it, too."

He wanted to strike him against the ground, but the devil began to beg him:

"Let me go, and I will not do it again, and I will do for you anything you please."

"What can you do?"

"I can make soldiers for you from anything."

"What good are they?"

"You can turn them to any use you please: they will do anything."

"Can they play music?"

"They can."

"All right, make them for me!"

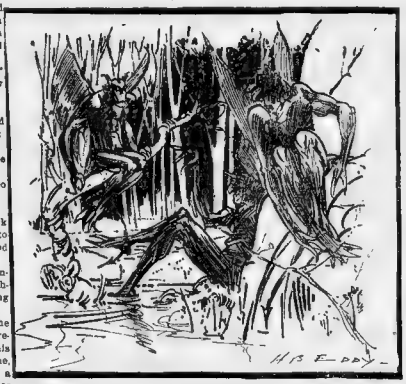
And the devil said:

"Take a sheaf of rye, strike the lower end against the ground, and say: 'By my master's command not a sheaf shall you stand, but as many straws as there are so many soldiers there be."

Ivan took the sheaf, shook it against the ground, and spoke as the devil told him to. And the sheaf fell to pieces, and the straws were changed into soldiers, and in front a drummer was drumming, and a trumpeter blowing the trumpet. Ivan laughed.

"I declare," he said, "it is clever. This is nice to amuse the girls with."

"Let me go now," said the devil.



"When the time came the devils gathered in the swamp."

"No," he said, "I will do that with threshed straw and I will not let full ears waste for nothing. I will thresh them first."

So the devil said:

"Say, 'As many soldiers, so many straws there be!' With my master's command again a sheaf it shall stand.'"

Ivan said this, and the sheaf was as before And the devil begged him again:

"Let me go now!"

"All right!" Ivan caught him on the cart-hurdle, held him down with his hand, and pulled him off the fork. "God be with you!" he said.

The moment he said, "God be with you," the devil bolted through the earth, as a stone plumps into the water, and only a hole was left.

Ivan went home, and there he found his second brother. Taras and his wife were sitting and eating supper. Taras the Paunch had not calculated right, and so he ran away from his debts and came to his father's. When he saw Ivan, he said:

"Ivan, feed me and my wife until I go back to trading!"

"All right," he said, "stay with us!"

Ivan took off his caftan, and seated himself at the table.

But the merchant's wife said:

"I cannot eat with a fool. He stinks with sweat."

So Taras the Paunch said:

"Ivan, you do not smell right, so go and eat in the vestibule!"

"All right," he said, and, taking bread, he went out. "It is just right," he said, "for it is time for me to go and pasture the mare for the night."

V.

That night Taras's devil got through with his job, and he went by agreement to help out his comrades—to get the best of Ivan the Fool. He came to the field and tried to find his comrades, but all he saw was a hole in the ground; he went to the meadows, and found a tail in the swamp, and in the rye stubbles he found another hole.

"Well," he thought, "evidently some misfortune has befallen my comrades; I must take their place, and go for the fool."

The devil went forth to find Ivan. But Ivan was through with the field, and was chopping wood in the forest.

(To be concluded next Sunday.)

"On the prongs was a live devil."

READ CAREFULLY—RULES OF CONTEST!

This contest is open to every man, woman and child in New England, irrespective of age, except employes of the AMERICAN and their families.

All contestants must be legal residents of New England.

Vote coupons from the Daily or Sunday AMERICAN will count in this Contest. A vote coupon will appear in each issue of the American (daily and Sunday) during the life of this contest, which will be good for one vote daily and 10 votes Sunday.

The one who receives the largest number of votes, irrespective of districts, will be awarded the capital prize.

The ones who receive the largest number of votes in each district will be awarded the prizes as scheduled. In the event of total votes for any contestants to win being tied, similar prizes will be given to each winner so tied.

Each vote coupon will be valueless after two weeks from the date printed in the AMERICAN.

The Contest Editor's decision will be final on any question which may arise as to coupon votes.

All mail matter sent to the Contest Department should be addresses to the AMERICAN CONTEST DEPARTMENT, P. O. Box 227, Boston, Mass.

Many packages of ballots have been received with insufficient stamps affixed. Hereafter such packages will not be accepted.

The contest began Sunday, January 15th, 1911, and will end at 10 p. m., June 15th, 1911.

A vote credit will be allowed for subscriptions turned in for the Sunday AMERICAN (subscriptions to the daily AMERICAN will not be received).

No Sunday subscriptions for less than six months' period will be received.

The AMERICAN will not be responsible for any subscriptions sent in through the mails in any form other than postoffice money order, express order or certified check. Cash sent through the mails will be sent at the risk of the person sending it.

You do not have to collect subscriptions in advance, but as an evidence of good faith each Sunday AMERICAN subscription turned in must be accompanied by a small cash GUARANTEE payment as follows.

Length of Subscription.	Guarantee Required.	Vote Credit
6 Months	25 Cents	500
1 Year	50 Cents	1,500
2 Years	100 Cents	3,500
3 Years	100 Cents	5,000

The guaranteed payment, in each case, will apply on the LAST part of the terms of each subscription—subscribers must begin to pay for the paper immediately, beginning with your newsdealer's first delivery, at his regular delivery rate. The guarantee payments DO NOT apply until the LATTER part of the subscription term. For instance, if you have subscribed for three years and paid the $1.00 guarantee required with a three years' subscription, at the end of your term of subscription you will not have to pay for the last dollar's worth of papers.

After subscriptions are received at Contest Headquarters, a letter is sent to EACH PERSON WHO SUBSCRIBES, which will contain two printed forms—one the AMERICAN'S order on any newsdealer to begin delivery of the Sunday AMERICAN immediately to the subscriber whose name is written on this newsdealer's order. The other—a return postal card which each subscriber should have the newsdealer sign and return at once to Contest Department. Until this postal card is returned by the newsdealer, no credit for the subscription will be given to the contestant. Take these two forms at once to any newsdealer you may select—leave the order with him, have him fill in the blank spaces provided on the postal card, and mail postal back to the Contest Department at the earliest possible moment.

Contestants should see that all subscription blanks are carefully filled in and written plainly and legibly with every blank space provided on subscription blank filled in properly—except the No. ..... in the upper left-hand corner of each subscription blank, which should be left untilled for the use of the Contest Department.

Votes cannot be transferred from one contestant to another after receipt of same by the AMERICAN.

Votes should be sent in tied together in bundles of 100. All contestants are requested to use a rubber stamp with contestant's name and address. Only the top three or four coupons in each bundle of 100 need be stamped, but all bundles of 100 should be enclosed in an OUTSIDE WRAPPER, with name, address and DISTRICT NUMBER of each candidate stamped on wrapper.

The AMERICAN reserves the right to amend these rules and conditions from time to time, if it may seem necessary, in order to protect all contestants from any possible contingency which may arise.

Mrs. Eleanor Crafts was in white satin and Miss Dorothy Peabody in deepest rose.

Miss May Loring, who was a guest in the George A. Gardner box, was in pale blue satin trimmed with bands of gold outlined with black velvet. Mrs. Horace Stanton was, as usual, most attractively gowned, her stunning creation of pale blue satin draped with white lace, was enriched with gold sequins being one of the most gorgeous there.

In a outfit of palest blue satin and diamonds Miss Faith Simpkins of Boston and Washington created a mild sensation upon entering. She looked lovelier, and dressed more as was surrounded by a bevy of admirers.

Mrs. Bayard Thayer was handsome in black embroidered net over white satin. Miss Louisa Wells was in turquois blue velvet. Miss Rosamond Lang was in white satin trimmed with sable.

Mrs. George R. Fearing, one of the most attractive of our younger matrons, entertained a number of guests in her box and was looking in blue velvet brocaded with silver.

Miss Miriam Shaw was in her father's box with a party of guests, and wore deep rose satin and chiffon.

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer was in black velvet and Miss Sally Thayer wore white satin trimmed with a touch of black. Mrs. Richard Sears was in pink rose satin and her daughter, Miss Alice Sears was in rose satin and chiffon.

Like Queen Anne Pictures.

Like one of the pictures of Queen Anne Mrs. Gordon Dexter appeared, for her gown of brocaded white satin with hand painted flowers in dull gold was made with a double flounce skirt, very full, and a deep ruffle of white lace outlined the corsage, which was also adorned with a touch of emerald green satin.

Miss Nina Burnham, who was hostess in her private box, wore lavender chiffon embroidered in white and trimmed with touches of pink on both skirt and bodice.

Mrs. Charles F. Greenough, 2d, was in white satin and diamonds and Miss Ruth Elliot was pretty and winsome as ever in flowered pink chiffon and satin draped with sable.

Mrs. Robert Saltonstall was in emerald green satin and chiffon embroidered in diamonds, and Miss Constance Ierard was dainty in pale blue satin and chiffon.

One of the most delightfully gowned young guest of Miss Katherine Marvin in Albany, was performed by the Rev. Cotton Smith, [illegible]

ADMIRAL and Mrs. John C. Fremont entertained a number of young people at dinner on Saturday evening, given in honor of their house guest, Miss Violet Hamilton. Later on the party went to the valentine dance in the Navy Yard.

One of the most notable events of the week in Malden was the reception and tea given by Miss Gould and Miss Rosamond Gould at their residence, No. 24 Alpine street, on Tuesday afternoon, in honor of Miss Isadore Chase Lull of Newport, whose engagement to their brother, Warren Furber Gould, was recently announced. The ushers included Mrs. Frederick P. Harvey, Mrs. Jessie W. Morton, Mrs. Roger L. Cuyler, Miss Mamie Fulsbaugh, Mrs. Edward B. Horne, Mrs. Edward L. Phipps. They were assisted by Misses Dorothea Mann, Marguerite Stevens, Marion Dearborn, Edith Ryder, Marion Hanson, Barbara Fernald, Rebecca Fernald Viola Phillips, Mildred Hodgman, Evelyn Smith, Marion Otis, Florence Dustin, Marjorie Hodgkins, Elizabeth Letherman, Ruth Richardson, Genevieve Robinson, Malda Fairey, Ruth Orr, Mildred Elder, Helen King and Mrs. Albert Madeira.

Entries Already for Big Horse Show

ALTHOUGH the premium lists are just being sent out, entries are already coming in for the horse show at the Park Riding School the week of April 17, and the committee in charge has indication that the horses here are setting in line to make this exhibition a typically successful Boston institution. Inquiries are coming from all over New England and some very classy competitions will be the result.

The committee has been most successful in its efforts to secure a competent and representative board of judges. Among successes to the invitations to officiate in the various classes are Gerrish H. Curtis, Boston; draft horses; Dr. A. H. Finch of Boston; roadsters; Dr. Charles Cheever Cowdin of Newton and G. Pray Smith of Boston, horses in harness; Herbert L. Camp of Middletown, Ct., John Sheppard of Boston and D. A. Wood of Lenox, Mass., ridden horses. Dr. R. A. Hopkins and George Parsons and Thomas G. Frothingham of Boston, Mass., hunters and police horses. Captain A. M. Miller, U. S. A.

A novel valentine party was given Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Nora A. Gill, No. 21 Bellevue street, Dorchester. It took the form of a musicale, during which all the guests gave impersonations. Mrs. Katherine Christian was present as Jenny Lind, Miss Annie Quinlan, Annette Kellermann; Miss Katherine Sweeney, "Our Drummer Girl," assisted by Miss Mary Quinlan, violin. Others taking part were Ralph Gilman, Hugo Lundgren, Miss Nora Gill, Miss Lillian Mahoney, Miss Gretta O'Rourke, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Mullivan, Mr. Lee Christian and M. Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Otis of Fisher avenue, Brookline, are to occupy their Lenox residence on Beacon street about the first of the month. Mr. Otis is a brother of Harrison Gray Otis.

Mrs. Charles E. Inches of Beacon street, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Louise Inches, will soon go aboard for an indefinite cruise. The Boston street residence will be closed and the two sons, Charles E. Inches and Mr. Hathaway, will join their mother and sister abroad at some later date.

Mrs. Oliver Ames of No. 15 Commonwealth avenue is in New York, where she has not been able to leave her house since Mrs. Ames' death. Mrs. Ames' sister, Mrs. Hooper, at the Somerset on January 27, when she received with Miss Hooper.

Among the Bostonians in Paris at the present time are Marcus A. Kimball, Jr., and Mrs. I. B. Richardson and Mrs. Frederick L. Ames. In season, Mrs. Herrick makes her home at the Vendome.

Mrs. Leslie Bradley's loveliness was accentuated by her gown of deepest rose satin, the corsage outlined with silver embroidery. Miss Alley Bolt, one of the blonde beauties of her set, was in palest pink satin.

Mrs. Guy Lowell, whose former billowy proportions are now almost willowy, was resplendent in pale gray satin with rose embroidered in brilliants and a dog collar of pearls and diamonds.

Mrs. J. L. Bremer, looking extremely well in pale blue satin and chiffon, was among the late arrivals and, as usual, was most cordially greeted by those about before her.

Miss Dorothy Fay was lovely in pale blue satin and chiffon, while her sister Miss Fay wore a stunning and most attractive gown of deep cerise satin and chiffon. Their mother, Mrs. H. H. Fay, was in black satin and velvet.

Mrs. Hathon Motley was in white satin and black velvet, while her sister-in-law, so many handsome gowns this season, appeared in a charming creation of pale blue satin brocaded in gold and draped with gold embroidered net.

Mrs. Washington B. Thomas who came with her handsome daughter, Josephine, was in deep blue satin embroidered in gold, while Miss Margaret was most picturesque in pale pink satin with drapery of pink chiffon. Only a moment she relieved the black satin gown worn by her mother and that took the form of a long black sash.

Mrs. Gloria Thorndike's gown was of white satin and silvered tulle, a cluster of poppies adorning the corsage and one of the same blooms in her pretty blonde hair.

Miss Ethel Gibson wore a most becoming white orchestra gown of pale pink satin with overdress of white embroidered in silver, and a touch of blue on corsage and skirt.

Miss Barbara Burr, who arrived with a party of friends was looking as sweet and girlish as ever in her gown of white satin and a band of cerise circling her dark hair.

One of the most striking gowns was that worn by Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott. It was of pale pink tulle made in flounce effect, and a garland of cerise roses encircling the left side of the decolletage. Her sister, Mrs. Robert Saltonstall, made a charming picture in her handsome gown of peacock blue satin brocaded in gold.

Miss Ella Lyman wore a vastly becoming gown of pale blue satin draped with silver cording edged with marabou, and Mrs. Lara Anderson was a centre of interest in marine blue satin veiled with beaded chiffon. She always sees the gentle quietly becoming and Mrs. John F. Dwyer who red blue blood is represented, and on Friday night she was more charming than ever in a gown of embroidered black chiffon over white, with a phalange of black lace edged with black velvet.

Mrs. Dorothy Parker, who has entirely recovered from her recent illness, wore an exquisite creation of silver lame lisse over pale pink satin, the drapery edged with sable. She came with Miss May Curtis, who wore a most original gown of ivory satin draped with gray lace. A band of gold circled her Titian hair.

Miss Edith Deacon who has borne up so bravely during the long illness and death of her father, George Lee Peabody, was a pathetic figure at the funeral held Monday morning at the home in which she entered as a bride, the first one in the long family of Peabody brides following the sad, marked deepest mourning. With the death of Mr. Peabody, one of the largest and most important, financially, in the county, is thrown into mourning, for besides the Peabody interests are the extensive Peabody and Lawrences. Mrs. Charles Peabody, one of the patronesses who was present at the last assembly at the Somerset Friday night of course without the gown.

Brenton H. Dixon of the Somerset is to, according to latest reports, be married here in Florida, being now at Miami. Mr. Dixon is constantly on the golf links. Another Boston man recently heard from in Florida is Joseph R. Nutter, Jr., who has been cruising along the Florida coast in his yacht, Grayling. Mrs. Nutter was Mrs. Hopkins, Jr., of Bryn Mawr as his guest.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond have been extended any number of hospitalities since their return from Europe to their house in Washington. The Hammonds are among the most popular of the North Shore Summer residents, and their movements are always of interest to their Boston friends. Mrs. Hammond is giving her delightful Wednesday afternoon at-homes until the beginning of Lent.

Among Feetonians who have wandered to warmer climes are James H. Nason of the Chicago Club who is at Palm Beach and Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Appleton, Jr., who are at the Royal Poinciana. Appleton before her marriage was Natalie Gourlie of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Briggs of Lederer street have had recent arrivals in Southern California, where they are to spend the remainder of the Winter. Mr. and Mrs. R. S Whitney of Dedham are enjoying immensely their stay in Jamaica.

Professor William H. Schofield, Professor of Comparative Literature at Harvard, who is at present travelling abroad with Mrs. Schofield is to give a lecture before the students of the Sorbonne of Paris in March.

Mrs. George R. de Garsdorf (Madeline Lawrence) has been the recent guest of relatives in Interlaken, and the George F. Crockers have been guests at the Muenzinger King cottage at Newport.

Miss Barbara Pierce and her father, Walter Pierce of Beacon street, have returned from their visit at Poland Springs where they enjoyed so much the outer-door life.

Lenten Season to Halt Society's Pace

Greater Boston fashionables, some all but worsted by endless round of social pleasures, turn to Charity as period of sackcloth and ashes comes on—Vincent Club girls conspiring as they plan a vaudeville show

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

GAY heralds of Spring. The shop windows are filled with them. Gowns that look like flowers just bursting into bloom. Hats that set one dreaming of tea gardens and long sunny afternoons whiled languorously away in captures of rest.

Debutantes are all but worsted in the pleasure chase, but are making the best of the glorious NOW. Vincent Clubites are full of their own gay little conspiracies, for though they are to have no regular show, as usual, they are to give a vaudeville performance in the early Spring, which promises much in the way of entertainment and true fun.

For the sake of one of the sweetest of charities Mrs. Margaret Deland prepared her annual miracle-feat when she brought forth from darkness myriads of ravishing Spring blooms that all society upon the appointed day hastened to possess. It was a wonder-sale, both regarding the blossoms offered and the society people buying, for the world of fashion certainly turned out in force.

Usually at this point of the season social frivolities begin to lessen and society takes on a more serious aspect, but not so this year, for the merry and even mad pace continues up to the very end. Entertainments begin to widen in their scope and much energy now begins to be devoted to charity.

The debutantes, after a series of dances, [illegible] parties and dinners, have found their own little corner in the social world and the older set, after a strenuous campaign, begin to look forward to the rest which the Lenten season offers.

SOCIETY LITERALLY LEFT GASPING.

With the swish and swirl of the season's wind-up come so many events, all of importance, too, that society is literally left gasping for breath and we are left to wonder if they will really stand the strain until the close of the season.

The last week of the month will be without doubt the gayest and most brilliant of the year. Usually the last Assembly marks the grand finale of the season, but this year though that event took place Friday night the pace keeps up until the first of March, Ash Wednesday. Friday, the 24th, is the date announced for the ball which Mrs. Baylies is to give at her Commonwealth avenue house and which comes the same night as the annual Junior dance at Harvard. Then, on Monday, the 27th, comes the Prospect Union dance in the large ball room of the Somerset and this brings the events up to the very eve of Ash Wednesday. So with so many large affairs, and the hundreds of smaller ones sandwiched, besides the opera and the regular events, such as the skating parties and so on, there is little time left for the preparations for flight to the sun lands.

The patronesses for the assembly given Friday evening, were Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mrs. Bryce J. Allan, Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee, Mrs. William C. Endicott, Jr., Mrs. George R. Fearing, Jr., Mrs. Francis L. Higginson, Mrs. Robert Homans, Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell, Mrs. J. Grafton Minot, Mrs. Francis Peabody, Jr., Mrs. George T. Rice, Mrs. Winthrop Sargent, Mrs. Philip L. Saltonstall, Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, Mrs. Knyvet W. Sears, Mrs. Philip S. Sears, Mrs. John L. Thayer, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer and Mrs. Roger Wolcott. Mrs. Allan and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer were on the committee with S. Hooper Hooper, J. Grafton Minot, Philip Sears and Barrett Wendell, Jr.

Events of Easter.

Smart Easter events are this year even being announced this early, and Mr. Gorham Hubbard has issued cards for the dance he is to give at the Somerset on the evening of April 24, and which gives promise of being the largest event of the Easter period. Mr. Hubbard gave a handsome ball at the Somerset in January for his daughter, Miss Katherine Hubbard, who is one of this year's debutantes.

Great preparations are being made for the New England Kennel Club's show, to be held the middle of April instead of February, as in years past. With Henry S. Blake as chairman and Eugene V. R. Thayer, Richard C. Storey, James L. Little and other prominent men on the committee, the show this year will be an unprecedented success.

The annual gymkhana sports given at the New Riding Club yesterday afternoon proved most interesting. The list of events opened with a spoon race for the young children, which was followed by a polo ball and mallet race for the girls and a stocking and garter race for the boys. One of the prettiest events was the suffragette race for couples. A tandem race for girls, a shirtwaist race for boys, and a relay race for both boys and girls concluded the program.

Among the boys and girls taking part were George and Walter Baylies, Miss Nathalie Thayer, Miss Frances Bradley, Miss Margaret Bennet, Thomas P. Mandel, Miss Ruth Thayer and Miss Elizabeth Slisbee.

The mounted Mother Goose masquerade of the 4th of March, in which the characters will be taken from "Mother Goose Melodies" and from "Nursery Rhymes," will be among the season's most interesting affairs at the club.

Ball at the Somerset.

Naturally one of the most enjoyable affairs of the late month will be the dance at the Somerset on the evening of February 27, from 9 until 2 o'clock, the proceeds to be given to the Prospect Union of Cambridge. The younger girls of the smart set have long been keeping their daintiest gowns in reserve for this affair when men will be a-plenty and wallflowers an unknown quantity. For sad as it is, it must be admitted that there are many smart set wallflowers, owing to the scarcity of men for these dancing affairs. But Harvard men will be out in force for this event and all will be joyful.

The managers of the affair include Arthur A. Ballantine, George H. Balch, Arthur Drinkwater, Reginald Foster, Herbert Jacques, Jr., Ralph Lowell, Nathaniel S. Simpkins, Jr., Richard B. Wigglesworth, Alexander Wheeler and Robert Winsor, Jr.

On the reception committee are such well known women as:

Mrs. Oliver Ames	Mrs. John Lowell
Mrs. Charles S. Bird	Mrs. Albert W. Nickerson
Mrs. Allan Curtis	Mrs. Henry Parkman
Mrs. George R. Fearing	Mrs. Wm. M. Richardson
Mrs. Robert H. Gardiner	Mrs. Philip L. Saltonstall
Mrs. Herbert Jacques	Mrs. Fiske Warren
Mrs. A. Lawrence Lowell	Mrs. Henry Wheeler

The patronesses include:

Mrs. Gordon Abbott	Mrs. Augustus P. Loring
Mrs. Charles Almy	Mrs. Arthur Lyman
Mrs. Larz Anderson	Mrs. Wm. G. Nickerson
Mrs. W. DeFord Bigelow	Mrs. John F. Perkins
Mrs. Alfred Bowditch	Mrs. William Quincy
Mrs. E. D. Brandegee	Mrs. Percy Rackemann
Mrs. Robert S. Bradley	Mrs. M. H. Richardson
Mrs. H. D. Burnham	Mrs. Joseph B. Russell
Mrs. H. W. Channing	Mrs. John L. Saltonstall
Mrs. J. Dudley Clark	Mrs. Winthrop Sargent
Mrs. Charles K. Cobb	Mrs. William H. Slocum
Mrs. Julian L. Coolidge	Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears
Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge	Mrs. Henry Stackpole
Mrs. Eben S. Draper	Mrs. James J. Storrow
Mrs. George A. O. Ernst	Mrs. Eugene V. R. Thayer
Mrs. Chas. H. W. Foster	Mrs. John E. Thayer
Mrs. C. P. Greenough	Mrs. Joseph G. Thorp
Mrs. N. P. Hallowell	Miss Mary L. Ware
Mrs. Charles L. Harding	Mrs. Eugene Warmbaugh
Mrs. N. G. Horton	Mrs. K. G. T. Webster
Mrs. Dudley R. Howe	Mrs. C. Minot Weld
Mrs. H. S. Hunnewell	Mrs. George Wigglesworth
Mrs. James Jackson, Jr.	Mrs. Moses Williams, Jr.
Mrs. James Lawrence	Mrs. Robert Winsor
Mrs. John S. Lawrence	Mrs. Roger Wolcott
Mrs. Francis W. Lee

One of the most interesting of literary events will be the reading which Mrs. Josephine Preston Peabody (Mrs. Lionel Marks) is to give from her play "The Piper" on Monday afternoon, March 6, at 3 o'clock at Chickering Hall, for the benefit of the New England Hospital for Women and Children.

"The Piper" is the play which took the prize at the Shakespeare trial competition among a large number of competitors. The patronesses for the reading are:

Miss Mary S. Ames	Dr. Emma L. Call
Miss Sarah L. Arnold	Mrs. [illegible] Otis Cushman
Mrs. D. P. Abbott	Mrs. Charles A. [illegible]
Mrs. [illegible] S. Ayerland	[illegible]
Miss Katharine Lee Bates	Mrs. James R. Dunbar
Mrs. Jeffrey R. Brackett	Mrs. Clifford Dereus
Mrs. Philip H. Butler	Mrs. Laney A. Fifield
Mrs. Frederick H. Bradbury	Mrs. Walter M. Farwel
Miss Mary Coes	Mrs. George A. Goddard
Mrs. [illegible]	Mrs. Otis Norcross, Jr.
Mrs. [illegible] K. Horton	Mrs. [illegible] B. O'Brien
Miss Helen F. Kimball	Dr. C. Augusta Pope
Mrs. A. Lawrence Lowell	Mrs. Henry G. Perkins
Mrs. Harriet Minot Laughlin	Mrs. Charles Pickard
Mrs. [illegible]	Mrs. Edward C. Richardson
Mrs. Thomas Mack	Mrs. Benjamin P. Rich
Mrs. Edward W. Nash	Mrs. Benjamin C. Robinson

Decorative Arts Exhibit.

Prominent among the events of March will be the "Retrospective Exhibition of the Decorative Arts," which is to take place March 8 in Copley Hall. The sub-committees for the various departments are:

Furniture, wood carvings, frames and the New England collection, Henry Sleeper, chairman, Mrs. Benjamin S. Blanchard, Frederick H. Curtiss, Desmond Fitz Gerald, Charles H. Tyler and Francis H. Bigelow; tapestries, embroideries, textiles and costumes, J. Templeman Coolidge, Jr., chairman; Frank Gair Macomber, E. M. Mrs. W. L. Parker is in charge of the invitations.

A delightful affair of the late Winter will be the dinner dance which Herbert M. Sears of Commonwealth Avenue is to give on the evening of Thursday, February 23, in honor of his pretty debutante daughter, Miss Elizabeth Sears, for whom so many delightful hospitalities have been given this Winter. The dinner will be rather a small affair, some forty invitations having been issued, while about one hundred more cards have been sent out for the dance.

On the following evening comes Mrs. Walter C. Baylies's dinner dance for Miss Elizabeth Parker and Miss Grace Brooks at her home in Commonwealth Avenue.

At Sportsmen's Dinner.

Among the Bostonians who enjoyed the sportsmen's dinner given at the Waldorf-Astoria Wednesday were A. Henry Higginson and Henry G. Vaughan. Norman Prince and Harry Lee were the Boston men present who were associated with the polo interests.

Musicales held a prominent place on society's calendar the past week. Among the hostesses entertaining in this manner were Mrs. Charles Storrow, of Brookline, who gave a musicale Thursday, Miss Mary Shreve Ames, who gave a tea followed by a musicale at her home in Dartmouth street, Friday afternoon; Mrs. Samuel J. Mixter, who gave a similar hospitality at her Marlboro street home, Friday evening, and Mrs. Henry M. Whitney, who is giving a musicale at her Brookline home today. Aside from the musicales Mrs. W. Scott Fitz gave her weekly concert at her home in Beacon street, on which occasion Miss Bessie Belle Collier played violin selections accompanied by her sister, Miss Grace Collier.

March 7 is the date set for the dance which Mrs. C. Minot Weld is giving in the Tuileries and for which she has issued a large number of invitations. Though there is no special guest of honor, it would seem an appropriate farewell hospitality for Miss Marian Weld, who sails for Europe on the 18th for an extended absence. Miss Weld is going over to join her sisters, Miss Elizabeth Weld and Miss Margaret Weld, who have been abroad all Winter, chaperoned by their aunt, Miss Elizabeth Linzee of Marlboro street.

Ball at Draper Home.

There is much anticipation being evinced by the younger members of the smart set over the small dance which ex-Governor and Mrs. Eben S. Draper are giving at their Beacon street home on the 10th of March for their daughter, Miss Dorothy Draper. Miss Draper is at present on a cruise to the West Indies with her father, and they are expected to return the 22d of February.

For the last in the series of Brattle Hall subscription dances held last evening in Cambridge from 8 until 12 o'clock the patronesses were Mrs. William Taggard Piper, Mrs. William Minard Richardson, Mrs. Joseph Gilbert Thorp and Mrs. Robert Dixon Weston.

The concert to be given by the MacDowell Club and the Musical Art Club at Jordan Hall on Wednesday evening, March 1, at 8:15 o'clock for the benefit of the South End Music School the two clubs will combine in giving "La Nuit," of St. Saens, and soloists from both clubs will assist.

For the New England Kennel Club's approaching show at Mechanics Hall, E. V. R. Thayer, Richard Storey, James L. Little and Henry S. Blake are on the Committee of Management.

Carolyn Sturgis To Be Spring Bride

ANOTHER Spring bride that is to be is Miss Carolyn Sturgis, whose engagement to Theodore T. Scudder was announced at a recent tea given by her mother, Mrs. Russell Sturgis, Jr., at her Fairfield street residence. Mr. Scudder is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop S. Scudder of Cambridge, and at present is completing his studies at Harvard. The wedding date is to be announced later.

A Cambridge wedding attracting much social attention was that of Wednesday which united Miss Ruth W. Bunten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Bunten of that city, to Fred Forrest Field of Brockton. The ceremony was performed at the Third Universalist Church by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Frederick W. Hamilton. Mr. Field is a member of this year's class at Harvard, and with his bride will travel abroad, returning in June to take his degree. The young couple received the congratulations of friends and relatives at the reception following the ceremony, at the home of the bride's parents, No. 188 Upland road.

Congratulations have poured in upon Miss Harriette A. Woods, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Woods of Chestnut street, since announcement was made that she is to wed Norman Romney Sturgis. Miss Woods will make one of the charming coterie of Spring brides. She is a niece of the Rev. Dr. Roland Cotton Smith, who officiated at the Munn-Boardman nuptials in Washington yesterday. Mr. Sturgis is the son of Dr. and Mrs. William Codman Sturgis, who are at present living in Colorado. The young man finishes his course at Harvard this year.

Miss Edna Alice Gilman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawren A. Gilman of No. 202 Clifton street, Malden, was married on Wednesday to Allan Hiram Whitman, Harvard '02, and son of Mrs. James Whitman of Boston. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents and a reception followed at the Kernwood Club. After the honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Whitman will make their home at No. 160 Maple street, Malden.

Another wedding of Wednesday was that of Miss Elsie M. Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Turner of Melrose, who became the bride of Dr. Lawrence F. Keith of that city. The ceremony took place at the home of the groom, No. 5088 Main street. Dr. Keith is a graduate of the Boston University Medical School, winning much fame as an athlete during his student days.

Mrs. John T. Hollingsworth (Amie Hampton Clark), who is a great favorite in the North Shore summer colony, with other members of her wedding party, were entertained during the week at Philadelphia, where a luncheon was given in her honor by Miss Mildred Lee. Miss Clark was a St. Valentine's Day bride.

Miss Dorothy Dearborn Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harris of Worcester, was married in that city on Wednesday to H. Paul Buckingham, son of Mrs. George B. Buckingham of No. 29 King street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Vincent F. Tomlinson at the Unitarian Church and a reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, No. 68 Lincoln street.

Dr. and Mrs. Walter Channing of Brookline have announced the engagement of their second daughter, Miss Rosalie Channing, to Rosert Rivers, a recent Harvard graduate, now a resident of Milton. The Channings have a magnificent country estate at Sherborn, and their daughter who is to wed was presented three seasons ago.

Captain and Mrs. William H. Greenleaf of Gloucester announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Clara Hilda Greenleaf, to Ichabod Francis Atwood of Boston.

Cupid Leads In March to Altar

MISS MARGARET DeFORD, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry De Ford of Tappan street, Brookline, who was one of the debutantes of the season last year, is betrothed to John B. Chapin of Mar[illegible] street. No date has yet been set for the wedding, but it will take place during the Summer season. Mr. Chapin is the son of Mrs. Henry Bainbridge Chapin. He graduated from Harvard last June.

New Bedford was the scene of a wedding of social importance yesterday when Miss Susan Williams Grinnell, daughter of Mrs. Edward G[illegible] [illegible] of that city, became the bride of Win[illegible] Rotch Severance, a former noted oarsman of Harvard and a present resident of California. The ceremony was performed at 1 o'clock by Rev. Mr. Geoghegan, pastor of the Unitarian Church. The maid of honor was Miss Clara G. Bourne, of New Bedford, and a sister of the bride, Mrs. B. F. Merrill, of Westwood, was matron of honor. Miss Grinnell and as bridesmaids Miss Mollie Hall, of Milton, Miss Helen Duncan, of Detroit, Miss Helen Billard, Miss Elizabeth Hussey, Miss Elizabeth Swift and Miss Anne Plummer, all of New Bedford. The bridegroom was attended by Francis Stone, and the ushers were Henry Wason, Francis Grinnell of Brookline, John Bullard, of New Bedford, Richard [illegible] of Keene, N. H.; Francis M. Rackemann, of [illegible]; Sullivan A. Sargent of Brookline and George P. Denny of Chestnut Hill.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's mother.

One of the interesting announcements of the week was the engagement of Percy D. Haughton, the Harvard football coach and athlete, to Mrs. Gwendolyn W. Howell, of New York. Mrs. Howell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Deane Whistler and widow of the late Rev. Dr. Richard L. Howell, of Washington. She was left a great fortune by her late husband. She is a grand niece of the late James McNeil Whistler, the famous American artist. Mr. Haughton is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Graeme Haughton. He is related to Bishop Lawrence on his mother's side. He resides at Brook House, the Haughton estate in Brookline.

In order that her brother from South America may be present at her wedding, Miss Olive Fitz Gibbon is delaying her marriage to Jordan Dumaresq. On the arrival of the brother the exact date for the ceremony will be set. Miss Fitz Gibbon is staying with another brother in New York.

Foreign Lands Attracting Social Set of Boston

THE delights of a sojourn at Ormond, life under sunlit skies which Jamaica or Bermuda affords, shooting [illegible] at Miami or perhaps [illegible] trip to the Mediterranean [illegible] during the week to gain [illegible] followings from among the society folk of Boston. Trains and steamers going southward from New York city have had many people of prominence from this [illegible]. The mildness of the Winter could not make them stay at home this season, and the flight toward Europe has had its share of Boston favor as well.

Miss Edna Ormond was one of the guests [illegible] given on Edward [illegible]'s house boat at Palm Beach [illegible] in the week and delighted the others assembled there with her singing during the concert that formed part of the evening's entertainment. Leonard D. Ahl, who is also at Palm Beach, gave a dinner a few nights ago in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Perkins. Dr. and Mrs. Eager [illegible] Smith of Boston, were among the new arrivals registered at the Breakers.

The recent arrivals at Palm Beach include Mark Hopkins, formerly of Beacon street, who is about to start from that point on a yachting cruise in company with Joseph S. Bigelow, Jr., of Commonwealth avenue; Mrs. Llewellyn Powers of Kent street, Brookline, widow of the late Governor Powers of Maine, and Miss Powers, who are at the Breakers, and Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] of Warren street, Brookline.

Colonel Charles A. Hopkins of Aspinwall avenue, Brookline, is abroad for an indefinite stay and went accompanied by his daughters, the Misses M. A. and Louise Hopkins. During the week letters were received bearing the information that they are at Cannes, where the [illegible] are in full sway. The polo contests, so much in vogue there, have served to attract all three as spectators.

Miss Eleanor Cotton, her aunt, Miss Lillian Clapp and Miss Joseph[illegible] daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J[illegible] of Cambridge were passengers [illegible] Kaiserin Auguste Victoria [illegible] New York a few days ago [illegible] en route for Paris where Miss Cotton and Miss Clapp will join Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cotton.

Mrs. Nehemiah W. Rice and Miss Rice of Commonwealth avenue are about to leave for Southern California, where they will remain until early in the Spring. The Rices have a town house on Commonwealth avenue and spend the Summers at their fine estate located at Burgess Point, Beverly.

T. Jefferson Newbold, who during his term at Harvard was a great favorite in this city among members of the younger set, is at Palm Beach where he [illegible] with Bostonians. Mr. Newbold, following his graduation from Harvard last year, entered the employ of J. Pierpont Morgan.

Mrs. William Sturgis H. Lothrop of Chestnut street, who is in mourning for one of her little sons, who passed away at Buzzards Bay late in the Summer, left for Bermuda during the week, being accompanied on the trip by her other children [illegible].

Charles T. Gallagher and his daughter, Miss Amy Gallagher, arrived at Kingston, Jamaica, a few days ago and contemplate [illegible]. At Bermuda they will join Mrs. Gallagher and Mrs. Isaac F. Paul, who sailed from New York early in the week.

Colonel Harry Converse of No. 256 Beacon street knows all the delights of life in the South and in the West Indies, for he has just returned home from a [illegible] spent in cruising. During his journey Jamaica, Cuba and the Panama zone were visited by him.

Among those sailing on the Hamburg boat out of New York during the week, bound for Bermuda, were the Rev. William H. Van Allen of Brimmer street, David C. Percival, Jr., of Commonwealth avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Perkins of Jamaica Plain.

Mrs. Robert Winsor of Marlboro street has reached Southern California, where she will remain until the opening of the Summer season. On her return here the family will go to the Weston estate and later on to Cape Cod.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond, who are so prominent in the North Shore colony, returned from Russia in time to attend the Decies-Gould wedding and are now staying in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Skinner of Dedham are touring in Cuba, and Dennison [illegible] was one of the number to join the Boston colony at the Alcazar, St. Augustine, during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Bangs of Fairfield street are to leave for Florida this week, where they will remain for some little time.

Mrs. Thomas G. Frothingham of Commonwealth avenue, and Henry A. Froth[illegible]

[illegible]

Mrs. Robert Dawson Evans was so well pleased with Stockbridge last season that [illegible] to return there this year and [illegible] the occupancy of the villa on Main street now leased by Mr. and Mrs. Brown Caldwell.

[illegible] couple have a fine country estate on Cape Cod.

Among [illegible] the pleasures attending the court held in the castle at Berlin a few [illegible] was Miss Edith Perry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Perry of Ma[illegible] street. Earlier in the week, Miss [illegible] was presented at the imperial court.

Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] of Commonwealth avenue, Hamilton Rice, Philip R. Weld of the Somerset Club and George Nixon Black of Beacon street were among the passengers leaving New York [illegible] trip abroad.

[illegible]

Mrs. Samuel D. Warren intends to take her [illegible] of the present school term and will be greatly missed in the Mattapoisett colony this season. Her third daughter, Miss Sylvia Warren [illegible].

General and Mrs. Samuel C. Lawrence, who are occupying their fine country estate near Ormond, were numbered among the guests of honor at the tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Day Spillman, on their steam yacht [illegible] early in the week.

[illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Parker Bremer of Mt. [illegible] street, at Manchester, has been leased to Guy Arthur Pierce of St. Louis for the coming season. Mrs. Bremer is now in Europe, where she will remain for some months.

[illegible] residence on Kirkland street, Cambridge.

The merry season at Old Point Comfort is being participated in by Mrs. John Wing Prentiss, the eldest daughter of J. Murray Kay of Gardner road, Brookline.

Mrs. and Mrs. Henry Parsons King of Beacon street are traveling in Mexico where they contemplate remaining until April.

Mrs. L. L. [illegible] avenue gave a valentine luncheon on Tuesday. Covers were laid for fourteen.

C. Howard Clark, Jr., Elected Commodore

C. HOWARD CLARK, Jr., who, though a Philadelphian, is identified with the West Manchester colony, has just been elected commodore of the Manchester Yacht Club. The [illegible] commodore is [illegible] and the rear commodore is Francis M. Whitehouse [illegible].

Mrs. [illegible] of Beacon street, who is the guest of Mrs. Robert Moscow of St. Paul street, Baltimore, was the recipient of numerous social honors in that city during the week. She was the guest of honor at dinners given by Mrs. Morison, Mrs. Randolph Barton, Jr., and at a luncheon given by [illegible] Smith.

Members of the exclusive colony at Bar Harbor, which includes George B. Dorr, Dr. Augustus Thorndike, Mrs. Alanson Tucker and [illegible] are interested in [illegible] being made, which includes the building of a steel pier for the landing of yachts.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. [illegible] of No. 282 M[illegible] street have been flooded with congratulations [illegible] daughter. The little one has been named Helen for her mother, who was Miss Helen Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Washington B. Thomas of No. 20 Gloucester street.

Charles E. Littlefield, paymaster U. S. N., and his bride of last season (Mrs. Kirk Armour of Kansas City and Magnolia) are passing the late Winter at Washington, where they have apartments at the Willard.

Miss Sarah L. Barnard, who spends her Summers at Mattapoisett, and is so well known among Bostonians, has left Washington for Bermuda instead of going to Europe, as she had originally planned.

The Misses Loring, sisters of Judge William C. Loring, have gone South to remain the rest of the Winter and have closed their house at Pride's Crossing.

Professor and Mrs. Dougald Jackson of Upland road, Brookline, have arrived home after a delightful holiday spent abroad.

Cupid and St. Valentine Join in Week's Revel

ST. VALENTINE or Cupid? Really it was hard to tell the past week, [illegible] which had the centre of [illegible] the consensus of opinion [illegible] had joined their forces, for the magic of the day certainly must have accounted in some part for the happy culmination of so many "affairs de coeur."

Cupid, be it known, is a dead head at the opera and the late season air fairly [illegible]

Another interesting engagement which is bringing no end of congratulations and felicitations in its train is that of Joan Deford of Harvard, youngest son of the [illegible] Deford of Baltimore, to Miss Agnes Drewry, daughter of the late Dr. Drewry and Mrs. Drewry of Chesterfield County, Florida. Miss Drewry is said to be a most interesting young girl and a member of one of the old aristocratic families of the South. One of her [illegible] Deford, [illegible] Mr. Deford's other brothers [illegible] Deford, [illegible] Robert, [illegible] formerly of Harvard, whose wedding to Miss Dorothea Hoffman was one of the important events of the past season in Baltimore. His two sisters are Mrs. W. S. [illegible] and Mrs. [illegible] frequently visits Boston [illegible] Swann.

[illegible] the engagement of Miss Helen Putnam and [illegible] Sigourney. Miss Putnam is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Putnam (Harriet M. Walker) of Boylston street, Brookline, while the prospective bridegroom is a son of Mrs. Henry Sigourney (Louisa A. Powers) of Beacon street. Miss Putnam has not as yet made [illegible] to be numbered among the buds of next Winter. Mr. Sigourney is a graduate of Harvard in the class of 1907 and is a member of the [illegible] and the Boston Athletic Association. His sisters are Alice, Edith, Katherine and Mary Sigourney. Owing [illegible] of the prospective [illegible] the engagement [illegible].

Vincent Club girls seem to be going off like the proverbial hot cakes and one of the latest of that interesting group's members to announce her engagement is Miss Ida Vose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vose of East Walpole, to Edmund J. B. Huntoon of Canton. Miss Vose is quite a musician, and is much interested in philanthropic enterprises. Mr. Huntoon is [illegible] the Harvard [illegible] in the class of 1904 and [illegible] with the Paris [illegible]. The wedding is to be one of the [illegible] events and will no doubt be [illegible] one with a large number of attendants and all that goes to make a picturesque bridal.

Another interesting engagement is that announced by Mr. and Mrs. Elmer L. Mason of Mount Vernon street, North Cambridge, [illegible] Miss Marion Aldea Mason, a graduate of Wellesley, class of 1910, to Albert Lincoln Mellor of Plymouth. Mr. Mellor is a Harvard man, class of 1908.

Boston is interested in the recently announced engagement of Miss Caroline Auchincloss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Auchincloss of New York and a cousin of Charles [illegible] Auchincloss, who some years ago married Rosamond Saltonstall of Boston to Dr. Robert H. Fowler.

The [illegible] Mansfields of Lowell street, Wakefield, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marian Mansfield, and Herman F. Buck of Wilmington.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Kennedy of Roxbury announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eleanor C. Kennedy, to William T. McDermott also of Roxbury.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Peirce Elliott of Newton Highlands, formerly of Philadelphia, to Elinor Harlo Robinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen C. Lowe of Highland street, West Newton, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Esther, to Barton Leonard of Brookline.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland Libbey of Worcester have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Viola E. Libbey, to Herbert C. Poore of Wellesley.

Archbishop Guest at Brookline Musicale

ONE of the most fashionable gatherings of the season was held in Whitney Hall, Brookline, last Sunday. The occasion was the afternoon tea and musicale given by Mrs. T. H. Murnane in aid of the building fund of St. Aidan's parish.

The entire suite of halls was thrown open to the guests, who numbered 300. Palms and ferns, with appropriate scenery, transformed the stage into a bower of greenery and formed a fitting background for the brilliant artists who contributed to the enjoyment of the afternoon.

CONCERT IS GIVEN IN REAL SUMMER BOWER

THE home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Mahoney, [illegible] avenue, Allston, was the scene of an attractive gathering Wednesday evening, when one hundred and fifty of their friends were entertained at a musical and reception.

The finely arranged program contained selections from some of the famous composers. From numberless hanging baskets and horns-of-plenty, jonquils and ferns in abundance transformed the spacious rooms into summer bowers. Hanging hearts formed the portieres. Tinted lights, beautifully gowned women and delightful music completed an evening long to be remembered by the guests.

The musical numbers were given by: Professor Joseph Cecil Idone, baritone; Mrs. Maurice Marks, soprano; William J. Flanagan, baritone; Frank O'Brien, pianist; Miss Mary Tracy, soprano; Joseph H. Campbell, reading; Mrs. George T. Quinn, contralto; Arthur C. Killion, tenor; Mrs. George Solomon, soprano; Mrs. Mahoney, pianist, and Mr. Mahoney, violin.

Nearly 1,000 people attended the annual reunion of the Church of the Holy Family at Rockland, which was held in Opera House Hall. In the first part of the evening a concert was provided. It consisted of vocal solos by Miss Clara Tobin and Mrs. David Weinberg, violin solos by Carmen Fabrizio of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and selections by the choir. After the entertainment there was dancing till a late hour. The floor was in charge of D. M. O'Brien, who had an able corps of assistants.

St. Mark's Little Ones Give Creditable Play.

Much credit is due to the children of St. Mark's Sunday school, Ashmont, for the manner in which they presented the operetta, "While Mortals Sleep." The play was given Friday night in Whiton Hall, Dorchester, before a large and appreciative audience. There were more than sixty children in the cast. The little ones impersonated breezes, birds and all familiar characters of Mother Goose. The leading role of the Prince was taken by Miss Gertrude Sullivan, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. John J. Sullivan. Others who took leading parts were Miss Frances [illegible], who was seen in the role of "Mother Goose"; Miss Mary Hallihan, who impersonated "Little Miss Muffet"; Walter Dolan, who played the "North Wind"; Miss Agnes Welch, who portrayed "Little Bo Peep," and Miss Bertha Stewart, who was seen as "Little Boy Blue." There were also many brownies and fairies, who were played by members of the Sunday school.

New Parish Has Organized Guild

The women members of St. Colman's new parish of Brockton gathered last week and organized a guild, to be known as St. Catherine's Guild. The members are enthusiastic over their new parish and are doing a great deal in the way of assistance to the new pastor, Rev. James J. Dermody. Fr. Dermody spoke at the meeting and congratulated the people on the sense of duty they displayed in taking hold so zealously and gave a word of encouragement to them to continue their cooperation with the assurance that the new church will be begun in the near future. Mrs. Valentine R. Donovan was chosen president of the guild and Miss May Donnelly, first vice president. Other officers selected are: Mrs. George Noons, second vice president; Mrs. John Condon, treasurer; Miss Catherine McIntyre, secretary. Final arrangements for the big parish supper to be held next week in G. A. R. Hall were made and Mrs. John Condon, Mrs. Dennis Feeney and Mrs. David Lyon were appointed a committee to make arrangements for the affair.

Fully 800 members and their friends of the Twentieth Century Catholic Club of Brockton were present at the annual Guest Night which was observed in brilliant style in Massasoit Hall. The guests were welcomed by Mrs. B. Milo Burke, Mrs. Valentine R. Donovan, Miss Nellie Plunkett, Miss Alice M. Smith, Miss May Papineau, Miss Grace Sexton, Miss Lillian Kennedy, Mrs. M. F. Twomey, Miss Mary Hickey, Miss Elizabeth Sheridan, Miss Margaret Duggan, Miss Julia M. Barry, Mrs. J. J. Dowd, Miss Ellen M. Hannigan, Mrs. J. C. Buckley, Mrs. Charles Daly, Miss Lucy Murphy, and Miss Alice Morey. Among the special guests were Mayor Howard, ex Mayor and Mrs. [illegible], superintendent of Schools and Mrs. George L. Farley and Representative John P. Buckley.

The members of the committee were: Mrs. [illegible], Mrs. [illegible] Sullivan, Mrs. James McCormack, Mrs. Joseph Hannigan, Mrs. William Fitzpatrick, Mrs. William Sullivan, Mrs. E. J. Cockran's Treat to Mission Church Men.

The thousand or more men who sat in St. Alphonsus Hall on Monday night and heard Bourke Cockran deliver his magnificent eulogy of Lincoln enjoyed an intellectual treat which they cannot soon forget. In his great effort Mr. Cockran was at his best. In excellent voice, with all that grace of declamation of which he is so consummate a master and with a power of historical recital as graphic as it was fascinating in its delivery, Cockran's oration on the Martyr President, as he gave it to the Mission Church men, ranks first in the forensic achievements of the silver-tongued New Yorker. From the first word to the last it was a mighty effort. The cheers which greeted the orator as he resumed his seat but feebly expressed the feelings of patriotism he had aroused in the breasts of his delighted hearers.

The [illegible] speech of Dr. John Grant Curry, who preceded Mr. Cockran, was also a rare effort. It is seldom that two such addresses are heard at the same banquet board. Every man who was present in the hall could not but feel a deep [illegible] to the beloved rector, Father Hayes, and to the spiritual director, Rev. Peter Carr, for having provided a banquet program that was in every feature so full of profit and enjoyment.

Union Whist Party Enjoyed by Many.

The whist party of the Catholic Union on Friday evening was enjoyed heartily by all present. It was the last pre-lenten whist of the Union. At a signal from the chairman, W. T. A. Fitzgerald, the strains of "Hearts and Flowers" assembled the dancers in a marching line which wound its way through the reception hall. Upon re-entering the hall each guest was wearing a huge red heart. Then the marchers gradually worked towards the centre of the floor and there assumed the form of a heart. The effect produced was striking.

Among those present were:

[illegible]	Mrs. John B. Dore
[illegible]	Mrs. John Kiggen
Miss Josephine Cavanaugh	Mrs. Edward Hiller

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Why Not Shave It Off? If You Do It Right, It Does It Better Than Most Depilatories

You might just as well shave as use a pasty substance which is to be applied to remove superfluous hair. This simply removes the surface hair, therefore the effect is the same as shaving, only the razor is more convenient and takes it off cleaner. Of course, it does not matter which way you do it, you only remove the surface hair, which will return stronger after each removal. The same applies to other worthless compounds and so-called liquid cures. De Miracle is not like these, it is the only method that gives proof that it is absolutely non-poisonous, safe and sure. You are not asked to buy it on our BARE WORD. It is the only preparation of its kind which is endorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals, prominent magazines and newspapers. Remember, the longer you use such treatments as those referred to above the stronger the hair will grow and the harder it will be to remove it. De Miracle is sold at all good stores including Houghton & Dutton Company.

No honest dealer will offer you a substitute on which he makes more profit.

We will send you a 32 page booklet containing full information concerning this remarkable treatment. You should read this booklet before you try anything. Write to the De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. 30, 1905 Park ave., New York, simply saying you want this booklet, and it will be mailed, sealed, at once.

Note—All readers of this paper who are afflicted with superfluous hair growths are strongly advised to write for information concerning this wonderful method, which is endorsed the World over by eminent authorities, who have made a lifelong study of this subject.

ROYAL WORCESTER ADJUSTO CORSETS

PRACTICAL, STYLISH, COMFORTABLE and DURABLE—these words summed up tell you the story of the ADJUSTO. This matchless corset is the final result of years of study, research and the scientific application of a thoroughly practical idea.

Thousands of women, the average, the slender and the stout, never experienced the joy of real corset comfort until they wore the ADJUSTO. Moulding and shaping the form the ADJUSTO way is the modern way—the correct way. Try it.

THE ONLY SAFE, PRACTICAL AND HYGIENIC METHOD OF REDUCING ABDOMEN AND HIPS IS WITH THE ADJUSTO BANDS

THE ADJUSTO has many times proven itself to be of inestimable value, not only as a reducing corset, but as a perfect abdominal support. Then, too, with the aid of the IMPROVED REDUCING BANDS and SUPPORTER LOOPS, the corset skirt is held down smooth and flat, uniformly reducing hips and upper limbs.

Ask your dealer for the ADJUSTO. If you cannot procure it we will direct you to nearest dealer, or send postpaid on receipt of price.

BOSTON GIRLS FAVORITES IN WASHINGTON SOCIETY

MISS ALICE A. AND MISS JULIA A. MEYER

THERE are few girls in American society attracting as much attention socially as the two interesting and pretty Meyer girls, Alice and Julia, who this Winter, with their parents in Washington, have been much in the lime light. Naturally Boston feels a deep interest in all concerning the winsome misses, and society here follows closely their every move. They are among the most popular of the younger people making up the North Shore colony, and are always conspicuous figures at our horse shows and other Summer events. Though Miss Alice Meyer is not figuring as conspicuously in the fashionable doings of the capitol city this Winter, she is still, so it is said, doing much quiet entertaining, and a number of her Boston girl intimates have been among her guests at her home.

SOUTH BOSTON

A valentine party by the Geography Club of the South Boston High School was held in the gymnasium hall of that school and was attended by 100 couples. The matrons were seated under an American flag. They were Miss Mary L. Gates and Miss Mary Cutter. The officers were Thomas P. O'Connor, floor director, John F. Conley and Maurice Brodie, assistant floor directors, and the following aids: Thomas Geary, George Holland, Wyndham Heffernan, Michael Kelly and Misses Carrie Adeil, Elizabeth Esterbrook, Helen Murray, Helen Kirby and Helen Saechy. The guests of honor were Headmaster A. D. Small, John H. Farley of the commercial department and M. Joseph Redding, athletic instructor of the school. During the intermission in the dancing there was an entertainment by Miss Charlotte Linnell, Miss Mabel Hermance, Miss Annie Murray, Miss Lottie Johnson, Miss Marguerite Cohen and Edward L. Sullivan.

How to Make a Pint of the Best Cough Syrup and Save $2

This recipe for home-made cough remedy is used and prized in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. It costs little, but it is splendid. Even whooping cough yields to it quickly.

Mix 1 pint of granulated sugar and ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex [illegible] worth in a pint bottle and add the Sugar Syrup. This makes more and better cough syrup than you could [illegible] ready made for $2.50. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

This simple remedy will usually stop a deep-seated cough in less than 24 hours. It tones up the appetite, has a pleasant taste and is slightly laxative, which is helpful. You will also find it splendid for bronchial troubles, lung and throat affections, asthma, etc.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe is so popular that it is often imitated, though never successfully. In trying it use only the pure, genuine Pinex, which contains guaiacol and all the natural healing elements of Norwegian white pine extract, in concentrated compound.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A GOOD SHAMPOO FOR ONLY ONE CENT

"It is hardly believable that women will pay a dollar for a shampoo," says Mae Martyn in the San Francisco Chronicle, "when they can give themselves a better one at home for about one cent. Yet such is true, and invariably women paying the exorbitant price have thin, straggly hair.

"Every woman can have fine, glossy hair if she will carefully dissolve a teaspoonful of canthrox in a teacup of hot water. This should be poured over the scalp and rubbed until it lathers well, then the hair rinsed thoroughly.

"You will find this canthrox shampoo not only restores natural lustre to the hair, but makes the head feel good and banishes itchiness of the scalp. Be sure to get an original package of canthrox."

Fat Reducing Ideas Are Proven Nature's Best

Fat is food turned into the wrong kind of material for the body. Instead of the blood taking up the food we eat and giving it to the body in the form of good, hard, sound flesh, nerve and bone, fat is thrown into the tissues and is packed around the organs beneath the skin. This at last tears down all the vital forces of the system and destroys not only man's health and comeliness, but likewise results in death. The sure way and the best way is to take a Marmola tablet after each meal. You may then eat what you will, and when you will, and the stomach and digestive organs will turn the meal into the very kind of nourishment you most need. Fat is stopped at once, and the fat you have is removed in a way that nature herself suggests, at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces per day, and there are no flabby rolls of skin and deep wrinkles left to remind you of the days when you were fat. [illegible] druggist sells these tablets, which are made after the famous Marmola Prescription. [illegible]

BRILLIANT PROGRAM IN OPERA THIS WEEK

BY FREDERICK JOHNS

THE sixteenth week of the Boston opera season promises to be the most brilliant of all and interest cannot wane when such extraordinary inducements are offered to the music loving public.

In the first place there is the first performance by the local organization of Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," when the tenor part will be sung by Amadeo Bassi, while Carmen Melis will essay the Italian Manon.

On Monday night Massenet's "Manon" will be repeated with Lydia Lipkowska in the title role, and the cast will include Edward Clement.

Friday night Boston will have an opportunity to see the "Girl of the Golden West," with Emmy Destinn, who created Minnie in New York, and Pasquale Amato, who created Jack Rance at the Metropolitan. These artists will sing with Constantino and the other Boston principals.

Saturday afternoon "Lakme," the exquisite little French opera in which Lydia Lipkowska made her American debut last season, will be sung for the first time this year. Clement will sing the part of Gerald.

On Saturday night "La Boheme" will be sung with Alice Neilsen, Constantino, Fely Dereyne, Polese and Mardones.

SPRINGFIELD THURSDAY NIGHT.

Thursday night the opera company goes to Springfield, where "Aida" will be sung with Melis, Claessens, Polese, Mardones and Constantino.

On that night the Boston Opera House will be occupied by the New York Symphony Orchestra, Walter Damrosch, conductor, and Isadore Duncan, the classic dancer, in a Bach-Wagner program of dances.

* * *

Knowledge that a great dramatist had already made a play out of a famous book would deter other dramatists from using that book for stage purposes, but it is quite the contrary with composers.

Operatic history is full of instances where two or more operas were written upon the same theme. Composers seem to delight at opportunities for comparison.

Rossini wrote the "Barber of Seville" after hearing an opera upon the same subject by Paisello, who is now forgotten, but who was a great man when Rossini was young.

Paer whose "Maitre de Chapelle" was sung by the Boston company last season, wrote an opera, "Eleonora," which Beethoven heard, and the mighty musician selected the story of "Eleonora" for his "Fidelio."

There have been many such instances, but usually the weaker musical setting perished and the great work alone has survived.

There have been cases when two great operas were inspired by the same subject. Goethe's "Faust" caused Gounod to compose his opera and sent Boito to writing "Mefistofele," both of which have come down from the middle of the nineteenth century side by side.

Debussy is now engaged in writing "Tristan und Isolde" and hopes to stand comparison with the mighty Wagner music drama, so composers of to-day are as anxious as ever to make new musical settings for works which are already famous in opera.

* * *

Last week we heard the "Manon" of Massenet, an opera founded upon the romance of Abbe Prevost's "Manon Lescaut." It was first produced in Paris in 1884. The novel has received three musical settings, that of Auber, of Massenet and Puccini.

The Puccini "Manon Lescaut" was first sung in Italy in 1892. It achieved immediate success. It is full of melody that is typical of Puccini, the youth, the composer of "La Boheme," and there is little to suggest the composer of "The Girl of the Golden West." It is tragic in its atmosphere. The lightning change love affairs of Manon struck Massenet as amusing, and he wrote an opera comique, but "Manon Lescaut," despite many absurdities, is a grand opera.

Like the French opera, "Manon Lescaut" begins in the courtyard at Amiens, where a coach arrives, deposits Manon, who meets Des Grieux and elopes with him to Paris.

That is the end of the young lovers. Lots of things have happened between act one and two and we find Manon the favorite of Geronte.

Des Grieux penetrates to her apartment and succeeds in awaking her old love for him. This is very different from Massenet, who has Des Grieux retire to a monastery and sends Manon there after him. The lovers are discovered by Geronte, who calls the police and has Manon sent to prison.

The third act shows the quay at Havre, where Manon and other naughty girls are embarking per force for the colonies. This is the greatest scene of the Puccini opera. The fourth act finds Manon in New Orleans, where she is followed by her faithful Des Grieux and where she dies after a lengthy duet.

John Philip Sousa is in England, where his marches, his concert band and his conducting are the subject of serious discussion by English critics. This amuses a local newspaper critic, who suggests that Sousa is not a conductor at all, but a motorman.

"He was mistaken for a conductor by the owlish Britons by the quantity of small change in his possession. Not having travelled in America they were unaware that we provide conductors with pockets for their small change, whereas Mr. Sousa hangs his all over the front of his jacket."

Sousa has a weakness for medals, that is a fact, but we should not let his medals, his whiskers and his dinky way of waving his baton blind us to the fact that here is a true American composer. He may not be great, but he is the greatest we have. Sousa's marches are not composed upon German or French models. He is no American disciple of German schools of composition, clothing common-place ideas in Wagnerian orchestration.

Sousa writes for a brass band, for men marching in the open. To his music they tramp with a long, easy stride, and his bold martial tunes thrill soldiers and spectators alike.

While other American composers occasionally get on a concert program in Berlin or Vienna because they write like Germans and almost as well, the compositions of Sousa have penetrated every nation in the world. The Young Turks marched upon Constantinople to the tune of "Stars and Stripes Forever," played by their own bands.

Sousa writes American melodies. They do not remind you of Wagner or Berlioz, and if he disregards the formulas laid down by bespectacled Europeans for marches and overtures, more power to him.

Hats off to the only American composer the common people of England, France, Germany and Italy ever heard of.

* * *

The compositions of Sousa and of every other American composer suffer from the demand of music publishers for simplified pianoforte arrangements.

There are probably several million pianos in this country and about three-quarters of them are owned by persons who can play only the simplest music.

A Sousa march which can be played on all of these pianos means a fortune to the publisher, but a proper musicianly arrangement would make it impossible to sell except to fairly good performers.

In Europe a piano in a home means a music student who is earnestly hoping to become a great pianist. In America it is simply an article of furniture at which everybody from mother to little brother, takes a whack at, and it is seldom in tune.

CHORUS OF 5,000.

Rehearsals for Pageant Already Under Way.

Rehearsals of the singers of the pageant "Darkness and Light" which will be given in connection with the Missionary Exposition in Mechanics Building April 24 to May 20 are now taking place. The chorus, which is already over 2,000 strong, is rehearsing in four sections. The whole is in charge of E. Cutter, Jr., who is personally superintending the rehearsals at the First Methodist Church, Temple street, Boston. Grant Drake will conduct the chorus which meets at the Eliot Church, Newton. J. A. Loud is conductor of the chorus at the Dudley Street Baptist Church, and E. A. MacArthur conductor of the Crombie Street Congregational Church, Salem. Mr. Cutter is the organist of the Park Street Church. These soloists have been engaged: Mrs. F. Annesley of England, who sang in the pageant at the "Orient in London" in 1898; Henry Gurney, tenor, who also sang in the London pageant, and Frank Conly of Philadelphia, bass.

It is planned to have a chorus of 5,000 which will be divided into sections so that 1,000 persons shall participate at each performance. In this way it will be possible to give the pageant many times.

IN OPERA AND CONCERT

TETRAZZINI COMING HERE

Noted Soprano Will Give a Concert in Boston Next Month.

Luisa Tetrazzini, the coloratura soprano, will give a concert in Boston early in March. Critics have been digging the graves of coloratura singers by predicting that the old fashioned operas will soon cease to be performed. In an interview the singer refutes their arguments.

"I have no quarrel with the new composers who do not write such music for such voices; it is very difficult music to write, and that is perhaps why—but no; I will not say it.

"There is much about the new that attracts for a time, but unless the new has the divine spark illuminating it, the new will not last; when 'Elektra' and 'Salome' were repeated the second season in New York the seats sold for the two performances for the price of one regular performance; but when I sang Lucia the seats were sold three weeks in advance.

"Puccini? He has written well but may he not have written too much?

"'The Girl of the Golden West' is a failure; 'Lucia' will live as long as singers are found who possess the technique and temperament."

"And what is temperament?"

"The Lord alone can define that word. He gives it, and He alone knows what it is; we can tell it when we see it, when we feel it, we call it the divine spark, we term it personality, capacity, poetry of human nature; it is like electricity, you can feel it, but you cannot know what it is; temperament often makes a fool of one, but one cannot be a fool who has it.

"It was possession of temperament and atavism for I came of a family of musicians, which made me a prima donna in five months' study. It is not egotism to claim temperament, for no one was ever successful in any creative effort who had it not."

Boston Choir Singers

No. 3—Bertha Cushing Child.

Mrs. Bertha Cushing Child is contralto soloist at King's Chapel and Temple Israel in Commonwealth avenue. She is one of the best known church and concert artists in New England. Mrs. Child began her musical studies in Boston under the instruction of Miss Clara Munger and continued her work abroad with Madame Bracre Richard of the Paris Opera. On her return from Europe Mrs. Child engaged in church and concert work in New York and Brooklyn, but returned to Boston after a short time.

She created the female part in "The Pipe of Desire," the Converse opera, which was first produced in Jordan Hall and which has since been added to the repertories of the Metropolitan and Boston Opera Companies. She has appeared in oratorio, concert and recital in Boston. She resides in Brookline, but came originally from Virginia.

MISS ORMOND TO SING.

Recital Here After Winning Tour of the West.

Miss Lilla Ormond, the Boston singer, who has recently completed a concert tour of the West and South with much success will give a song recital at Jordan Hall on Monday afternoon, February 27th at 3 p. m. The concert is in aid of the Student Aid Fund of the Miss Gilman School Association. Miss Ormond will sing a varied and interesting program including many contemporary English songs.

A concert by the Musical Art Club with the orchestra of the McDowell Club will be given in Jordan Hall on Wednesday evening March 1 to secure funds for the South End Music School. The chief feature of the program will be a performance of Saint Saens "Night."

NEWS AND NOTES OF THE MUSICAL WORLD

February 21 the Kneisel Quartet will give its final concert of the season in this city in Chickering Hall. The program is of unusual interest. Carlo Buonamici, the pianist, will assist in the performance of Schubert's quintet in A major, "The Trout." A quartet, op. 6, by Frederick A. Stock, the director of the Theodore Thomas Orchestra, will be played for the first time here in its entirety. The scherzo, the second movement of the quartet, has been heard in Boston. There are two more movements and opening "allegro appassionato" and a finale in free form, in which themes from the previous movements appear. This work was completed about twelve years ago. Mr. Willeke, the 'cellist of the quartet, will play the Bach D major suite for 'cello unaccompanied. [illegible] cessfully played by the Kneisels earlier in the season, will be repeated.

* * *

The Wagnerian exercises which Walter Damrosch and Isadora Duncan have chosen for their new Bach Wagner program to be given at the Boston Opera House on Thursday evening, are well adapted for such a combination. The Tannhauser Bacchanale in the Paris version, was written by Wagner for the ill-fated Paris production on a conception so stupendous and making such demands on the [illegible] up to, the ideas demanded. Miss Duncan portrays the various incidents — the Dance of the Nymphs, the Pursuit by the Satyrs, the appearance of the Three Graces, the various allegorical pictures, etc., aided only by the mighty Wagnerian orchestra led by Walter Damrosch. The other Wagner selections include the Flower Maidens' Dance from "Parsifal" in Act II and the merry little Dance of the Apprentices from "Die Meistersinger."

* * *

The Symphony Orchestra will be away the coming week on its fourth Southern trip. The usual concerts will be given in Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, New York and Brooklyn and the third and last concert of the season in Hartford on Monday evening. The interesting feature of the trip will be the performance of the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven in Baltimore with the assistance of the Baltimore Oratorio Society and a quartet consisting of Mme. [illegible] soprano; Miss Janet Spencer, contralto; Daniel Beddoe, tenor, and Mr. Clande Cunningham, basso. This work was given a year ago this month in Baltimore with such success that there was a decided demand for its repetition this season. Mr. Warnke is to be the soloist in Philadelphia, Mr. Schroeder in Washington and Ferruccio Busoni in the other cities.

* * *

More than 1,000 persons attended the annual musicale of the Whitman Woman's Club last week. The artists included the Hoffman Quintette, consisting of Messrs. Jacques Hoffman, Adolph Bak, Karl Reissland, Carl Barth, and Henri Schuetz. Miss Caroline Hudson was soloist and George Sawyer Dunham of Brockton was the accompanist of the evening. The arrangements for the comfort and convenience of the large audience were in the care of Mrs. Harry Stanley, Mrs. J. Elmer Whidden, Mrs. H. H. Hovey, Mrs. Maurice Kane, Mrs. E. A. Parker, Mrs. F. C. Howard, Mrs. T. F. Donahue, Mrs. J. A. Thompson, Mrs. A. J. Bonney, Miss Grace B. Stetson, Mrs. Anna B. Tabor, Mrs. Allen R. Carlton, Miss Mabel Curtis, Miss Mildred Torrey, Mrs. Maria K. Lewis, and Miss S. Jessie Merrill.

* * *

A concert by advanced students of the New England Conservatory took place in Jordan Hall Friday evening. It consisted of vocal and instrumental selections. Miss Mildred Day, of Winchendon, played Tombelle's "Fantaisie sur les Noel" for organ. Miss Pearl Seller, of Shamokin, Pa., a toccata in G minor, for piano, by Rheinberger. Three Schumann songs by Miss Twanette Sutter of Mitchellville, Ind., a Beethoven Romanza, for violin by Miss Laura Clark and selections by Miss Alvina Beers, of Somerville, Miss Ethel Harding, of Providence, Miss Stella Bundy Crane, of Jamaica Plain, Miss Mima Montgomery, of Salida, Col., Miss Irene McWilliams, of Scottdale, Pa., and Ralph Williamson of Lockport, N. Y., completed the program.

* * *

A pupils recital at the Bach Piano School, of which Henry Delafield is director, took place Tuesday night. The programme included several piano compositions by Mr. Delafield. The performers included Joseph Murphy, Maurice Frank, Miss Mildred Neetow, Leo Schwartz, Miss Mary Cohen, Miss Esther Hewes, Arthur Moore, Miss Rose Lew, [illegible] Fitzgerald, Miss Miriam Frank, Miss Rosa Gordon. The feature of the concert was the performance of the Mendelssohn Concerto in D minor, and two Liszt Rhapsodies by Miss Fanny Alleman, an eleven year old girl, whom Mr. Delafield declares to possess extraordinary talent.

* * *

Dr. Richard Strauss has given heed to avalanche of hostile criticism which German reviewers visited upon his "Rosen Kavalier." It is announced that the composer has decided to make radical cuts and changes in both the score and the libretto, especially in the second and third acts, so that the next two elaborate performances of the work in Berlin and Vienna will differ conspicuously from the premiere version given in Dresden on January 26. It is still unknown which theatre will produce "The Rose Knight" in Berlin.

* * *

The second concert of the Brockton Choral Society [illegible] directors voted to conduct a third concert this season and everything [illegible] originally planned except that a [illegible] Verdi's "Requiem." More than 500 seats have been subscribed for the final concert. The plan most favored is for a miscellaneous concert with [illegible] features and with high school [illegible] members.

* * *

Miss Irene A. James, of [illegible] street, Brockton, for the first [illegible] organist at the Ames Memorial [illegible] North Easton, has been chosen organist and musical director of the [illegible] Methodist Church of Brockton. [illegible] Memorial church in the State [illegible] begin her duties April 2. She will succeed Frank [illegible] Packard [illegible] his wife, Mrs. Nellie Evans Packard, well-known vocalist, who is choir leader. The positions will be merged.

* * *

There are very few musical artists who come to Boston who are more warmly welcomed and more [illegible] than Mischa Elman, the extraordinary violinist. Elman will give his last recital this season in Symphony Hall Saturday afternoon, March 4th, at 2:30 o'clock. When he gave his recital here January 21st the audience recalled him again and again [illegible] out the lights before they could induce it to go home, everyone agreeing never had his playing been more [illegible].

* * *

An interesting musical and [illegible] was given in Huntington [illegible] Hall last Wednesday by Miss [illegible] Loveland Westcott and Leon L. Mat[illegible]. Miss Westcott possesses a very unusual thrilling contralto and is well known here as a church and concert singer. The Dutch quintet gave several selections assisted by Mr. S[illegible], tenor, and Miss Naugler, soprano. Mr. Matthews [illegible] a dramatic sketch called "The Bluffers," which was written by Mr. Matthews.

* * *

The Municipal orchestra will give two concerts during the coming week. The first will be on Thursday evening at Roxbury High School, with Miss Ida M[illegible] [illegible] ton, violinist, and Mrs. Anna Howe Hartling, 'cellist. A second municipal concert will be Friday evening at Faneuil Hall with these soloists: Thomas J. [illegible], tenor, and Frank H. Eaton, flutist. Professor [illegible] will be [illegible] music. The program will consist largely of operatic excerpts.

* * *

The Scandinavian residents of Boston and others are preparing to make the [illegible] Club concert a great success. The [illegible] is composed of Scandinavian students and the object of the concert is to support classes for Scandinavian immigrants at the Prospect Union, Cambridge. The concert will take place in Jordan Hall and a splendid list of artists, headed by Alice Nielsen, will appear.

* * *

The only [illegible] recital of Ferruccio Busoni, the eminent pianist who made such a profound sensation in Symphony Hall at last evening's concert and the public rehearsal Friday afternoon, will be given in Jordan Hall, Tuesday afternoon, February 28, at 3 o'clock. His program, which will be made up entirely of compositions by Chopin and Liszt, will comprise some of the masterpieces of these two great composers.

* * *

Helen Hopekirk, who is one of the best known piano interpreters in New England, will give a recital in Steinert Hall on Wednesday afternoon, February 22. Her program will include a little tone picture "Sundown," of her own composition, the Beethoven Sonata in E minor, Schumann Sonata in G minor, Concert Etude in C major, by Rubinstein, two Chopin waltzes, Brahms Rhapsody in G minor, and a caprice by Arthur Foote.

What Constitutes Real Happiness? by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

WHAT constitutes real happiness? Life has many avenues for enjoyment; for amusement; for passing pleasures.

But for real, enduring happiness, we must look to just one place—the home.

We may go out and enjoy a theatre; a visit with friends; an ocean voyage; travel, and sightseeing. But when we turn our footsteps homeward, unless we find love and contentment waiting at the threshold, and unless they go with us from room to room, and lie down with us in our beds, we have no found the solitaire jewel—Happiness.

There are hundreds of successful men in the land, who give their families money, position and all the pleasures which wealth and independence can supply.

But they do not give them happiness; because they do not give them companionship and sympathy.

A woman who was possessed of sufficient wealth to enable her to obtain whatever she wished, and who was free to go and come, and to entertain at will, confessed to a friend that she was a very lonely woman.

"My husband cares only for his business," she said; "or for his clubs. He has lost all taste for quiet, domestic joys. He does not know what to do if he spends an evening at home. He has not cultivated a taste for reading or music; society bores him; so he goes to his club; or he goes hunting; or he seeks some inaccessible spot with a lot of men, and goes fishing when he wants a change. He gives me money to carry out my own desires; and he thinks this is being a good husband. He cannot understand that I am lonely for his companionship; that I want some of the old-time hours he gave me when we were engaged, and when we were first married; hours when he hurried to my side as soon as he left his office, and when just to be with me and talk of little personal things was a pleasure to both of us. He became absorbed in business, and it drew him farther and farther away from me, and he felt that the children filled my life. But the children are now grown and have pleasures of their own, and I am the loneliest of women."

Surely this man cannot be called a successful man.

If you are a young married man and you find yourself drifting away from the home pleasures and caring less and less to be with your family, halt and right about face.

Stop and think the matter over.

Where are you going and what are you seeking that is better than the things you are leaving behind?

What do you expect to gain that can compensate your wife for the loss of your interest in her society, for the loss of your companionship?

It is not to be expected that men and women can always retain the high wrought state of interest and excitement which marks the association of the newly betrothed or the newly married.

Men and women are both expected to grow calmer and less romantic in their manner of expressing their mutual regard, as life settles into the quiet, domestic routine.

The old comparison of the lover to the man pursuing a train, and the husband to the man who had caught the train and sits quietly reading his newspaper, is always apropos.

But the man who has caught the train appreciates it; and while the train is inanimate and does not need to be told that it is appreciated, the wife is human, sensitive, and alive with affection, and DOES need the assurance that her husband is glad that he "caught her," and that he appreciates his possession.

There can be no keener anguish for a woman who is passing out from the green hilltops of youth into the valleys of mature life than to feel that she is passing alone without the close companionship of the man who chose her from the whole world to be his companion.

When she sees him losing interest in her society; when he shows satisfaction that she is entertained in some or any way which enables him to find his own distractions elsewhere; when he goes out from his home with more animation and seeming interest than he enters it; when he expects money to supply her with everything she needs, and shows a restless discontent or irritability when she wants him to be with her, these are the nails which are driven into the flesh of the loving woman, as life crucifies her on the cross of marital disappointment.

Frequently the fault lies with the woman; and all unconsciously to herself, she built the cross and led the way to Calvary. Scores of women find themselves at middle life out of step with the husbands of their youth.

They do not realize how they failed to make any effort to lengthen their own short steps to accommodate the longer stride of the man; and only when the man is far in advance and the woman watches his receding figure does she awaken to the fact that distance has separated them, and that it is impossible for them to walk side by side as of old.

Then she wonders and weeps and blames destiny and her husband. In the beginning, the matter of happy companionship in marriage depends largely upon the woman. In the first year, the husband (in America, at least) is almost invariably more deeply in love than the wife; and if she has the tact and the skill and the unselfishness to study his tastes and to adapt herself to his needs she can keep herself closely in touch with him; and while she enters into all his pleasures, and makes herself necessary to him, she can lead him into bypaths of her own choosing and help to develop new tastes and new interests for him.

It is only the exceptionally selfish man who, seeing his wife take a vital interest in whatever pleases him, does not respond to some degree where her proclivities lead. Once let a man and woman make the determination to keep in step along life's pathways, and to remain good comrades and lovers to the end of the road, the Lost Paradise is refound.

Life, with all its sorrows and cares and hardships, wears always rainbow hues; and the most commonplace duties assume dignity; the most trivial pleasures become great joys.

Such companionship is worth some effort.

It is worth the exercise of self-restraint; of self-denial; it is worth the development of the charity which overlooks little faults and forgives seventy times seven.

It is worth your effort (busy man of affairs though you are) to give some hours of each day, or of each week, to showing your wife that you really care to be with her, and that you are not sacrificing time which should be spent otherwise, but consecrating time to life's highest use, that of making happy those we love and those who love us.

There is no pleasure or satisfaction to a refined woman in having her husband stay at home or take her out as a duty. Unless he can make her feel that it is a pleasure to him to be with her he better remain away.

But many a man who imagines he enjoys himself better elsewhere than at home is suffering from abnormal tastes, acquired in pursuit of wealth. He has grown to crave business conversation, even when he is out of his office, and to think and talk and dream only of money making.

Were he to resolutely pull himself together and to realize all that this state of mind endangers, he would be able to feel the old pleasure in his home and domestic and social relations.

And when a man knows, as every reasoning man must, that only by giving of himself freely, affectionately and spontaneously, can he make his house a real home to his wife and children, surely he ought to feel that it is the one avenue of true happiness for himself.

Shubert Theatre.

A play peopled with individuals and topics typical of the American people of to-day, daringly true and sensationally dramatic this is "The Fourth Estate," which will be seen at the Shubert to-morrow for an indefinite stay.

The play tells the story of Wheeler Brand, star reporter of the Advance. He is a reformer and idealist. He uncovers some crookedness in vena decisions by the judge, which requires three acts before the exposure is made.

Prominent in the cast presenting "The Fourth Estate" are Charles Waldron, who is seen as the managing editor; Selene Johnson, George Thompson, Harriet Ross, Tom Halaway, Dudley Mitchell and a large number of others who have many times demonstrated their ability to intelligently interpret the parts entrusted to them.

Globe Theatre.

When George Barr McCutcheon's "Beverly" is presented at the Globe Theatre to-morrow afternoon local playgoers will have an opportunity of enjoying one of the most delightful romantic plays of a decade, which has been favorably received in Buffalo, Toronto, Cincinnati, Pittsburg and Chicago, and is now en route to New York for an extended engagement at a leading Broadway theatre. "Beverly" is a dramatization of Mr. McCutcheon's story "Beverly of Graustark," by Robert M. Baker, who has adhered very closely to the story contained in the book, with the result that he has succeeded admirably in retaining the atmosphere of the delightful little principality.

Boston Theatre.

A feature that is making Julian Eltinge and his clever musical comedy, "The Fascinating Widow," popular with the women patrons of the Boston Theatre, is the splendid costuming of the star and female members of the company. It affords a better study of fashion plates than a promenade the whole length of the most exclusive thoroughfare of Boston. "The Fascinating Widow" with its brilliant star must go down in theatrical history as the feminine record breaker of the playhouse.

Castle Square Theatre.

Only one week more of "Faust" at the Castle Square, but it promises to be a week of no less success than the first. In both the spectacular features and in the acting of himself and his company, Mr. Craig has triumphed. As a story, mingling comic and the tragic in equal proportions, "Faust" is all-absorbing, and its many thrilling situations have received their full approval at every preformance. Mr. Craig's own impersonation of Mephistopheles is a very clever piece of acting. He emphasizes the human side of the character, he is not over-fiendish, and at all times he makes a plausible demon who is by no means terrifying in manner, although his deeds are sufficiently devilish. Mary Young is a charmingly ingenous Marguerite, sweet, pretty and thoroughly the peasant girl called for by the text and situations, and Mr. Hassell, Mr. Bertrand, Miss Colord and Mr. Homans contribute to the effectiveness of the production.

Bills at the Theatres

Grand Opera House.

The bill of Lillian Mortimer's comedy-satire "Business Is Business" which will be this week's offering at the Grand Opera House, with an entire matinee Wednesday, Washington's birthday, deals with the everyday story of frontier days in the Great Southwest. A big real estate boom is the keynote running through the play and the efforts of the tenderfoot from the East to get rich quick, coupled with the love affair of the daughter of a cattle king and the tenderfoot, show a lively and interesting story. Each act is a scene showing a different section of the West, a ranch scene and a crowd of cowboys, a mining camp and an Indian camp with its squaws and a fullfledged reproduction of a ranchman's home will be seen, each in its turn.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

The event of the season at B. F. Keith's Theatre is the bill this week, when Gertrude Hoffmann and her company of forty will be the feature in her "New Revue." This is unquestionably one of the most elaborate and costly productions ever staged, and one of the best work done by Miss Hoffmann herself. Besides a most incredible number of the prettiest girls procurable, and the setting of the piece is impressive, something like a dozen different characters, including Ethel Barrymore, George M. Cohan, Anna Held, Adele Ritchie, Eddie Leonard, Isadora Duncan, Valeska Suratt, the Ziegfeld Follies Girls, Harry Lauder and a number of others.

Nevertheless, this star attraction, as a matter of fact, is not the only big feature on the splendid bill of the week. Paul Seldom's Venus, the most beautiful series of living statuary and models ever presented, will be conspicuous on the bill, and Delong Sisters, Phil Staats, the heavyweight juggler, and the four Rooneys in comedy acrobatics; Dupree and Kelly in dances, and Lahr's remarkable clever dog act, are also on the bill.

Majestic Theatre.

It is often a hopeless task for a business manager to take a run of two months in a Boston theatre but that is the record of "Mutt & Jeff" at the Majestic show gets when it opens there next Monday night. The musical milestone of the city to-morrow. A multi-fully three-company act of a huge order, and far

PERMIT INVESTMENT IN MORTGAGE BONDS

Law Giving This Right to Savings Banks Favored by Real Estate Exchanges.

SECURED BY REAL ESTATE

Will Allow More Money for Big Projects, Now Hard to Obtain.

By FRANK A. LAVELLE.

REAL estate brokers and bankers throughout the city and State are vitally interested in the petitions which have been presented to the Legislature asking for the passage of a bill to authorize savings banks of Massachusetts to invest in bonds and notes secured by first mortgages on real estate.

The Boston Real Estate Exchange, W. J. McDonald, real estate broker at No. 93 Milk street, and another have submitted drafts for such a bill and a hearing was given on these last week by the committee on banks, and [illegible]

Favored by Exchange.

Secretary Frederic H. Viaux of the Boston Exchange spoke in favor of the measure and left the following letter with the committee on behalf of his exchange:

The directors of the Boston Real Estate Exchange at a meeting held December [illegible] voted that a petition be presented to the Legislature of 1911 praying for legislation to authorize savings banks to invest in bonds and notes [illegible] first mortgages on real estate, which petition was duly filed with bill printed as House Bill No. [illegible]

The object of this legislation is the encouragement of large real estate enterprises, such as hotels, office buildings or [illegible] the mortgage financing of which cannot be cared for by a single savings bank. This is the day of the large enterprise in real estate as in commerce. National banks found consolidation necessary to meet the larger financial requirements of modern commercial conditions. Through co-operation by this legislation, savings banks can meet similar requirements in the development of real estate, to the great advantage of the [illegible] and to the enlargement of their field of safe mortgage investment.

Any provisions which may be required [illegible] savings banks or by the bank commissioner for the better protection and [illegible] of the [illegible] in this [illegible] seem desirable to your committee [illegible] do not defeat the main object of the bill will be acceptable to the petitioners.

Some of Its Good Points.

President John J. Martin of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, W. J. McDonald and others spoke in favor of the measure, and at the close of the hearing it was voted to have Bank Commissioner [illegible] take all the bills and draw up a [illegible] satisfactory to his office. J. Porter [illegible] attorney representing Mr. McDonald [illegible] submitted with [illegible]

This proposed legislation is in line with [illegible] to provide [illegible] par with government [illegible] in carrying out of large real estate projects which have been deterred on account of the unwillingness of some of the banks to attempt to carry big mortgages, for these mortgages could be then split up among a number of banks. It would also provide more mortgage money than real estate men are able to get now, for the banks could then invest in these first mortgage bonds, which would not pay less than four per cent., rather than in Western railroad bonds, which many of them now carry as quick assets.

TO ENCOURAGE THE SMALL HOUSE OWNER

Frank Bailey, vice-president of a New York title company, who has just returned from Europe, in speaking of European and American real estate taxation methods, said:

"In France the basis of taxation of real estate is based on its rental capacity, and the first 500 francs, or $100 of rental value is entirely exempt from taxation, the idea being that the larger properties should pay the larger taxes, and the little house owner should be as nearly as possible exempt. At the same time on the larger properties there is a marked difference between the relations of the landlord and tenant, which are most interesting to a real estate owner at the present time. The tenant here can take a lease of a flat and pay or not as he wishes, the only remedy being a suit at law, which takes time.

"While every restriction and proper imposition is put on the landlord, the tenant also maintains his part—he has no right to destroy a building if he does not like the landlord, and if he does he is properly punished. If he has agreed to pay rent for a year, and his wife concludes to move to the country for the Summer, it is impossible for him to remove his furniture unless he complies with the terms of the lease.

"If our system of taxing real estate to its utmost capacity, accompanied by restrictions on landlords, of a kind, with which I am in the main in sympathy, are to continue, then there is no doubt but that France will either depreciate in value, or there must be impositions placed upon the tenant in the same line as is adopted in England and France.

"Both of these countries of much more forward in their legislation for the small man and much more interested in their taxing of the well-to-do, but there is not a single tendency in any of their legislation by which the tenant is freed from the responsibility of maintaining the building which he occupies. I believe a change in this way is the very germ of the future real estate, and at the same time would be of great benefit to the tenant in that it would encourage house ownership of a high grade."

OPPOSE REPEAL OF LAW.

Boston Exchange in Favor of Present Betterment System.

The Boston Real Estate Exchange was represented at the State House hearing Thursday by its secretary, Mr. Viaux, and John T. Hosford, in opposition to House Bill No. 559, providing for the repeal of the 125-foot street betterment law. The bill seeks to repeal the present street betterment law and permit the city to assess betterments for street construction on lands bordering on or near the improvements, permitting the assessment of an entire neighborhood on account of street construction.

The Real Estate Exchange committee represented that the bill interfered with stability of real estate conditions, and appeared to burden the construction of the side or connecting streets in the suburban wards, that the depth of the suburban building lot was decreasing rather than increasing and that the assessors were quick to impose a tax on lands improved through street construction beyond the betterment.

REAL ESTATE TRADES CONTINUE TO IMPROVE

Speculators and investors are continuing to increase their presence in the real estate market and this fact has resulted in an increased demand for good investment properties in all parts of the city. The South, West and North Ends are especially active just now, and there is also a demand for property in the Back Bay.

The proposed improvements in this latter district and the activity that is now going on there, with the promises of still greater developments being carried on there within the next few months has stimulated interest in this section of the city to a point that indicates the opening of this vast district to an activity that it has never before experienced.

Among the sales reported yesterday was the property at No. 25 Berwick park, near Carleton street, South End, comprising a three story and basement, octagon-front, brick house and 2,142 square feet of land, which has been purchased by the Hotel Clifton Co. of Maine, from Joseph Kenney, the title passing though William L. Burbank. It is all taxed for $8,300, of which $3,700 is on the land.

Abbie B. Taylor has purchased from Jennie Biloski a four-story, swell-front, brick house and 1,285 square feet of land on Chandler street, extending through to Lawrence street, near Berkeley street, South End. This property is assessed on a total valuation of $8,000, of which $3,800 is on the land.

Peter Barsugila has sold to Ida A. McGreevy a three-story and basement, swell front, brick house and 2,184 square feet of land, on Greenwich park, near Columbus avenue, South End, all taxed for $8,300, of which $2,750 is on the land.

Myer Dana et al of the Kimball Building have conveyed the property at No. 61 Phillips street, West End, consisting of a store and three apartments, to Frank Sher. There are 865 square feet of land and the property has a total assessed value of $4,500, of which $1,700 is on the land and $2,800 on the building. The building is in a thickly settled location and stores and apartments are in good demand. The owner buys for investment.

Sales by the Edward T. Harrington Company.

ARLINGTON—[illegible] Beach Land Company [illegible] 5,000 square feet, to Jeremiah [illegible] of Cambridge [illegible] on Marathon street, containing 5,000 square feet, to A. D. Carpenter of Arlington Heights. The Squire Real Estate Trust were the grantors.

EVERETT—Another of the old landmarks of Everett has been sold this week, it being the estate at No. [illegible] Broadway, so long occupied by the late Dr. J. F. Wasmund. The estate comprises a single dwelling house and about 10,000 square feet of land, the total assessment being $7,400. The purchaser was Joseph Bloomberg, the grantors the heirs of [illegible] Wakefield.

The mortgage department of this firm is now under the charge of Mr. George W. Caston, who will attend to the wants of borrowers on real estate.

WINCHESTER—Herbert Nash et al, trustees, of Winchester, have sold a parcel of land on Forest road, between Yale street and Wedgemere avenue, containing 14,400 square feet. Helen W. Keller was the purchaser.

SOMERVILLE—The sale is reported of a two-family house and 4,500 feet of land on Cutter street for Grace R. Wood. The property is assessed on a valuation of $3,300. Jasper Whitehouse of Boston was the purchaser.

NEWPORT—The trustees of the Newport First Beach Land Company, Newport, R. I., have conveyed to J. W. Roche lot No. 359 on Kane avenue, containing 26,400 square feet.

MEDFORD—The Natick Savings Bank has sold the estate at No. 66 Sheridan avenue, consisting of a single house of eight rooms, bath and reception hall, together with about 5,000 square feet of land, all assessed on a valuation of $3,500. The purchaser was M. Finlay of Boston.

NORWELL—Deeds have gone to record conveying title to the A. Waterman estate, containing twenty acres of land upon which are the usual farm buildings. The property was purchased by G. E. Dixon.

ROSLINDALE—The sale is reported of land on Belgrade avenue, containing 3,540 square feet. The land was sold for James H. Dooley to M. McPherson.

LEXINGTON—Deeds have gone to record conveying title to an estate on Waltham street, the grantor being A. E. Scott. The property sold was a new and very attractive house. The lot contains 9,000 square feet of land. E. J. Gibson was the purchaser.

Sales by Henry W. Savage's Office.

ROSLINDALE—Henry W. Savage reports he has sold for James V. McIntyre, a new house located in the Metropolitan Hill district, No. 6 Vista street. The property consists of a single frame dwelling, with [illegible] square feet of land. The house being new is not yet assessed. The land is taxed on a valuation of $[illegible]. Irene M. Baker, of [illegible] bought for a home.

EAST SOMERVILLE—Henry W. Savage reports that final papers have gone to record in the sale for Mary A. Locke of her property No. [illegible] Mt. Vernon street, consisting of a frame house and 3,000 square feet of land, assessed for $2,000. The purchaser, who bought for investment, was H. M. Hutchins and was represented by F. H. [illegible] of Somerville.

NEWTONVILLE—Henry W. Savage reports final papers have passed in the sale of [illegible] of the [illegible] No. 66 Birch [illegible] road, consisting of 22,625 square feet of land and a [illegible] frame dwelling [illegible] assessed on a [illegible] of $12,[illegible] of which [illegible] the land [illegible] Harvey S. [illegible] by [illegible]

FRAMINGHAM—Henry W. Savage has sold the property known as the Beck estate, situated on Water street, consisting of a house of eight rooms and poultry house, together with 14,000 square feet of land. The purchaser is J. Mace.

READING—Henry W. Savage has sold for the Fred H. Parker estate the property corner of Hudson and Vine streets, consisting of a fourteen-room house with 20,000 feet of land. This was at one time a part of the estate of Jacob Manning who was one of the best known nursery men in New England.

Brookline.

Through the office of Frederick L. McGowan, Devonshire building, the two-apartment houses at No. 30 and No. 32 Winchester street, near Coolidge's Corner, has been sold to Henry G. Colby. The property [illegible] 10,[illegible] square feet of land, covered by two modern 3-story apartment houses of 6 suites. These buildings were only recently completed and are valued at $50,000. The houses were built by J. J. Johnston, Jr., who was the grantor.

West Roxbury.

Moses Williams and Ralph B. Williams, trustees, have conveyed to Alfred W. and Helen E. Zoebisch a lot on Dunster road, near Centre street containing 4,491 square feet. The purchasers were represented by R. S. Barrows of Jamaica Plain and the sellers by Joseph Balch of the Exchange building.

Robert T. Fowler has sold his new single-frame dwelling, in the process of construction, situated at No. 160 Park street. The purchaser is James H. Haigh of the firm of Jackson & Newton [illegible] The land is taxed at 25 cents per square foot, but as the house is not yet completed it has not been assessed.

Roslindale.

Through the Roslindale office of Robert T. Fowler the estate at No. 97 Orange street, consisting of a single frame dwelling and [illegible] feet of land, was sold. The seller was Leopold Kahler, who deeds the property to Anthony Brown. The land is taxed for $[illegible] but it is understood that the purchase price was much in excess of this figure.

Through the Roslindale office of Robert T. Fowler, the lot at No. 46 Aldrich street, belonging to William Devens, has been sold to Frank G. Roseman of Boston, who intends to erect a modern two-family dwelling for investment.

Through the Roslindale office of Robert T. Fowler, a lot at No. 49 Aldrich street, belonging to William Devens, has been sold to Mr. Frederick Nelson of Waltham. The lot contains 4,225 square feet and is assessed for $900, but it is understood that the purchase price was much in excess of that figure. This makes the seventh [illegible] street which has been sold through Mr. [illegible] Roslindale office within [illegible] Nicholas J. Murphy, Mr. F[illegible] speculative, has contracted [illegible] to erect two handsome [illegible] of the bungalow type.

Dorchester.

E. N. Foss has conveyed to Bond & Berry 10 lots on Rosemont road, running from Dorchester avenue to Florida street. Each contains about 3,200 feet. There will be erected 10 up-to-date houses. Rush & Co. were the brokers.

Frank A. Connors of No. 1 Beacon street reports the sale of the property at Nos. 269-283 Talbot avenue, comprising eight three-family houses and about 20,000 square feet of land, taxed for a total of $44,800, of which $35,000 is on the land, for Jacob Friedberg to Mrs. F. McDonough of No. 16 Intervale street, Roxbury, widow of [illegible] McDonough. The purchase price was $[illegible] This is the second sale of this property by Mr. Connors [illegible] New Year's.

Carrie A. Rom has sold to Sarah E. McQ[illegible] a frame house and 10,823 square feet of land at No. 30 Woodlawn avenue, corner of Delphi street, all taxed for $4,600, of which $1,100 is on the land.

John Atkins has sold to Henry A. and Percy A. Jackson the lot of land at No. 22 Maxwell street containing 5,884 feet of land. The purchasers are to erect a three-apartment house for investment. Kimball & Butterfield were the brokers.

Roxbury.

Frank A. Connors of No. 1 Beacon street has sold to Jacob Friedberg for Mrs. F. McDonough her one-family house and 3,600 square feet of land at No. 16 Intervale street, all taxed for $7,[illegible], of which $6,000 is on the building.

INCREASE NOTED IN JANUARY BUILDING

Reports from 73 Cities Make Good Record for the Past Month.

Building operations for January show an increase over the corresponding month a year ago. According to official reports from seventy-three cities to Construction News permits were taken out for the construction of 11,428 buildings involving a total estimated cost of $44,0[illegible] for the month just closed against 10,737 buildings, involving a total aggregate cost of $42,932,818, for the same month a year ago, an increase of 691 buildings and $1,104,275, or 3 per cent.

This is a far better showing than most people had anticipated, as they were afraid that there might be a falling off. Everything from every direction, however, indicates that building will continue upon the same active basis that has characterized operations throughout the country for the past decade.

Of the seventy-three cities included in the foregoing there were gains in thirty eight, while in thirty-four there was a loss. New York leads with a big increase, forty-three per cent., while in Chicago there was a decrease of forty-eight per cent., thus completely reversing the [illegible] upon Chicago for the past [illegible] record. [illegible] having [illegible] for [illegible] year, while in New York there was conspicuous decrease. There were some remarkable increases conspicuous because of the fact that in some of the cities building has been going ahead continuously upon an enormous scale and one would think that it would be but natural that there should be intervals of quiet. There were increases in Philadelphia of 22 per cent., [illegible] Washington 23, Detroit 74, New Haven 57, Portland 60, Newark [illegible] Fort Worth 10, St. Paul [illegible] Worcester 21, Birmingham 43, Omaha 12, [illegible] Sacramento [illegible] Milwaukee 4[illegible] [illegible] Springfield [illegible] South Bend 4[illegible]

As will be seen, the interior cities and New England are prospering. The same conclusion must be reached relative to the leading cities of the South, while Southern California is making a wonderful record in point of building construction and the same thing must be said of Portland, Oregon, where the increase is 60 per cent.

AT BUZZARDS BAY.

C. E. Stephenson Buys Large Tract for Investment.

C. F. Stephenson, real estate broker, with offices at No. 1 Beacon street, has purchased 150 acres (5,602,800 square feet) of land at Buzzards Bay. It has a frontage of 3,906 feet, 610 feet frontage on Flax Pond and about 1,500 feet frontage on Miles Pond. It is expected that this property will be developed this spring for high-class Summer homes.

ACCEPT REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Directors of Boston Real Estate Exchange Approve Revere Beach Road Project.

NO SUBSTANTIAL OBJECTION

All Are in Favor of Proposed Standarization and Electrification of This Road.

THE directors of the Boston Real Estate Exchange at a [illegible] meeting last week received the report of a committee of its members consisting of J. Sumner Draper, Abel H. Proctor and Leslie C. Weed, appointed to consider the proposed standardization and electrification of the Revere Beach railroad. The report of the committee was accepted and a vote of the directors was passed approving the project [illegible]

[illegible]

"To the directors of the [illegible] Real Estate [illegible]

[illegible] appointed to consider and report [illegible] Bill No. 4[illegible] accompanying [illegible] of the New York, New Haven & Hartford [illegible] company and the Boston & Maine [illegible] company, for authority [illegible] of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad Company, has examined the [illegible] in [illegible]

[illegible]

The purpose of the bill is commendable and it is believed by the committee that if enacted into law and the construction provided for is carried out with electrical equipment as contemplated, that the community will receive very substantial benefit from the operation of this addition to its transit facilities.

A Wise Policy.

It is the opinion of the committee that it will be wise policy to allow [illegible] railroad [illegible] the property of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad Company, and of the Boston & Northern Railroad Company by the other railroads, and the winding up of the corporate existence of these two smaller companies and the provisions of the act seem to amply protect the interests of the stockholders of the smaller companies.

Proper provision is made for [illegible] payment of [illegible] for property [illegible]

[illegible] Boston, and [illegible] route, due [illegible] guarding against [illegible] with proper approaches of other railroad systems to the water front of East Boston, the provision for the submission to the said commissions of all matters pertaining to the construction of the new work and the provision that all rates for [illegible] shall be submitted and approved by the Railroad Commission seem to give reasonable protection to the [illegible] interests in these regards.

Some Changes Necessary.

Attention is called to a few [illegible] should be altered.

In section 5, lines 13 and section 7, lines 8 and 9, are provisions that no compensation or damages shall be paid in respect to the use of existing public ways. It should be made clear that this applies only to the right to use them during the period of construction.

In the same section, in lines 14-17, there is a limitation that petitions of owners seeking damages must be filed within one year from the time of taking. It is a question whether this limitation [illegible] hardship [illegible] so that it might be proper [illegible] two or three years.

Section 12 which provides that the public commission in approving location shall give attention to future use of Commonwealth docks and wharves, should also contain provision that the use shall not interfere with proper approaches to any wharves and docks in East Boston.

Other provisions regarding the use of the East Boston tunnel and the relations with other public service corporations are probably sufficiently covered so far as public interest is concerned.

Your committee therefore advises that the directors of the exchange should express general approval of the project and so notify the legislative committee having the matter in charge.

Respectfully submitted,
(Signed)

J. SUMNER DRAPER.
LESLIE C. WEAD.
ABEL H. PROCTOR.

YOU CAN OWN A

Florida Farm Home

LIKE THIS

And Have a Cash Income Besides

If you are working on a salary with no prospect of ever becoming independent, if you are not able to give your family the luxury and comfort they would like, and want to improve your condition, we can show you some things that will open the way for your advancement. The man who wants a home of his own is turning his thoughts to the farm. To this man Florida offers opportunities that are unheard of in other farming sections, and no part of Florida offers the same advantages to the man with a little money and a disposition to work as does our land at Brooksville in Hernando County.

TWO AND THREE CROPS RAISED EACH YEAR.

Florida is a land where a man of average intelligence, with from ten to twenty acres (and the soil and climate of Hernando County to help him), can easily make himself independent. Such are the men who have already made good in Florida," and they have not toiled like slaves for it, either.

Dark, rich, top soil and [illegible] subsoil underlaid with clay close to the surface, the ideal soil and climate for oranges, pecans and garden truck, produces the brightest and best oranges and grapefruit shipped out of Florida, $400 to $1,000 worth per acre.

MANY MEN MAKE $1,000 NET ANNUAL PROFIT PER ACRE.

Produces $525 worth of cabbage per acre, $500 strawberries, $872 celery, $051 lettuce, $400 onions, $400 cucumbers, $400 tomatoes, $380 eggplant, $400 radishes, $250 potatoes and everything northern markets demand in like proportion, as well as corn, hay, sugar cane and all staple crops. The soil, the equable climate, and the abundant water make all [illegible]. The thermometer seldom goes above 90 [illegible] in the daytime and [illegible], the government [illegible] for forty-five years show an average [illegible] of 78 degrees. Florida, being practically surrounded by sea and gulf, is swept by sea breezes that make the Summer relatively cool and the Winter uniformly warm. Under these conditions the outdoor crops of Florida are as productive and as choice as the costly hothouse products of the North—yet without the glass house and without the artificial heat.

Hence we say that Nature has done more for man in Florida than in any other State. Every day in the year is a day of planting, cultivating, or harvesting, or all together—and farming is thus forever placed beyond the fickleness of the weather and made the one occupation that can absolutely be depended upon.

You are invited to come to an established and intelligent community of homes and schools. The pioneering was done in Hernando County long ago.

YOU CAN BUY ONE OF THESE FARMS ON MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

Brooksville, the county seat of Hernando County, is situated on the only range of hills in all Southern Florida, its altitude being 328 feet above sea level. It is always fanned by cool breezes from gulf or ocean, and the oppressiveness of the lower altitudes is never experienced. Its high hills insure an absence of mosquitoes, malaria and other disadvantages of the flat, low-lying land of other sections. It is a thriving, busy and thoroughly modern city of about fifteen hundred inhabitants. It is equipped with electric lights, an ice plant, numerous factories, the largest brick plant in the State, six churches, excellent schools and many enterprising stores. Two railroads enter the town. The telephone service covers the entire county and connects with the long distance service.

The people are cultured, wide-awake, progressive, extremely hospitable and anxious to welcome the energetic Northerner who comes to develop their county.

OUR FREE BOOK

explains everything regarding Florida. It goes into detail as to location of our land, the climate, the soil, the different cities near our property, the various kinds of fruits and vegetables that are now being grown there and sold for high prices. It also explains the length of time required for the proper cultivation of the various fruits and the number of crops harvested yearly.

The book also contains tables compiled by the Government of the United States, showing the average production per acre in dollars and cents. To the man in the North with a worked-out farm these figures will seem astounding, but they are taken from the Government reports and are therefore reliable.

We do not ask you to take our word. Our book makes plain statements and you can easily verify them.

Send for the book at once. Better still, come and talk it over with us. We are a New England company, made up of highly responsible New England men, and we selected this land especially to please New England people.

BUY A FARM IN COLORADO

EVERYONE BEGINNING TO SEE THE ADVANTAGES OF IRRIGATION

The Opportunities for a Poor Man in Colorado Are Greater Than in Any Other State.

If a poor man buys poor land and pays for it, he is still poor.
If a poor man buys good land, no matter what the price, on terms that he can meet from SURE CROPS, when he gets it paid for he is no longer poor.

This is what a man can do on 20 acres of our land:

5 ACRES CELERY, $600 PER ACRE	$3,000.00
5 ACRES ONIONS, $400 PER ACRE	2,000.00
5 ACRES CANTALOUPES, $200 PER ACRE	1,000.00
5 ACRES FRUIT (SMALL) $400 PER ACRE	2,000.00

Isn't This Worth Looking Into?

Stop working for a small salary.
Don't waste your time in the city, where your work is drudgery and there is no chance of getting ahead.
All we ask is that you look into our proposition and see the great opportunities we are offering.

INVESTING FOR PROFIT is worth $10 a copy to any man who intends to invest any money, however small, who has invested money unprofitably, or who can save $5 or more per month, but who hasn't learned the art of investing for profit. It demonstrates the real earning power of money, the knowledge financiers and bankers hide from the masses. It reveals the enormous profits bankers make and shows how to make the same profits. It explains how stupendous fortunes are made and why they are made, how $1,000 grows to $22,000. To introduce my magazine write me now and I'll send it six months free. H. L. BARBER, 408-70 Jackson blvd., Chicago.

PIANO WAREROOMS,
395 BOYLSTON ST.

WE are closing out an immense stock of used grand and upright pianos (by Henry F. Miller, Steinway, Chickering, Knabe, Hazelton and other makes) at greatly reduced prices. Easy terms, $10 down and $5 per month. We employ no canvassers. We have no special prices, but we treat the humblest buyer just as liberally as we do the most exacting expert. This is our idea of fair, square business. Established 1863, our reliability is known everywhere. Investigate for yourself. You will find our economic system of selling pianos saves all unnecessary middle expenses. HENRY F. MILLER & SONS PIANO CO.

Good Old BLUE GRASS KY. WHISKEY

We sold Blue Grass Kentucky Whiskey 50 years ago—long before the tricks of adulterating whiskey caused the government to pass a pure food law, and long before many of the present-day brands were heard of. Blue Grass Whiskey has always been absolutely pure straight, and it is many years old. Real men who know real whiskey say Blue Grass is strictly O. K.

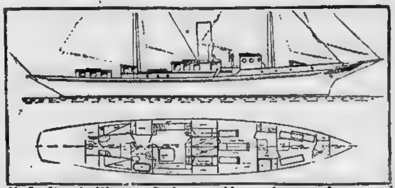
YACHTS AND POWER BOATS



N. L. Skene's Western Cruiser would cost between $10,000 and $12,000.

The Eastern Yacht Club at a meeting last week planned the big racing events of the Summer in a general way, and inducements enough will be offered to bring around the Cape a big fleet from the New York Yacht Club.

The reports of the treasurer and the house and regatta committees showed the club to be in a prosperous condition. There are 686 members who own 315 yachts, as follows: Fifty schooners, 815 yachts, 64 sloops and yawls, 46 steam yachts, 54 launches and 101 sailboats under 30 feet waterline.

F. Lewis Clark was re-elected commodore, and the other officers are: Robert T. Paine, 2d, vice-commodore; Herbert M. Sears, rear-commodore; Henry Taggard, secretary; Patrick T. Jackson, treasurer; George A. Goddard and Frank B. McQuesten, counsel at large; William L. Carlton, Louis M. Clark, Henry A. Morss, Stephen W. Sleeper, William B. Stearns, regatta committee; Arthur Adams, Charles P. Curtis, Russell G. Fessenden, Augustus Hemenway, Jr., committee on admissions; Edward M. Beals, William N. Goodnow, Parkman Dexter, William B. Revere and Daniel K. Snow, house committee.

The season of 1910 was one of the best in the history of the club, for not only were the Spaniards defeated in the international match, but the club had a very successful cruise along the Maine coast, which ended with a race from Bar Harbor to Marblehead for the Norman trophy. This trophy and another for cups will be contested again this season after the finish of the cruise at Bar Harbor.

Commodore Clark has offered a cup for a race around Cape Cod from New London to Marblehead that it is hoped will bring a number of New York yachts to Eastern waters for the club's annual regatta at Marblehead and the annual cruise.

Two very interesting gifts were made to the club. These were a fine collection of old prints and drawings formerly owned by Henry H. Buck and given by his estate and the other was a large punch bowl from Mrs. Frederic O. North, widow of Frederic O. North, a member of the club, who died last year.

The punch bowl was originally presented to Frederic O. North by the members of the old knockabout class of Marblehead several years ago, in which Mr. North raced several yachts very successfully.

The members of the Motor Boat Club of America have determined to make the race to Bermuda this year a successful one, and in addition to the challenge cup and cash prize to the winner there will be a prize for the second boat offered by Commodore H. H. Melville and a third prize offered by the club. The day of the start is to be made a gala one. Races are to be arranged over courses on Gravesend Bay, some of which will include Sandy Hook, and everything will be done to attract racing craft to the lower bay. Prizes will be offered for all classes that fill. The lower bay motor boat men have long wanted opportunities to race their boats.

Norman L. Skene, one of the most prominent naval architects of the city, has prepared an interesting design for a power cruiser for a Pacific coast yachtsman. The cost of the Skene boat is between $10,000 and $12,000.

• • •

The following sales have been made through the yacht agency of John G. Alden. Horatio Gilbert of Milton has sold to Charles E. Cobb of Boston the thirty-two-foot auxiliary sloop Emily Jane. She is a particularly handsome boat and is 35 feet overall, 25 feet lower water line, 15 feet beam, 6 feet 6 inches draught, and has a twelve-horsepower Standard engine. The boat's rig will be changed to a yawl from plans drawn by Mr. Alden.

• • •

The same agency has sold the eighteen-foot [illegible] knockabout Scrapper, owned by W. H. Sherman, Bar Harbor, Me., to Mrs. Charles H. Williams of Milton, who will use the boat at Marblehead next Summer.

• • •

L. W. Litch of Lynn, Mass., has sold the 51-foot l. w. l. schooner Low Belle to Stanley Clarke of Brookline. Extensive alterations are being made on the boat at Fenton's yard, East Gloucester, Mass.

• • •

William Lee Howard, Jr., who for a number of years has been associated with B. B. Crowninshield, the naval architect and yacht broker, leaves the firm on March 1 to take up the insurance business. Mr. Howard is one of the most popular yacht brokers in the city.

• • •

The Richard T. Green Company of Chelsea has been awarded the contract to build the Fama schooner from Crowninshield's designs. The schooner will be 48 feet, and will be owned by Tucker Daland of Brookline. It is much the same design as Mr. Crowninshield's own schooner yacht Fame.

KENNEL NOTES

From reports received from the New York show, the local dogs were well up in the winnings. The Demon got an upset, however, getting a fourth for his owner, Franz J. Heilborn.

The Jolly Widow, a Boston terrier, owned by D. B. Brayton of Fall River, was shown by Mrs. F. P. Kendall of Lexington and got a number of "blues." It was a good selling show and J. C. Sullivan, Thomas Kelley, W. H. Hayes and other local fanciers got good prices for pups.

• • •

Dr. Wallace Snow, vice-president of the Boston Terrier Club, will judge at the Rochester, N. Y., show.

• • •

The fox terrier Champion Rip Van Winkle, owned by Mrs. William S. Edwards of Bangor, Me., is going to the Pacific Coast, Walter Franks of Los Angeles being the purchaser.

• • •

The new French bulldog imported recently by Mrs. Arnold Lawson of Winchester made a good impression at New York and was looked over pretty carefully by the experts.

• • •

A Boston terrier, Sudbury Nemo, was sold for $1,000 cash. Frank McClann was the owner of the dog.

• • •

Miss Mary Winthrop of New York, and well known in society here, refused at the New York show $2,500 for one of her French bulldogs. The Middlesex pack of female dogs won first for English foxhounds and the Middlesex pack of dogs took the reserve. A. Henry Higginson of Lincoln was the master of foxhounds, and the whole performance was something of a spectacle as the whip person and masters of the hounds wore their gaudy uniforms. Among the American foxhounds the Grafton Hunt's ring neck pack was first and their spotted pack took second. Harry Smith of Worcester is the master of foxhounds.

POULTRY NOTES

The statistics of the United States Department of Agriculture give a total value of poultry products for the year 1909 exceeding $600,000,000 [illegible] value, which shows a decidedly rapid increase in production, but the increase in consumptive demand has been still more rapid, as is shown by the steady advance in prices. Twenty years ago here in New England, eggs sold for about fourteen cents a dozen (the lowest) up to about thirty cents a dozen (the highest), with an average of about twenty-three or twenty-four cents a dozen for the year; they have steadily advanced until they are now bringing about twenty-two cents a dozen (the lowest), up to about fifty-five cents a dozen (the highest), with an average for the year of about thirty-five cents a dozen. There has been a similar advance in prices of various kinds of poultry meat. Twenty years ago ten cents a pound was about what we expected to receive for our old fowls, when selling them alive at the door, this year the price has ranged about sixteen to eighteen cents a pound.

The conditions are similar with all kinds of poultry meat and where the quality is extra good the prices are more than extra good. That point of "quality" is of decided importance—the most frequent complaint we hear is of an insufficient supply of poultry meat and eggs of the best quality.

Very little is known about eggs. Everybody knows that fresh-laid eggs are far superior to stale eggs, and in consequence great prices are paid in time of scarcity for eggs which approve themselves as fresh laid. Both the United States and State governments are studying problems connected with eggs, trying to learn what conditions will best promote the keeping and transporting of eggs in as good condition as possible. That an egg may be stale when laid seems almost incredible, but it is known to be a fact. A fresh laid egg which had barely time to be [illegible] after being excluded by the hen, has been known to be positively "stale" and in a condition of semi decay. The probable reason was that the hen laying the egg had carried it in the oviduct for several days, and the high temperature had caused it to get quite a start toward rottenness.

HARD TO KEEP TEACHERS.

Poor Pay One of the Difficulties at Middleboro.

MIDDLEBORO, Feb. 18.—The school committee has asked for $33,360 for the schools the coming year, $800 less than last year. Part of the teachers salaries in the High School is paid by the Pierce trustees, which helps the schools along in financial matters.

From the questions asked by members of the appropriation committee of Superintendent of Schools C. H. Bates, it was learned that it was difficult to keep a teacher in the suburban schools of the town owing to the hard work and small pay. It developed that the suburban teachers do not get as much for teaching as the town teacher, where there is only one grade, while there are nine grades in the country schools.

Dinner to Degree Staff.

The annual dinner of the degree staff of Essex Court, M. C. O. F., will be held at Foresters' Hall, Salem, this afternoon. Edward H. Shea will be toastmaster.

SPIRITUALIST HEAD EXPLAINS DOCTRINE

Dr. George B. Warne, in Boston, Says Thousands Won't Admit Their Belief.

THOUSANDS of people in this country believe that communication may be held with persons who have died and are now existing in a spiritual sphere, according to Dr. George B. Warne of Chicago, who is national president of the Spiritualist Association and who came to Boston yesterday. According to him there is a great army of Americans who are Spiritualists, although they do not declare themselves such.

"Perhaps," he said, "they are associated with other churches and their belief in spiritualism is unsuspected. But thousands of the most intellectual people secretly accept it as the only reliable proposition that actually meets the need of more information about the life hereafter.

He came to Boston because he is giving a series of lectures in New England. The headquarters of his organization is in Washington and there are about 200,000 members of this and affiliated bodies. But those figures, he thinks, are but a fraction of the people who believe that the dead come back.

War Against Fraud.

Dr. Warne is scientific. He is a graduate of Iowa University and a professor of the Chicago Medical School. He came East, he states, to increase interest in the spiritualistic movement and to explain the work of his association. He is trying to help the State organization in weeding out frauds who use spiritualism to prey upon the credulous. As he is recognized as one of the leading students of occult phenomena, there is great public interest in his view of the possibility of the departed ones making themselves manifest in the manner termed "materialization." He is regarded as an exponent of the ideas on that question of the inner circle of Spiritualism.

"There is no doubt," said Dr. Warne, "but that materialization is being accomplished. Yet all that is seen in materializing meetings is not genuine. Impostors may creep into the best conducted seances.

Unconscious Frauds.

"A noted medium told me that if more than three materializations developed at one sitting the fourth, fifth and sixth might generally be ascribed to fraud. Frequently an entranced person will perpetrate fraud and be unconscious of it himself. There are charlatans who have a certain subtle ability who supplement good work with spurious manifestations and will impose upon friends who employ them.

"There are all kinds of spirits, just as there are good and bad people in the world. A medium may wish to be controlled only by high and honorable spirits, and may accomplish good through him, but may gradually yield to a selfish desire to appear great in the eyes of the world and surrender to the control of mischievous or developed spirits who are playfully malignant. For a medium to lay himself open to control by spirits in general is frequently to invite possession by the evil and vicious. The result is bad for the medium. He should be as careful of his company from the spirit side as he is of his company in the life of this one.

Develop Independent Thinking.

"Manifestations at seances are beneficial because they rousing earth people of spiritual existence. But mediums should not carry conviction and teach and sit people for higher work and closer communion with the spirit world. Without this spiritual communion religion is a paper parrot, pompiacs and inane. Manifestations develop independent thinking and spiritual development. Spiritualism more nearly meets the requirements of human requirements in religion than any other faith.

"In regard to other religious faiths we believe that all of them serve a purpose and do much good.

Too Many Material Questions.

"Messages from the dead are not necessarily infallible. They should be submitted to the test of reason and conscience just as an opinion given by a friend in life would be. Unfortunately investigators ask many material and worthless questions than they should. At a profound seance not long since held one question put to a medium was, 'Is my cow dead?' Whether if so is the bird well cared for? God permits inanities to be put into mankind like life exists beyond the grave.

"We believe in the doctrine of spirit return. We believe in infinite intelligence and in moral responsibility. We believe we make happiness as we observe nature's psychic laws. The doctrine of spirit revelation is never closed here or hereafter. Resurrection is the birth out of the physical into the spiritual."

MAY JOIN BOSTON.

Hyde Park to Vote Friday on Annexation.

One of the questions which will engross the attention of the citizens of Hyde Park when they vote at the polls Friday will be held in Waverley Hall, Hyde Park, Friday, is an act presented to the Legislature by Fred A. Raymond and others relative to the annexation of the whole of the town of Hyde Park to the city of Boston.

The vote on the proposition will be by a spirated ballot, "Yes" or "No," in answer to the following question:

"Shall the selectmen prepare, present and cause to be presented to the legislature of this state in behalf of and in the name of the town of Hyde Park a petition for annexation of the town of Hyde Park to the city of Boston, as described in and under the provisions of an act passed by the Senate of the present legislature entitled [illegible]?"

The polls will open at 4 o'clock and will be closed at 9.

HEAR LECTURE ON MILK.

Professor Forristall Talks to Connecticut Valley Farmers.

NORTHAMPTON, Feb. 18.—The branch of the Connecticut Valley Breeders' Association, which is giving attention to breeding Guernsey cows, held a meeting in this here recently and Prof. E. H. Forristall of the agricultural college delivered an address on that bowling breed, telling of their beauty and nobleness. He also traveled extensively with Canada and said if milk was shipped into New England from that foundation, farmers in this region would produce cream and then have the skim milk so badly needed on their farms.

Lamar Denies Nephew Sale.

MACON, Ga., Feb. 18.—The statement that H. J. Lamar Washington was sold by his father, W. H. Washington, to his uncle, the late H. J. Lamar, which has been published in connection with news of his suit the younger Washington is now prosecuting to secure a share of his uncle's estate, is denied by both father and son. The story denied was that the late H. J. Lamar paid W. H. Washington $10,000 for the privilege of adopting his son.

WILLIAM P. PETERS AND CHARLES F. HILL OF FLAT IRON CLUB

WM. P. PETERS PRESIDENT

CHAS. F. HILL — SECRETAR

STATESMEN GUESTS OF FLATIRON CLUB

Lawrence Newspaper Men Provide Rare Program for Governor.

LAWRENCE, Feb. 18.—His Excellency Governor Foss, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, President of the Senate Allan T. Treadway, Speaker Walker, Attorney General Pearson, together with Senators Nason and White, are to be guests of the Flatiron Club, at the twenty-seventh annual banquet of that organization Saturday night, at the Franklin House, this city.

The Flatiron Club is the outgrowth of the Lawrence Press Club, founded twenty-seven years ago, and of which the late Major George S. Merrill, Insurance Commissioner of Massachusetts, was the first president.

Newspaper men largely dominate its membership, but among the hundred or more who will sit around the festive board, will be Judge Charles A. De Courcey, and prominent business men. Ex Speaker Hon. John N. Cole of Andover is chairman of the board of directors, while Hon. D. E. Hadley, the Senator from this city, is chairman of the banquet committee.

Notable Guests.

The officers are as follows: President, William P. Peters, Eagle; vice-presidents, Hon. John N. Cole, Townsman; John F. Connor, Register; Thomas D. Mann, Tribune; secretary, Charles F. Hill, Telegram; treasurer, Arthur A. Bailey, Journal; directors, Hiram D. Dick, Andover and Post; Walter J. Reardon, Gazette; James A. Donovan, Tribune; James T. Davidson (Ann-American), banquet committee, Hon. D. E. Hadley, chairman; Charles F. Hill, W. E. Rockforth, John J. Connor, William P. Peters; toastmaster, Walter E. Rockforth, Critic.

Tuesday will mark the tenth occasion that Editor Rockforth, publisher of the Critic, has officiated as toastmaster.

It is considered a rare treat to be invited to be the guest of this club. Some of the finest after-dinner speakers in New England, like Eugene Foss, Governor Bates and Guild, Judges Hell and Sherman have graced this function.

Some "Stunts" on Program.

When it comes to unexpected "stunts," the Gridironers of Washington shave nothing on the local aggregation, for just what is in store for the distinguished visitors Saturday night may be better imagined than described.

The committee comprises Hon. John T. Cahill, Mayor; Hon. James F. Connell, Hon. John F. Kane, Hon. Cornelius F. Lynch, Hon. Caleb Saunders, Hon. John W. Crawford.

The Flatiron Club's (Chinese) quartet will make their first and probably their last appearance in America.

CARNEGIE INCREASES GIFT.

Springfield Library Will Receive an Additional $25,000.

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 18.—Andrew Carnegie has notified President Nathan D. Bill of the Library Association that he will increase his $175,000 gift to the new City Library to $200,000. The building and furniture will cost $450,000. Mr. Carnegie originally gave $175,000, amounted to $125,000 and $50,000 more was needed, when word was received from the Pittsburg philanthropist that he would contribute half that amount. The library directors will get the Carnegie money now they have raised the $25,000 yet unpledged. The library is to open its doors free of debt.

ADMIRAL'S FUNERAL.

Simple Funeral for for Arthur L. Nazro at Jamaica Plain.

Extreme simplicity marked the funeral of Rear-Admiral Arthur P. Nazro, United States navy, retired, at his home, No. 1 Storey place, Jamaica Plain. There was no naval deputation and no honorary pall bearers. At the Jamaica Plain Congregational Unitarian Church, the Rev. Charles F. Dole said prayers and gave a brief eulogy. After which the body was taken to Forest Hills Crematory for cremation.

Deeds Register to Lecture.

To-morrow evening, at Young's Hotel, Register of Deeds W. T. A. Fitzgerald will speak to the members of the Charitable Irish Society on "Ancient and Modern Methods of Acquiring Real Estate and Useful Hints for Safeguarding Titles," with Blodgett on a Modern Registry of Deeds." Before the lecture Henry S. McDevitt and George L. McDevitt will render vocal selections, accompanied on the piano by Lawrence B. O'Connor.

NOW IS THE TIME TO FIGHT MOTHS

L. J. Doogue of Public Grounds Department Shows How to Wipe Out Pests.

MAXIMS THAT MEAN DEATH TO GYPSY AND BROWNTAILS

Now is the time to fight the gypsy and browntail moths.

Hard work now means freedom from these pests later on.

Burn the browntail and put creosote on the gypsy nests.

Every property owner should start the work at once.—By Luke J. Doogue, public grounds department head.

EVEN with snow on the ground and the spring officially still more than a month away, visions of the gypsy and browntail moths and other insect pests pass before the eyes of those interested in conserving the trees and shrubbery of Boston. They are anxious that every person should realize that now is the best time of the year to destroy the insects while they are in an embryo stage.

The following maxims are promulgated by Luke J. Doogue, whose work in the Public Grounds Department has made him familiar with the habits of these pests and the best methods to get rid of them:

"Now is the Time!"

Now is the time to fight the gypsy and browntail moths.

Hard work now means freedom from the pests later.

How to do the work effectively: Burn the browntails and put creosote on the gypsy nests.

Every property owner should start the work at once.

Mr. Doogue through the AMERICAN calls attention to the moth danger and the way to avert it further as follows:

"The time to get rid of the moth pests is now, but unfortunately very few seem to realize this fact, and as a result they are subjected to the tortures of caterpillar infestation that makes their lives miserable and stirps every leaf and bud from our shade trees. A new visitation of gypsy and browntail moths means hundreds of thousands of crawling caterpillars. The poisonous hairs of the browntail add to the misery and this latter is a particularly hardship for the children.

Destroy the Moths.

"This is no exaggeration, but a mild statement of what happens on a place where no attempt had been made to control the moths at the proper time. Therefore, destroy the pests now.

"There are two ways of getting rid of the pests. Next destruction work in the Winter and spraying with arsenate of lead in the Spring. A combination of the two produces the best results, and where one method is to be followed, the destruction work is the better.

"Destruction work thoroughly done, as the word suggests, means the destruction of the moth nest and consequently all caterpillars later. Spraying means that the caterpillars are to be covered by a solution of arsenate which prevents the young caterpillars from eating, and they die. This trouble with the spraying is that the browntails are already in the caterpillar state when the leaves put out, while the gypsy is in the egg state. The result is, so that you must either make a double spraying or get results only from the first caterpillar and one for the gypsy, or destroy the nests of both of these pests. Spraying can be done with a solution of arsenate while preventa the young caterpillars from eating, and they die. This trouble with the spraying is that the browntails are already in the caterpillar state when the leaves put out, while the gypsy is in the egg state. The result is, so that you must either make a double spraying or get results only from the first caterpillar and one for the gypsy, or destroy the nests of both of these pests.

Browntail Nests Easily Found.

"The browntail nests are more easily found than the gypsy. The former are usually on the ends of branches of trees and bushes and should be cut off and burned. The gypsy nests are found on stones, pieces of boards, in crevices under fences, under the sills of a house, in cellar ways and, in fact, anything large enough to hold the egg mass. A little creosote applied to the nest will kill them.

"When clipping off browntail nests one person should stand on the ground to pick up the nests as they fall while another does the clipping above. This is necessary for this reason. Each nest contains from 150 to 300 caterpillars. The caterpillars all ready to begin eating. Should three or four of these nests be overlooked a good sized infestation is assured."

$2,500,000 BACK BAY HOTEL.

New Structure to Be One of the Finest in Country.

One of the largest, finest and best hotels in the country will be erected at Newbury and Arlington streets, Back Bay, at a cost of $2,500,000. Coffin & Taber, real estate firm of No. 24 Milk street, are promoters of the new hotel and according to them negotiations for the purchase of 20,000 square feet of land owned by the Young Men's Christian Association have assumed definite shape.

The new building, which is designed to contain 250 rooms and to be fitted out in the most sumptuous style, is planned to be 100 feet high.

Although the plans of the promoters have not yet advanced to the extent that the proposition has been submitted to an architect, the outlined scheme calls for a building will provide for a stately structure of the Italian Renaissance type with the building in its environments.

This, the fourth of the new hotels which are soon to be or reality in Boston, marks the total investment in modern hotels for the benefit of the transient and wealthy class of guests to the sum of $10,000,000.

GOING TO SEE REDMOND.

John C. Donahue of Worcester Will Pay Visit to Ireland.

WORCESTER, Feb. 18.—John C. Donahue of No. 49 Foley street will start for Ireland within a few days to visit his brothers, Hugh and Timothy, whom he has not seen for thirty years. One lives on the family homestead at Killarney, County Kerry, Ireland, and the other is a prominent merchant of Dublin.

Mr. Donahue left Ireland when nineteen and passed the last thirty years in the employ of the Nails, Percy and Decker Company and the Stewart Boiler Works. He is a friend of John Redmond and is going to England to attend Parliament. He can find time for a trip to London during his stay abroad.

FRICTION IN SALEM.

Alderman Howard Prefers Charges Against City Marshal.

SALEM, Feb. 18.—Friction between the Mayor and aldermen over police appointments came to a climax when Alderman Howard preferred charges against City Marshal Harris, requesting an early hearing before the board at a special meeting.

Instrument for dropping Mosquito pic- cureine in eyes of infants, said to be given free by the State Health Board.

Mr Monroe makes:

Change the color of the walls in many rooms.

Do not allow children to pore over their books.

Give pupils more oral instruction.

Be careful about children attending moving picture shows.

See that proper devices for the eyes are used in factories.

Build up the physical condition of children when it is needed

Heed the slogan going "Preserve Your Eyesight!"

Reduce Blindness a Half.

"In the next generation forty to fifty per cent of the blindness in this State will be prevented," said Mr. Monroe.

"But these victories over blindness will not come about through one source. We must every industrial concern, every school board, every local board of health, every social organization to lend a hand. The matter should be interesting to every woman's club in the State. They should study conditions and appoint committees from their own organizations.

"The fight to save eyes, or, as it is called, ophthalmia neonatorum, is making good progress. The law is doing good service. The district inspector is rapidly at work and he is in direct communication with the State Board of Health.

"Parents should become familiar with what is essential at the birth of their children. They do not know what may happen to the eyes of that child. It is best to be on the safe side, so the State Board of Health furnishes, free of cost to physicians registered under the laws of this commonwealth, such prophylactic remedies as it may deem best for the prevention of ophthalmia. This is an inflammation of the eyes of the new born which is usually due to infection by a specific organism.

Free Cure Offered.

"Now if this is not properly cared for, blindness is a very common result.

"It is well to note that blindness rarely occurs if the disease is properly treated from the beginning.

"We ask that 1 per cent solution of silver nitrate be dropped into the eye of every new born babe.

"If this is not absolutely required by other conditions it will do no harm, and it is best to be on the safe side.

"Had this been done, many children who are blind would see.

"We urge the urgency in this matter. It is such a simple thing to do and yet it means so much to the welfare of every child.

"We are getting passed such legislative acts which will do much to prevent blindness. But we want more than this. We want the people to help us in this work.

"There is the bad light in schools This is very important to the growing child Incidents are numerous. Pore over books and not getting the light from the proper direction should be investigated by every teacher and reported to the school committee.

Urges Oral Instruction.

"It is not necessary to have children poring over books as they do in some schools The use of oral instruction should be dwelt more upon in elementary instruction.

"The constant poring over books is not education in the right sense of the term. Yet some teachers think that they are doing good work if they see their pupils bending low over their books for hours at time. Teach more manual work. Teach orally and save the vision of the children.

"In the new school rooms attention should be paid to the color of the walls. Talk is now being investigated. Probably a light shade of green would be better than the bright shades sometimes noticed in some school rooms.

Picture Show Injuries.

"How artificial light has to do with injury of the eyesight is worth considering and I believe some device will be found to offset the injury that must come through the use of the modern light ing systems.

"Something has been said of the effect of moving pictures shows on the eyesight of young people and those who take unusual delight in attending them. The pleasure of witnessing them makes the danger more insidious than we may at first suppose.

"The constant strain on the eyes cannot be beneficial and must ultimately end in some difficulty.

"Parents should have their children's eyes frequently examined A weakened physical condition is apt to show its effect on the eyes as it does on the teeth and other parts of the body.

"There I notice that industrial conditions have not been neglected. Safety devices should be used, where danger to the eyes sight is imminent.

Preventative Measures.

"Influence should be brought to bear on all corporations in industries dangerous to the eyes. We are doing much along these lines. Many corporations are work ing with us and are protecting their help with all sort of devices

"Each there are certain diseases which must be watched and carefully isolated All we ask is that the public generally will make an effort to act in touch with information which will make possible a stronger and better human race.

"If a person is blind we want to make it evident that he is not needlessly blind. We desire to use all the preventive remedies known to science.

The organ to-day is 'Preserve your eyesight.'"

SAVING CHILDREN FROM BLINDNESS

P. Monroe Tells of the Work.

From 40 to 50 per cent of the cases of blindness in this State could have been prevented had proper precautions been taken when the victims were babies, according to James P. Monroe, president of the Massachusetts Committee for the Blind, who has given the problem a great deal of study.

The dropping of a little of a one per cent solution of silver nitrate in the infants' eyes within a few days after birth and what are known as the 'nine-days' dip' may be explained by this man.

"Hippocrates of old has given much information about it and in some respects we have not yet outgrown the information he has furnished.

"Through the use of modern knowledge mortality has decreased between 90 to 75 per cent, and blindness 50 per cent. If the disease does not develop within ten days after infection half of the patients recover.

"It is fortunate to note where this baneful is found. Here we have made great strides. Using silver nitrate, a drop in each earth born, in excrements of horses, and the consequent danger is that connected with our celebrations on the fourth of July.

"The matter has been taken up carefully by the American Medical Association and the Fourth of July will be a celebration to the blank cartridge and rusty nail.

"It is known to exist around stables where flies breed. There is also the stinging of the muscles and later on convulsions come. The suffering begins with the master muscles. This extends to the back, to the abdomen, and the back is so frequently bent back like a bent bow in the treatment of tetanus. The jaws are tightly and the patient is often asphyxiated, being unable to breathe, affecting the heart.

"Tetanus is the most dreaded of the situation that different cases present.

"It is also known in the light of the uses of the laboratory or even of animal experimentation.

"Those who are opposed to this will be glad to know that this also exists, and as a result of this scientific hereafter tetanus will be a thing of the past. This consists of two parts of something like the serum treatment. It is not at all destructive to the real corpuscles. This serum protects itself through the motor nerves and passes up to the brain, and only through the nerves.

"We are now treating disease with an antitetanic serum, which has shown wonderful results. Tetanus is a thing of the past.

"This serum differs from the antitoxin, which is used in diphtheria, in that it can be used after that disease has well developed. In diphtheria if the dose is not made valuable after symptoms are well advanced, but its results are marvelous at the first stage of the disease.

"We can handle the disease in the case of lockjaw, which follows the receipt of the suspicious wound and a dose of the serum is given. This is good for about ten days. Then immunity from the disease is conferred. The knowledge of the good results I have had in my practice in the Massachusetts General Hospital.

CENSUS COST $14,000,000.

Field Work Alone Involved an Expense of Nearly $6,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Director Durand to-day submitted to Secretary Nagel his annual report concerning the operations of the thirteenth decennial census, for the year 1910. It is shown that the entire cost of the field work on the population of the United States, which was completed, however, was about $5,865,000. In 1900 the cost was $3,000,000. The 1910 cost was about 31½ per cent. more than 1900. The general estimate of $14,117,000 as the total cost of the census, which includes the work of the bureau during the census period, is not exceeded, and Director Durand says he thinks with the work required by Congress it will reach fully $14,500,000.

Mr. Durand in his report says that it cannot be too strenuously urged now that the work of preparing for the next decennial census of 1920, it should be passed much earlier than was done for the present census.

OPPOSE CROSSING PLANS.

Waltham Business Men Protest Elevated Track Scheme.

Three plans for the abolition of grade crossings in Waltham were shown at a hearing held in the City Hall yesterday by the Railroad Commission at the Waltham City Hall. The plan of elevating the tracks agreeable to the city officials was opposed by business men. The plan provides for carrying the line of the railroad new posts for the Moody street bridge, the Lexington and Bigelow street bridges and the Prospect street bridge. Mayor Frank A. Snow of the Boston & Maine Railroad and Edward Fenwick, counsel for the railroad, appeared for the corporation.

TETANUS YIELDING TO IMPROVED SERUM

Dr. C. H. Porter Says Science Will Soon Be Able to Master Every Case.

Dr. C. H. Porter of No. 234 Huntington avenue, whose success in handling tetanus has resulted in saving many patients at the Massachusetts General Hospital

Dr Porter says that ignorance of the action of prompt treatment in tetanus has caused many deaths. Immediate distribution of the wound by the use of a hot poultice and prompt treatment by a surgeon familiar with tetanus or at a hospital are urged.

Dr. Porter's most enthusiastic over the success that has followed the use of the antitetanic serum in the cases he has treated at the Massachusetts General Hospital. In particular the following cases he said:

"Lockjaw or tetanus is due to an organism which grows in the absence of oxygen and is found in every part of the world. It is virulent in the tropics, the home of Jamaica and in certain localities in New Jersey a large number of cases have developed. It attacks infants usually within a few days after birth and what are known as the 'nine-days' dip' may be explained by this germ.

"Hippocrates of old has given much information about it and in some respects we have not yet outgrown the information he has furnished.

"Through the use of modern knowledge mortality has decreased between 90 to 75 per cent, and blindness 50 per cent. If the disease does not develop within ten days after infection half of the patients recover.

MYSTERY ALL A BLUNDER

Suitcase Robbery on the New Haven No Robbery at All.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 18.—Major George N. Whistler, superintendent of the police mystery, and several New Haven Railroad detectives are forced to admit that the suitcase robbery on the New Haven road, long in the supposed fugitive. The major was riding in the parlor car of the train with Ireland. He started from the train in a hurry. The friend grabbed the suitcase and followed the major. That evening the friend made some remark about the suitcase.

What's that, said the major. "My suitcase. There was no suitcase. I had no other baggage. Great Scott man, you're logged with the wrong suitcase." Then the detectives will be after you.

The major's report Railroad detectives agged on by the wrathful howls of a shoe salesman whose sample case was the suitcase lifted by Ireland and now for the "suitcase lifter" as they called it the amazing news came to them that the man sitting near him had left the train at Providence. The detectives have described the suitcase Description of the two men who left the train at Providence and the description of the man who showed up at the express office with the suitcase for which he wished to find an owner

"The AMERICAN is the [illegible] comes into our home [illegible] since it has been published. When the first picture was printed I became interested and waited for my sister to come home each evening with the paper. I purchased a book with the answers and it helped me very much in getting the answers. On some of the pictures I solved the answer the night they were published and often waited all the rest of the week. When the Christmas vacation arrived I worked on the [illegible] completed all [illegible] time. The [illegible] were numerous [illegible] number fifty [illegible] sixty-six, [illegible].

"The work of solving the answers was very interesting but I did not expect to win a prize. I hoped for it, but did not expect to win, as I thought many would have more correct answers than I had, but I was helped in my school work by the contest."

Task Was a Pleasure.

"The work of solving the answers was a pleasure to me as well as instructive and I am thankful to the AMERICAN for having the contest and awarding me a prize."

The Contest, as readers of the AMERICAN know, was to send in correct answers to picture puzzles. The pictures printed daily in the AMERICAN, represented some famous person, some [illegible], some [illegible] or some city or town. Candidates were allowed to send in as many answers to every picture as they wished. In case any one of the answers to the same picture was correct, it counted as though that were the only answer sent in. This opportunity to send more than one answer to a picture was utilized by many candidates. In several cases these extra answers were, in which the correct one was included, put candidates in the prize-winning column.

In the full list of prize winners given below some figures will be seen following every name. The first figure tells how many wrong answers were sent in by the candidates. The figure or figures after the period tell the number of coupons sent in in addition to the requisite seventy-seven, that is, how many extra answers were offered. For instance: the numbers 4.31 after a name mean that the candidate had four incorrect answers and used thirty-four extra coupons.

CALL UPON CITY TO CARE FOR IDLE MEN

Social Workers Declare Boston Must Run Municipal Lodging House.

Is there need of a new municipal lodging house for the [illegible] men who are out of work [illegible] price to pay for beds [illegible] in Boston [illegible] Salvation Army are the agencies [illegible] what lodging there is to the unfortunate [illegible] for this unhappy [illegible].

Boston needs such a model [illegible] municipal lodging house more than any other city in the country, and present methods are hopelessly inadequate to the task of caring for the human derelicts that need attention.

Such is the belief of [illegible] Superintendent Richard Watson of the Prison Gate Work [illegible] John Edward O'[illegible], John Dixwell, Henry W. Newhall, Foster B. Lawrence, his associate in that work.

Mr. Watson and Mr. Lawrence have made a special study of the problem and are working to create an irresistible public sentiment which will compel the authorities to take effective action.

"The Hawkins street house is better than nothing," perhaps, said Mr. Lawrence, [illegible]. It is located in a [illegible] building, and the [illegible] that of heartless [illegible]."

Treated as Outcasts.

The unfortunate men who go there for a night's lodging are, from all I can learn of that place, considered as just hoboes to be tolerated for a night or two and treated as outcasts. That human note of encouragement seems to be sadly lacking. Moreover the place is not open after a certain hour at night, and worst of all it is not big enough to care for the men who do apply. I understand that men are [illegible]."

Mr. [illegible] that the [illegible] Hawkins street [illegible] cities [illegible] lodging [illegible] Superintendent [illegible] manager of the proposed municipal lodging house which he feels certain must be built soon in Boston, if Mr. Watson can be induced to leave his present work to which he has given twenty years of his life.

Recently the committee on legal affairs of the Legislature gave a public hearing to a bill introduced by Representative George F. Lothrop, of Dorchester, the object of which is to authorize the building of such municipal lodging houses [illegible] needed in the State.

Want Bill Changed.

Mr. Lawrence and his friends spoke in favor of the bill, but they fear it does not [illegible] problem scientifically [illegible] vital provisions are omitted and others of small importance are unduly [illegible]. They hope to get the project started, however, by having the Lothrop bill amended and possibly enacted into law.

Mr. Lawrence has printed a pamphlet at his own expense about the new lodging house and has distributed it widely in his campaign of education. He was much interested in the visit of a Sunday AMERICAN reporter recently made over a [illegible] Hawkins street woodyard, where [illegible] he was down and [illegible] sawed [illegible] to see how the men are treated there.

[illegible] Watson of the Prison Gate Work has several times spent a night [illegible] lodging houses, and says he feels he has learned infinitely more from the human documents he studied there than others who oppose him can possibly have gleaned from books.

The visit to Boston a year ago by the "millionaire hobo," Mr. Brown, a capitalist of Denver, who has just ended a two-year trip of study and inspection of city lodging houses in all the big cities, or the want of them as a rule, has stimulated many charitable workers to this effort to solve the problem in Boston, Mr. Lawrence says.

Must Care for Tramps.

"We surely do not need to inform any citizen that [illegible] vicious tramp element, to say nothing of the temporary down and outs, continually drifting about the streets and public places of the city, touching elbows with various social stratas as they pass, and giving off their ill, unfortunate or vicious germs to the atmosphere which all partake. No man stands alone or aloof. We are one social body. Therefore we must consider these people in providing for the health, the comfort and the safety of the social organism.

"Now let us deal with this class in its relation [illegible] lodging [illegible] houses [illegible] buildings.

"A municipal lodging house will be the best paying investment Boston ever made, as [illegible] will reduce the cost of maintenance of other institutions enormously by cutting off the source of production of their present inmates."

STREET SIGNS TEACH OLD BOSTON HISTORY

But Much More Could Be Done, According to Successful Paris Plan.

Shall Boston make her streets teach history? Paris does. Successfully? Paris says it is splendidly so. How? From time to time it is necessary to replace [illegible] new ones [illegible] Paris [illegible] naming [illegible].

Rue Rivoli [illegible] French victory in 1797. Avenue Victor Hugo, French Poet, Nov. [illegible] 1885.

[illegible] Famous President of the United States, 1909-1865.

[illegible] Paris, Boston also, especially [illegible] and down town Boston is associated with names made precious. Men who gave themselves to their country, to [illegible] great soldiers in [illegible] wars, streets which [illegible] as against [illegible] gives the two cities a unique opportunity.

Paris uses it. Why not Boston? The streets of down town Boston have long been the mediums of clumsy jokes by some natives and most visitors. Distinct advantages which Boston enjoys because these same streets are numerous, even if narrow and crooked, are just beginning to find recognition as actual valuable assets. This is especially true of the innumerable blind alleys and streets, the cul-de-sacs found all over old Boston.

Short Cuts in Crooked Streets.

New York is a gridiron. The majority of the streets there, while [illegible] enough, cross at right angles, and with height of buildings on [illegible] grow relatively narrower constantly and more and more crowded. To get anywhere one has to make the long journey "around a corner." A diagonal street, which is the hypothenuse of a triangle, and which every schoolboy knows is far shorter than the total of the base and altitude, or around the corner, is practically non-existent there. Broadway is the only long street of the kind.

Every crooked street in Boston is a short cut especially for the driver or chauffeur who knows just where to leave one street (and they all do know) and join another. One may travel across down town Boston in a practically straight line, turning at every [illegible] point of the compass if one knows how to hook up one's itinerary. Drivers know this, and aside from Washington street there is no congestion in downtown Boston, despite a general and widely prevalent belief to the contrary.

No city in the world has given as much of its total area in square feet to streets, alleys and the cul-de-sacs or blind thoroughfares as Boston.

Every such blind street or alley is a perpetual easement to surrounding property in light and air, which is a modern city is priceless. Each also furnishes super fire protection. The New York Life Insurance Company had to spend millions several years ago to buy the land now used as an alley on one side of its great New York city building. This land was really purchased to afford perpetual light and air, no matter how skyscraper neighboring buildings grew.

Just a Few Suggestion.

The knocker is always on the job in Boston and seldom fails to rap his little hammer on old Boston's streets for such chance laugh as he may get.

With the horse practically disappearing as a motive power for city trucks, and cabs replaced by modern, compact motor cars, with street cars going more and more underground, with Boston's buildings sanely limited to an average height of ten stories, there is not now, and never can be, anything like the crowding in the streets of New York, Chicago and Philadelphia.

If the authorities here adopt the Paris plan of substituting street signs which will be permanent teachers of Boston's history, they will find many opportunities. Here are a few suggestions for them.

State street, now named after the State government of the people, formerly was King street—Named for the King.

Court street, formerly Queen street—For England's Queen.

Richmond street, formerly Beer lane—After Beer lane, London.

Salem street, formerly Back street—Because it was "away back from town."

North street, formerly Ann street—After Queen Anne; changed by a patriotic council in 1854.

Congress street, formerly Atkinson street—After the ancient Lancashire family of Atkinson.

Federal street, was Long lane prior to 1788. Changed for patriotic reasons, as Hanover, named for the hated house of Hanover, is a notable exception.

Dock square—Because it was "the place around the dock."

Cornhill—Named for London's Cornhill, also a great bookshop centre.

Milk street—After London's Milk street.

Memory of Franklin.

Franklin avenue—Named such because for years the printing shop was located there in which Benjamin Franklin learned his trade.

Hawley street—Formerly Bishop's alley, and [illegible] up to 1792, Broad alley.

Bay State street, formerly Frog Lane—After the frogs on the Common swamps.

Bowdoin street and Bowdoin square—After Governor Bowdoin.

Chardon street—Peter Chardon, eminent French descendant of Huegunots, who had his home where Bowdoin square now is.

Leverett street—Old Governor John Leverett.

Causeway street—For the old causeway which was once on practically the same lines. That old causeway enclosed a pond of many acres between Prince and Pitt streets.

Broad street—Because of its generous width; laid out in 1806.

India street—Named for the great trade with India, which once centred there and some vestiges of which remain.

Blackstone street—Opened in 1834; named after Boston's first settler.

Harrison avenue—President Harrison.

Beacon street—After the beacon long burned on Beacon Hill.

Washington street, formerly The Way, then Broad street, then Broadway—Present name needs no explanation.

Tremont street—A contraction of the old name of Trimountaine.

Winter street, formerly Bolt's Lane—In old days was called the "Ladies' Street," because its shops, as now, were overwhelmingly patronized by women.

Commonwealth avenue, Boston's most majestic thoroughfare and hardly second to any in the world—After the majesty of the Commonwealth.

SOCIETY TO DANCE.

Highland Lodge to Hold Fourth Grand Event.

To-morrow evening in Court Hall, No. 200 Huntington avenue, the fourth grand concert and dance of Highland Lodge, No. 174, of the American Benefit Society, of Roxbury, will be held. Representatives from the State and city governments as well as officers from the supreme lodge will be present. Highland Lodge is composed of young people of the Mission Hill district and these yearly gatherings are looked forward to by the younger element.

The committee in charge consists of William J. Kilduff, Hilary Johnson, Charles Johnson, William H. Carberry, Jr., Miss Mary G. Keley, Miss Mary T. Kilduff, Miss Eleanor Carberry, Miss Anna V. Hurley, Miss Sarah Lynch, Miss Nellie Shea, Miss Katherine Lyons and Mrs. Josephine Homer.

Got Fat on Wife's Silence.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Feb. 18.—Edward Westfall, suing for divorce, told Circuit Judge Debruler that his wife's constant nagging was the most perfect flesh reducer he had ever found. "Since I left her last October, Judge, I've gained forty-two pounds, and I don't know what worry is," said Westfall. A decree was granted to him.

NEWS GLEANED IN UNION LABOR CIRCLES OF BOSTON

Following the "conditional suspension of twenty-seven carpenters' unions and two locals of steamfitters and helpers by the Building Trades Department of the A. F. L., with a total membership of 6,000 men, intense interest is being taken in to-day's meeting of the last named organization because of the possibility of these locals being suspended by the Central Labor Union itself.

"The Plasterers' Union [illegible] work done by the steamfitters [illegible] national organizations [illegible] trades department [illegible] our membership [illegible]. Because we stood [illegible] we were suspended by the Boston Building Trades department. And this despite the fact that with two exceptions every other local [illegible] trades [illegible] country has [illegible] carpenters [illegible] New York [illegible] done and [illegible] would [illegible].

Boston Barbers' Union [illegible] payment of $1,050 in sick benefits and [illegible] in death claims since [illegible] one year ago, with 500 [illegible] now on its rolls and six additional shop cards issued during the last week. Chris Mahon and C. E. O'Donnell, president and secretary of the local, who [illegible] recently organized State council of barbers, announced [illegible] the Boston union is more prosperous to-day than [illegible].

Travelers' Goods and Leather Novelty Workers' Union No. 21 has instituted a strenuous organizing campaign with the intention of presenting a demand for higher wages as soon as conditions warrant. There are 800 men and women following the calling in Boston, 35 per cent. of whom belong to the union. Their average wage, on a 57 hour week basis, is $12 a week for day work and $9 for piece work. New York and Chicago have a 54 hour week, with wage scales of $18 for day work and $21 for piece work.

Dan H. Deegon, secretary of the Carpenters' District Council, commenting on the situation, said: "The whole trouble is the result of a jurisdiction dispute at the St. Louis convention of the National Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L. Briefly stated, the Sheet Metal Workers' Union claimed the exclusive right to set all window frames and doors having a metal facing, although the work has to be done with carpenter's tools and doesn't differ in any way from the setting of frames made wholly of wood.

Educational classes, with black-board talks by skilled instructors and the latest devices used in the business for object lessons, have been started by the Moving Picture Operators' Union at the union rooms, No. 724 Washington street, for the sole purpose of adding to the knowledge of the union members who have already been licensed by the State. The union has voted to hold its annual [illegible] following the close of the Lenten season.

A new Painters' District Council will be formed at No. 724 Washington street to-morrow night to take the place of the old council recently dissolved by Joseph F. Kelly of Philadelphia, international vice-president of the brotherhood, acting on the appeal of the four Boston locals of that organization. The new council will be composed of Painters' Union No. 11, Sign Writers' Union No. 391, Paperhangers' Union No. 280 and East Boston Painters' Union No. 412, as against the eighteen locals which made up the old organization.

Norwegian machinists returning to their native land from the United States with a good standing card of the American union of that calling, under an agreement just entered into between Boston Machinists' Union and the Iron Workers' Union at Christiania, Norway, will be entitled to the same benefits as though in continuous good standing with the Norwegian union.

Although organized less than three months the Milk Wagon Drivers' Union of Greater Boston to-day is credited with having more than 500 members. This good showing, it is said, is largely due to the activity of Thomas J. Mulhan, appointed [illegible] organizer for the milk wagon drivers by the general officers of the Teamsters' Union.

[illegible] the Boston Domestic Protective [illegible] since it was organized seven months [illegible] meets in Wells Memorial [illegible] every Monday evening.

J. W. Howlett, business agent of the Carpenters' District Council, was the recipient of numerous beautiful and costly presents from eighty friends and relatives on the tenth anniversary of his wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Howlett entertained their friends at the family residence, No. [illegible] Dorchester avenue.

[illegible] Steamfitters and Steamfitters' Helpers [illegible] Copley [illegible] the Metal Polishers' Union holds its annual ball in Berkley Hall that evening.

Building Laborers' Union No. 22 meets at [illegible] this afternoon [illegible] report on the settlement of two strikes during the last week [illegible] streets [illegible] the other in Pelham street [illegible] twenty men.

Fifty additional members are assured to the Electrical Workers' Union at Lowell as a result of the organizing campaign [illegible] meeting [illegible] week ago. After completing the organization in Lowell the officers of the council say they are "going to tackle Salem."

Division No. 1, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, has arranged for an after-meeting social at No. 184 Canal street, Thursday evening, at which there will be singing, speaking and refreshments. All members are invited to be present. Stanley G. Perry is chairman of the entertainment committee.

Waiters' Union No. 80 meets at No. [illegible] Washington street Wednesday afternoon to receive a report of its [illegible] committee appointed recently to [illegible] some more convenient downtown location. Seventeen applicants for membership in the union will be voted on at this meeting.

In a referendum taken at the suggestion of the Boston local, all pressmen's and assistant pressmen's unions in the district are called upon to decide whether or not they will start a New England district council of pressmen.

J. J. Farnum of Albany, third vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, has established headquarters at the Haymarket Hotel while in this city on a business trip for the brotherhood.

DIVORCE DENOUNCED AS NATION'S PERIL

Prof. Dawson Sees Danger in Growing Custom Added to Fewer Marriages.

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 18.—Fewer marriages, fewer births and more divorces are imminent dangers to this country in the opinion of Professor George E. Dawson of the faculty of the Hartford School of Religious Pedagogy. He was one of the speakers at the Religious Education Convention in Providence.

Professor Dawson declares that the average annual number of marriages per every 10,000 of population in the United States was decreasing. Every successive five-year period since 1867, he says, has witnessed a marked increase in the number of divorces, so that to-day on an average of one marriage in every nine in the United States is [illegible]. [illegible] being born [illegible] in 1900 [illegible] three-fourths [illegible] potential [illegible] in 1860.

"The idealization of motherhood has been common throughout human history," says Professor Dawson, "but such is not the case at the present time. Woman as mother is not impressed upon the [illegible] It is woman [illegible] the ideal [illegible] our brightest young women [illegible]. It is [illegible] most [illegible].

[illegible] activities at the present time, in favor of children have their logical culmination in the creation of conditions such as will insure the propagation of a better human stock. The apparent atrophy and decay of the desire for parenthood in our generation can be arrested and corrected only as men and women are brought to a more adequate recognition of children's right to be well born, and their own inescapable [illegible] father."

GOOD STORIES HEARD LAST WEEK IN BOSTON

Portable Sights

By "Bert" Collier of the Bath Department.

WHEN Hattie Le Blanc went home in triumph to West Arichat a number of Boston newspaper men made the trip so as to wire results as to her reception by the townfolk. One of these fellows wore clothes of the latest cut and in looking the village over came in contact with a native and engaged him in conversation.

"Do you ever go up to Boston?" the scribe asked.

"No," was the reply, "what should I go to Boston for?"

"Why, to see the sights, of course."

"Oh," replied the villager, "we don't have to go up to Boston to see the sights. They come down here to see us."

He'd Beat It

One from the conductors' room at the North Station.

TWO men met in the train shed and greeted each other effusively. At length one, bearing a heavy grip, spoke:

"Billy, old chap," he said, "I suppose you heard how I had gone to the wall in business."

"Why —, Tom," replied the other, "this is news to me."

"Yes," continued the first, "I've failed, but I've got everything arranged now so that my creditors won't trouble me.

"Are you going to get out of debt?"

"No (indicating the grip), I'm going to get out of town."

Modern Version

By Frederick T. Strachan, orchestra leader and composer.

THERE had been a dance given in Intercolonial Hall and at its conclusion the orchestra members prepared their instruments for departure. One of the officers of the ball, in squaring up accounts with the band leader, inadvertently sat down upon the bass drum. In great alarm the drum thumper shouted:

"Up, up, I beg of you! You'll smash the head in!"

"Ah," said the ball official as he arose, "I see that you at least believe in the old adage that two heads are better than one."

For the Union

A story that found its way into the school board headquarters at Mason street.

"PATRIOTISM" was the subject under discussion before the members of a certain class in the Forster school at Somerville the other day and the teacher called upon her pupils to tell in turn what articles they owned that would illustrate their love of country.

"We have a big flagstaff at our house in Thurston street," said a girl. "I've got a gun that was in the Civil War," said another.

Others told of having dogs and pistols and swords. One boy had nothing to say when his turn came.

"Haven't you anything to show that you are patriotic, William?" the teacher asked.

The boy looked downcast as he thought for a moment. Then his eyes lit up with enthusiasm.

"Why, yes," he replied, "I've got a union suit, teacher."

Mistaken Motive

By John Burns of Orient Heights.

A NEW teacher appeared at the primary school. She was very timid, entertained a horror of being called upon to administer punishment, and inspired one of the other teachers of this fact.

"Well," said her friend, "there is only one boy in your charge who will give you any trouble. Tommy Smith is a bad boy, but if he doesn't behave you just send him to my room and I'll attend to his case."

Later in the day Tommy walked into the second teacher's room. She immediately grabbed the boy by the clothing, hurried him into the anteroom and gave him a good shaking.

"There," she blurted as she bumped him up against the wall and then stood back to survey him, "now what have you got to say?"

"Boo hoo," sobbed Tommy; "teacher wants some lead pencils."

Something Lacking

By Sidney Herbert, an actor man.

DURING the hunting season a few months ago a couple of friends of mine went down in the Dead River region of Maine and started hunting without a guide. Of course this was utter foolishness and they soon got lost. They had left all the provender in camp and after spending the night in the open, one aroused the other at day dawn with this comment upon their situation:

"Dear me, Tom, I was just thinking that if we only had some bacon we'd have bacon and coffee, if we only had the coffee."

Perseverance

Told at the late conference of ministers.

THE new pastor had preached his sermon and felt that he had done well. As he was leaving the church he met one of the deacons.

"Ah," said he, "what did you think of my sermon?"

"Fine, fine," was the reply. "You made some telling points."

"What was it that took hold of you the most?" he inquired.

"Why, I—I think it was your perseverance—the manner in which you insisted upon giving your things," was the answer.

Boosts Lomasney

This is a new one on Representative Martin Lomasney. It was told by a West Ender attending the Harvard Medical School.

HARVARD professor, lecturing on the chemical composition of man: "An average man of, say 160 pounds, has enough iron in his blood to till a gasometer with 3,649 feet of gas, which is sufficient to inflate a balloon which will carry him above the clouds——"

Student, with husky voice—"Hurrah for Lomasney! He's got gas enough in his makeup to fill two balloons, and iron enough in his blood to make a barrel of spikes. That's how he keeps the opposition in the air and nails all the other pols to the cross. What if he didn't win the Speakership? He'll be right on deck next time just the same."

Help Not Needed

From the Copley square headquarters of the cause.

THE sweet girl pursued Wellesley girl was greatly interested in the suffrage movement, and its leaders had assigned her to a house-to-house canvass seeking adherents. She sought out a neighborhood, went up the steps to a house and rang the bell. A heavily built woman appeared, her big arms showing flickers of fuzz from the wash tub.

"May I see your husband?" asked the visitor.

The woman stepped back, assumed a sinister aspect and came on with a question herself. "What do you want of him?"

"I wanted to ask him what party he belongs to," said the young woman cheerily.

"Well," was the reply, "you just take a good look at me. I'm the party he's tied up with."

He Sure Was!

By an elevator man of the Exchange Building.

BEFORE the rush period began the other morning I chanced to take a messenger boy up to the seventh floor. Nothing that big face had some smudges upon it, I said:

"That's a pretty dirty face you're carrying round with you."

He drew out a handkerchief with exclamations of

"Have I got it? Is it gone?" and the like till the smudge was at length removed.

"I thought I'd tell you of it," I continued.

"Why—that's all right," he replied. "You had or perfect right to. Aren't you bringing me up?" and he pointed to the cage in which we stood.

Easy Money

By Arthur D. Sargent of State Street.

HERE is about as good a story as I have heard in some time, and I got it from a prominent banker.

"Next," shouted the seven barbers in unison as the pompous man from the Tremont Building sauntered in, hung up his overcoat and removed his hat, displaying the fact that he was very bald. He went over to the chair of the occupant he had selected in that manner about the room, sat down and put his hand up to his collar.

"Can you cut my hair with my collar on?" he queried.

The barber gazed at the expanse of shining pate. "Why, my dear sir," he said, "I could cut your hair with your hat on."

A Latin Quarter

By "Jim" Blease, who sleeps in Saxonville and is known in Boston for his height (six feet six inches) and his humorous stories.

SHE was pretty and her name was Ethel, and she had but recently returned to Boston from a European trip. She passed out souvenirs to relatives, but was somewhat abashed to find that her aunt from way down East had joined her family for a visit, in her absence.

"I've got something interesting for you, at all events, Auntie," she said. "Here is a silver frame piece."

"Why, that's nice of you, I'm sure," replied her aunt as she examined it closely. "When I first saw it in your hand I thought it was one of those Latin quarters I've read so much about."

The Double Life

Told at the City Club by a Prominent Knight of Columbus.

I WAS up in "Joe" Dennison's office in the Kimball Building the other [illegible]. The mail had just been brought in, and he distributed a letter was passed over [illegible] looks. He read it then handed a round from his desk and said:

"It [illegible] when you hear of a man [illegible] in two countries at the same time. [illegible] of the fact that the Atlantic rolls between them."

"Such a thing couldn't be," said another [illegible] was filing away documents.

"Oh, yes," returned the first. "At least this friend of mine makes the claim in this letter. He writes: 'Here I am in Paris and I am home sick.'"

Near Real Thing

A story from station 12, South Boston, related by one of Captain Wescott's men "on the desk."

I HAD occasion to go by the Lincoln school during the recess period the other day and the sight of my uniform caused a boy to remark to his fellows:

"My father is a policeman."

Naturally I stopped up as I wanted to find out whose son this chap was. As I questioned him I heard another boy say:

"That's nothing, my father is a policeman, too."

"Oh, Jimmy, what a fib!" challenged one of his hearers. "You know that your father isn't a policeman."

"That may be," returned Jimmy, "he isn't a real policeman, but he often goes with them."

A Guide for City Dwellers--By Wex Jones

WEDDINGS—There are many thousands of weddings every year in Boston, and each of them is of great interest to at least two persons, but the City Dweller pays no attention whatever to the vast majority of them. Some of the weddings are romantic, some are tragic, most of them are just the commonplace love affairs that have kept the world going through the rise and fall of Babylons. However, there is no excuse for the City Dweller who betrays any interest in such as these. For the C. D. to pay attention it is necessary for at least one of the contracting parties to have money in such chunks that the family fortune has to be spread out over a chain of banks, while the jewels bulge the sides of two or three safety deposit vaults. If the party of the other part happens to hail from Europe and has a title, then the C. D. prepares to enjoy the affair for a week or two.

Of course, in this respect the City Dweller does not differ a bit from the unfortunate inhabitants of Other Places; he—or rather she—merely enjoys the advantage of being able to get squashed in the crowd outside the church at no greater expense than a nickel for carfare. The O. P. dweller can only read of the decorations of the church and gaze upon photographs of the prisoners—the principals, we should say—while the thrice happy C. D. can have the joy of being run off the sidewalk by one of the police detailed to save the bride from having her clothes torn off by souvenir hunters. Also, the wretched dwellers in the outer darkness have to be content with drawings of the wedding gown and descriptions of the shoes, stockings, hats and lingerie, while the C. D. can say with pride that he—or rather she—came within a block of seeing the bride emerge from the church and seek refuge in the carriage. In addition, the C. D. can say proudly that she has seen the outside of the house in which the wedding presents were displayed, a partial inventory of the said presents, with quantities of the same, being:

Pearls, matched ..... 6 yards
Pearls, assorted ..... 2 gallons
Diamonds ..... 10 lbs (avoirdupois)
Dinner service, solid gold, 5 sets complete
Other gold articles ..... ½ ton
Rubies, emeralds, etc ..... 1 gallon

Something indeed to see the outside of a house where all this is displayed.

S. C. D.—The novice anxious to pass as a hardened Bostonian can find no safer topic than the Street Cleaning Department. To the City Dweller the department appears to have been instituted solely to provide him with something he can cuss—in wet weather for the mud and in dry weather for the dust. It is during snow, however, that the C. D. finds the subject at its best. It is nevr rainin to say, "Oh, well, the S. C. D. isn't so bad after all." (This part must be said, not exactly archly, but semi-archly. Smile brightly.) "Oh well, the S. C. D. isn't so bad after all—but you they have all this snow off the streets by the Fourth of July." (Smile here with additional brightness.) The young man anxious to pass as a true Bostonian may safely be recommended to practice this quip for fifteen minutes every morning. This and some jocular reference to the street cars bucking the snowpiles comprise the necessary equipment for discussing intelligently any question that may arise concerning the department.

MOVING PICTURES—The principal reason for the popularity of such entertainments in Boston is that one may see a drama enacted without having to listen to the actors. The City Dweller, however, must be careful even at a moving picture show. It is exceedingly dangerous to betray interest in films showing a Buffalo Hunt in Montana or Kaiser Wilhelm Reviewing the Potsdam Prancers. Such scenes as these should be watched in cold silence, but let the film depict a Stormy Day at Tremont and Boylston Streets at Five O'Clock, or even the Bunker Hill Monument Standing Still, the C. D. must cheer loudly and remark that it's very true to life.

COUNTRY CLUB—This is something for which your true C. D. has an abiding contempt. The adjuncts of golf, lawn tennis and other outdoor sports interfere too much with the bar. The Washington Street Country Club is the only one ever organized on practical lines for the Bostonian.

WEATHER—To the Bostonian, and by Bostonian, as the Guide has already explained, we mean Bostonians, and not Maldenites or Lynn dwellers or other suburbanites, the weather is virtually of no importance. He scoots from the covered entrance of his apartment house to the subway or elevated. Then he enters the basement of his office building, and when the day's work is over he returns to his mission chair by the same route. Consequently, he cares little for the weather, except as the extreme heat of Summer searches out his particular lair in the cliff house he calls home. There is no getting up on a black Winter morning to thaw out a pump; no putting out in a small boat against a surf booming in under a gale. All the C. D. knows about the weather is reading such items as, "Texas has 93 in the shade," or "The temperature at Lake Placid at noon yesterday was 52 degrees," or "The sun was shining in Naples yesterday."

But should the C. D. be forced to cross an open space like Boston Common or the Public Gardens when three or four flakes of snow are floating upon the breeze, he must on no account fail to say, "Ugh! Another blizzard!" The day may seem balmy enough to the man unlucky enough to come from one of the Other Places where they have blizzards of their own, yet nevertheless when in Boston he must proclaim three flakes of snow and a puff of air a howling blizzard and lament that the city is again in the grip of the Storm King.

CONVERSATIONS—This is not a guide to Conversations, a subject which would require a volume to itself, but rather to the places where Conversations may be carried on.

If the C. D. is a man he may hold a Conversation with a friend—

(a) At a luncheon table.

(b) With one foot resting on a brass rail.

If the C. D. is a woman she has a much wider choice of places in which she may converse with her dearest friend or enemy. Some of the most approved are—

(a) On the stairs of an L or subway station.

(b) On the steps of a street car.

(c) In front of the ticket window of a theatre when there is a queue a mile long behind the talkers.

(d) In the door of a ferry house 30 seconds before the boat pulls out.

There are, of course, innumerable other places, but those named are undoubtedly the most popular.

When the Audience Supplies the Laughs—By Carlyle Moore

(Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner, Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

IN the production of "The White Horse Tavern" there is a rain scene, in which, by a well-contrived system of pipes, the entire stage is deluged with water from above for all the world like a real thunder shower. At one theatre where the play was put on the water main from which these pipes were fed was placed in the control of a green man, the stage manager explaining the situation to him thoroughly. The water was to be turned on at the end of the act, on the word "Rain," he explained.

"Now don't forget 'rain,'" said the stage manager. "That's the cue. When you get it turn on the water."

The play was progressing beautifully, and the old professor in the middle of the act was expatiating on the beautiful weather, country, etc.

"Look at the glorious sun," said he; "on the poet or peasant, the pauper or prince, it reigns in benevolence alike.

There came a spluttering from above and the drizzle began its descent.

The drizzle grew to a shower.

"Beautiful weather!" gasped the leading man, while the rain pelted on the stage in an incessant rattle.

"Bring a gun!" shouted a boy in the gallery, "they are ducks."

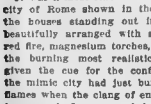
THE most sensational scene of "Quo Vadis" was the burning of Rome, with Nero chanting the "Troyad."

It was a most elaborate scene, with the city of Rome shown in the background, the houses standing out in profile and beautifully arranged with short circuits, red fire, magnesium torches, etc., to make the burning most realistic. Nero had given the cue for the conflagration and the mimic city had just burst forth into flames when the clang of engines dashing to a real fire resounded through the street.

"Bully for ancient Rome!" shouted an enthused commissioner in the front row, "that's better time than our boys can make."



A WELL-KNOWN manager who worked his way from the bottom rung of the ladder finally acquired a theatre out in San Francisco. His success was due to his thrift and conscientious effort, and consequently, while watching the first orchestral rehearsal, he became much incensed at the cornetist, who by turns blew when his instrument, then laid it down for a time and then blew again. Finally the thrifty manager could stand it no longer.

"My don'd you attend to business?" he asked.

"What do you mean?" from the musician.

"My don'd you work, everybody else is?"

"But," said the cornetist, pointing to his music, "don't you see those are all rests?"

"Vell, blay 'em," demanded the manager, "I don'd pay you for resting."

THE comedian enjoys being laughed with as the tragedian loves to be wept with, but it is death to either to be laughed or wept at. The following is an incident that will show the point of difference:

The episode occurred at the time when smokeless powder had just been discovered and the papers were full of it. In the third act of the Bret Harte story, "Tennessee's Pardner," the villain shoots at the hero. The girl, Tennessee, steps before her partner and receives the bullet in her body. On this occasion the villain's pistol refused to work. Every one in the wings tried to fire a shot, but no gun would explode. It was at the end of the act and Tennessee must fall wounded, or the climax would be ruined, so she did the only possible thing—crumpled up and fell regardless. Before the audience could laugh at the situation, the character comedian stepped forward, kneeled over the body, found the supposed wound and solemnly announced:

"Shot in the arm with noiseless powder."

THE egotism of the bad actor is sublime; whereof this example is proof.

An actor, who shall be nameless, was attempting the villainous part of Jacque in "The Two Orphans," which Kate Claxton made famous.

Jacque was a big man, and that seemed to be this particular actor's only qualification for the part. The audience was extremely indulgent, but in the fourth act, a Winter street scene, their patience became pretty well frayed. It was a hot June day, the theatre was correspondingly warm, and to see the big fellow disporting in the falling snow was a bit too much. Somebody hissed; that settled it. The boys in the gallery began to cat-call. An egg appeared mysteriously (one of those eggs that sell to-day ten for twenty-five cents. In a few minutes more it could have walked off the stage itself.) The side of the villain's face stopped this one just as he was making his exit. As he brushed it from his face, he smiled: "I tell you," he said, "it's some acting when you can make 'em hate you like that."

IN a Western town Guy Standing was playing Julian Beauclere in the play "Diplomacy." Needless to say it was beautifully acted, but a trifle too classy for the Westerners; finally an opportunity arose for a malcontent in the audience to express himself.

In the last act Beauclerc discovers the Countess Zicka as the real purloiner of State documents, through a certain perfume which she affects, and so clears the innocent parties.

In this scene, he entered the room and was struck with the peculiar odor. It grew more pronounced as he approached his desk; he sniffed, the audience giggled a bit; his private papers reeked of it; he sniffed again; more giggles; as he opened his dispatch box the odor seemed to leap out at him. Where had he smelled that perfume before? He was warm on the scent; he sniffed excitedly, nervously, many times; realization came to him like an inspiration:

"Zicka," he shouted, triumphantly, "the Countess Zicka."

"You're wrong," exclaimed an indignant malcontent; "it's the play that smells."

A GOOD laugh from "Sapho," the play in which Miss Olga Nethersole starred so successfully:

Jean was a handsome chap, a corking actor, but a trifle small for heroic parts. Sapho was a strapping, well-developed girl weighing, approximately, 160 pounds. At the end of the first act occurs the staircase scene, which occasioned such a furor throughout the country at the time of its production.

Up to this point, the leading people had made a splendid impression. As they came to the winding stairway, that begins on the stage and ends somewhere in the flies, Jean said:

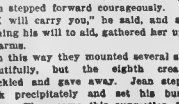
"I have a little room on the fourth floor," replied Jean.

"And I am so tired," yawned Sapho. Jean stepped forward courageously.

"I will carry you," he said, and summoning his will to aid, gathered her up in his arms.

In this way they mounted several steps beautifully, but the eighth creaked, crackled and gave away. Jean stepped back precipitately and set his burden down. Then came this suggestion from the gallery:

"Bring the room down to her, Jean."



Lucinda on the Trouserette Skirt

"MY land, Ma,' 'sclaimed my Amanda to me de odder night, 'de paper says dat de hobble skirt is done hobbled out, and dat de women in Paris is wearing trousers. Ef you don't believe me, des cast yo' eyeballs on dis,' and den she showed me de picture of a female lady pusson dat had on pants an' dat looked lak a carrot, big an' bulgy at de top an' little an' spindlin' at de bottom.

"'De hussies!' I cries, a foldin' de paper so dat Ike couldn't see hit, 'cause hit's a wife's duty to pertect her husband, an' when he goes to a show I always holds my fan up in front of his face when dem gals in spangles an' a sweet smile comes out to dance or walk the tight-rope.

"'Humph!' says Ike, 'I don't see nothin' so new in a woman wearin' de britches in Paris. Hit's de common custom for de wife to do hit in dis country. Leastways,' he went on wid a meanin' glance at me, 'I knows who has had 'em on for thuty years in dis fambly—an' hit ain't me.'

"'Well,' 'sponds I, 'ef I has, I has kept dem kivered up. I sin't never flaunted dem in public. However much I has bossed de roost in private, I has been a meek an' humble wife, what sat at her husband's feet in public, an' listened to de words of wisdom dat dropped from his lips. An' dat's what makes me say what I do—dat hit is all right for a woman to wear de britches at home ef dey fits her better dan dey does her husband, but hit's a scandalous an' a indecent thing for her to strut around in 'em befo folks, an' crow about havin' 'em on.

"'Dat's right, ole woman,' says Ike, 'you scorely would bust de livin' picture machine of you tried to git yo' 250 pounds of heft into a natty Spring suit wid razor-aidged creases. You'd look lak a feather bed on stilts.

"'Don't you worry none about me,' I 'sponds, 'skirts is lak de mantle of charity, dey kivers a multitude of sins, an' I'se gwine to stick to 'em an' keep de fact of whedder I is bowlegged or knock-kneed or one of dese heah cousses a secret betwixt me an' my petticoat.'

"'De onliest advantage dere is in being a woman,' says Amandy, in a mournful voice, 'is in being able to wear pretty clo's, an' goodness knows de female sect has troubles an' tribulations enough widout havin' to give up ruffles an' frills an' furbelows an' jest wear plain pants.'

"'Dat's de true words,' says I, 'an' ef you takes away de pleasure of her clothes from woman you don't leave her nothin' but de consolations of religion, an' de strongest faith ain't de comfort to fall back on in de hour of affliction dat a sixty new dress, wid real lace an' bugiers on hit, is. Many's de widow dat I'se seed dat would a died of grief on her husband's grave of hit hadn't been dat she got her attention destracted from her sorrows by buyin' her new mournin' outfit.'

"Yassum, many's de woman dat has been kept from susanicide by de interest she took in seein' herself in a long crepe veil dat floated from her bonnet somethin' grand.

"'But would de buyin' of a new pair of black pants keep a bereaved lady from takin' a dose of rough-on-rats' Nawsir. Hit would drive her to hit, for de most consoling words dat a widow ever hears—an' de ones dat wipes de tears from her eyes de quickest—is when somebody says, 'Sis Samanthy, black shorely becomes you;' but no woman could look forward to havin' anybody tell her dat she looked well in her new black britches, an' so dere wouldn't be nothin' left for her but to grieve hepself to death.

"'Nawsir, of men ain't got no better sense dan to want to wear clothes dat looks lak dey was made of j'ints of stovepipe, let 'em do hit, but women has got mo' sense and mo' taste. No woman ain't gwine to do hit. I bet dat when Eve pinned on de first figleaf she put bit on bias, or in godet plates, an' stuck a red rose behind her ear.

"'Well' says Ike, 'women shorely does wear fool clothes, an' hit makes me laugh when I sees a woman gwine down to wuk laced so dat she can't catch a good breath, an' wid heels under de middle of her foot, an' enough bought hair on her head to start a mattress factory, an' a holdin forty-leven different things in her hands an' er mouf, because she ain't got no pockets. If a man wah sufferin' as much misery as a woman is when she's dressed up to go out he would be in bed an' have de doctor wukkin' over him an' ev'body on de jump tryin' to ease his pain.

"'Now, whilst I aint' in favor of givin' women any mo' privileges dan dey has got, hit suttinly does look to me lak dat ef women would leave off all of dem thingumbobs in which dey squeezes up dere in'ards, an' would buy 'em some britches lak dem Paris women, dat dey would be a lot mo' comfortable.'

"'Shoo,' says I 'dem remarks shows dat no man can onderstand a womans' nature, fo' no woman can be comfortable except when she's got on a straight-front figger, an' de latest thing in jaybird-heel shoes an' fo' pounds of puffs, an' a dress dat makes ev'body she meets most screw off dere heads lookin' back at her when she passes 'em.'

"'Why, Ma,' 'sclaims Amandy, 'don't you believe in reform dress?'

"'De only reform dat women's reform clothes wuks is on men,' 'sponds I. 'You don't never see no man secsaunin' off wid a lady in bloomers.'

"'Ma,' says Amandy, 'ef dat Paris fashion of de trousers comes to dis country, is you gwine to wear 'em?'

"'Who? Me?' I 'sclaimed. 'Dat I ain't! I'se pigeon-toed.'"

"Dear Old Grandpa, Please Go On a Spree"—MORE FUNNY PARODIES

By William F. Kirk

Copyright, 1911, by American ...

THE Hundred Thousand Dollar Parody Contest, started two weeks ago, has created a furore, which is the amateur way of stating that it has attracted attention. Hundreds of [illegible] of every description have been pouring in, many of them startlingly clever.

Many of the contestants have refused to parody the song hits of to-day, preferring the good old classics. Miss Inez Fitzgibbons, of the Back Bay, submits the following effort, a parody on "After the Ball." She explains in an accompanying letter that the old songs are the best, after all, and adds that she hopes to win the hundred thousand dollars, a hope for which Inez cannot be harshly condemned. This is the parody:

A little maiden climbed an old man's knee,
Said, "Dear old grandpa, please go on a spree.
Why stick to water? Why feel so blue?
Papa loves highball—why do not you?"
"Perhaps you are right," the old man said,
And he proudly reared his silvery head.
"If I take one ball I may soon be dead,"
Then across the room to the sideboard he sped.

Chorus:

After the ball he fell over,
Just at the break of day.
Now he is looking natural,
All of the neighbors say.
Many a thirst need slaking,
Pity the grandpas who fail.
Many a heart is breaking
After the ball.

Miss Inez apologizes in a postscript for alluding to drink, and assures the editor of the Parody Contest that "none of her folks ever done much drinking."

Miss Ella Brown of Portland, Maine, sends in the following parody on "I'm Afraid to Go Home in the Dark":

Abe Goldstein was a burglar, a daring man was he;
His partner was so crooked he would climb his family tree.
They robbed a house near Franklin Park, and when the cops drew near,
They sought the shelter of the trees until the coast was clear.
Said Abe unto his partner, "Now let's go."
His shivering partner answered, "Say not so."

Chorus:

"Abie dear, listen here, I'm afraid to go home from the park;
Diamonds we got, oh, such a lot, what if they make a spark?
Let's stay on our knees in the shade of the trees and wait till the moon gets dark.
There's no suits like striped suits—I'm afraid to go home from the park."

Mr. Aaron Kelzer of No. 2967 Columbus [illegible] writes:

"Dear Sir—Please find enclosed my lyric [illegible] will ask you to be so kind and set the [illegible] same. The one hundred thousand [illegible] you are offering I don't care for as such a [illegible] only my daily pin money, but I will ask [illegible] same amount to somebody who needs it [illegible] verses.

[illegible] Editor of Parody Contest," writes Mrs. [illegible] Benedict of Monponsett, "I have compiled or composed three parodies for you, all of same bearing on the touching and [illegible] topical subject so near and dear to the heart of every true wife—payday. I trust that you will consider them both long and soulfully, and should one of them win the one hundred thousand dollar prize I will never frown again. My [illegible] has and is a terrible failure on some paydays, hence the tense and solemn strain that runs through the following contributions. The first parody is on "Dream [illegible]," and runs thusly:

Mirandy Discusses New Fads in Education—By Dorothy Dix

"M[illegible]," exclaimed Mirandy, [illegible] "I don't know what [illegible] comin' to wid [illegible] repulsory eddycation [illegible] an' de boys to sew an' de gals to do carpenter [illegible] Yassum, de schools suttenly does kee[p] you guessin' what dey is gwine to do next, an' dey's done [illegible] so much natchur stud[y], an' folk dances, an' m[illegible] an' drawin', an' cookin', dat about de onliest thing dat dey don't teach nowaday is how to read, an' spell, an' write.

"Not dat dat makes any diffunce, because hit shorely makes you mighty safe not to know how to write, an' hit keeps you from sendin' off any of dem fool love letters dat gits in de papers, an' makes ev'ybody wonder how you managed to git by de feeb-minded institute.

"Cose I ain't had none o' de disadvantages of eddycation myself, but I determined to give 'em to my chillen, an' so when my oldest gal, Ma'y Jane, come along I sent her off to one of dese heah Female Cemetaries whar dey guarantees to give you de higher culchar for three hundred dollars a year. Yassum, I sent Ma'y Jane to dat place, an' for fo' years [illegible] an' set nened, an' [illegible] washin' to pay for hit, an' when she comes home she was dat full of bombosity, an' pompos[ity], an' supersilliosity dat dere wasn't no livin' in de house wid [her].

"Dat kinder shook my faith in eddycation, dough I must say dat Ma'y Jane is been a gittin' over her's ever since, so dat now she don't think dat she knows mo' dan fo' times as much as me an' her Pa, an' I done tuck notice dat sence she has done got married, an' has been wrastlin' single-handed wid a cookin' stove an' a cranky baby dat dere is times when she condescends to ax my advice instid of instructin' me on how I ought to do things.

"Howsomever, aldough I had had dis heah experunce wid de probusness of eddycation, I shorely warn't prepared for my little Teddy Roosterfelt a comin' home de odder day an' axin' me for a thimble, an' a spool of thread, an' some needles, an' buttons.

"'For de Lawd saye,' says I, 'what does you want wid all of dat truck?'

"'I got to take 'em to school wid me,' says he.

"'Turn around,' says I, 'an' let [illegible] what you done [illegible] 'em off.'

"'I ain't busted none of 'em off,' [illegible] 'I'se in de sewin' class [illegible]'

"'You mean dat dey's gwine to teach you how to sew on yo' own buttons, an' patch yo' own britches, an' darn yo' own socks,' says I.

"'Yassum,' says he, 'an' I'se [illegible] of de class.'

"But ob cose you got to do [illegible] what dey tells you, so I fixes up little Teddy Roosterfelt a sewin' bag, an' de odder night whilst I was a half sol[in'] his Pa's Sunday pants he up an' tells me dat I ain't doin' hit right.

"Yassum, an' whilst I had Teddy Rooster felt a turned across my knee an' I was applyin' dat slipper whar hit would do de mos' good, my mind was a [illegible] on de time when he would [illegible] own, an' git married, an' what dat po' [illegible] who got him would [have] to stand for from a husband [dat] knew her business as well as his own.

"Yassum, you mark my word, dat de [illegible] folks gits divorces now ain't a patch on de way dey will git 'em when a [hus]band what has learned how to sew an' [illegible] de schools, hands out back talk to [illegible] she turns out her w[illegible], an' when a woman what has got a medal [illegible] carpenter in de Normal mak[e]s [su]ggestions to her husband what is tryin' to drive in a nail, an' hittin' his thumb wid every lick of de hammer. I tell you dere'll be murder done den an' de way coffee pots will fly through de air will make you think de day of Jedgment done come.

[illegible]

[illegible] one of de joys [illegible] in somebody [illegible] shelves in de kitchen [illegible] hooks in de closet, an' [illegible] her. Cose, when [illegible] out dat dis is one of de dreams of wedded bliss dat don't never come true, an' dat ef she wants any shelves an' hooks she has got to go out an' hire some odder man to put 'em up for her, whilst as for hanging pitchurs, hits a thing dat calls out so much profanity in a husband dat no pious wife, what has got her husband's immortal soul at heart, don't never ax him to do.

"But what'll happen when ev'y woman is her own carpenter? Will she marry de fust ablebodied lookin' man dat comes along lak she does now? Nawm, she won't [illegible] shelves [illegible] won't [illegible] is inde[pendent] [illegible] [illegible] ain't no hin' [illegible] makes a [illegible] unless hit [illegible] to lay down de [law] on how a hoss ought to be drove, or [how] to do man what's a doin' de w[ork].

"Nawm, I ain't no believer in mixin' [thin]gs. Dere's man's wuk, an' dere's woman's wuk. Let each of 'em stick to dere own, an' not meddle in de odder's. I drives my husband out of my kitchen wid de broom stick, an' bless Gord, I'se got enough sense to keep my foot out of his shop.

"I hates a short-haired woman an' a long-haired man, an' dese heah betwixt an' between critters dat de schools is gwine to turn out ain't got no place in dis world, for dey'se too lady lak for men, an' too hoodlum lak for ladies."

HEADS AND FACES—Men Prominent in Boston

DANIEL T O'CONNELL is an attorney whose advice is well worth having, whether one plans a civil action in the courts or holds ideas of becoming a candidate to succeed John F. Fitzgerald, as Mayor when John gets tired of the job. His talents on the law are well known but over and above all has he made a state wide reputation as a profound student of practical politics. In the first mayoralty campaign conducted by the present Chief Executive of the city, "Don" O'Connell, as he is best known, was the "Little General's" right hand man. Once in the Mayor's chair, John F lost no time in naming him as his private secretary. His abilities as a campaign manager have been utilized time and time again by the Democratic State Committee, and his brother, Congressman O'Connell. Outside of Martin M. Lomasney, there is no man in Greater Boston who has a firmer lower jaw—the marking of determination and spirit. Yet Don has now tabooed politics for good, he says.

ROBERT TREAT PAINE, JR., became Robert Treat Paine some time ago when the death of his father brought forth expressions of profound regret throughout the country he so dearly loved. Mr. Paine is and ever will be the personification of modesty. Despite his directorship in gigantic enterprises, he insists upon being known only under the term, "business man." He is a great great-grandson of Robert Treat Paine, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and his interest in public affairs follows closely the lines adopted and followed by his forebears. The Democratic party twice honored him by selecting him as its candidate for Governor. He went into the fray, conducting a campaign that is still recalled by the dignified bearing of the candidate. Even prior to that time he was known as the most courteous man in Boston—a past graduate of the school of politeness. He is very wealthy.

THE Rev. George L. Perin is not only a clergyman and philanthropist, but he is also Prelate of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templars of Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Furthermore, he looks every inch a knight when marching in the regalia of that body.

Young women of Boston, who came here from cities and towns in other parts of the country, look upon him as their particular friend and benefactor. It was due to his efforts that the Franklin Square House for girls was founded, and he still directs its affairs as its president. There, the girl who earns her own living, may find herself surrounded with the influences that her own mother would choose for her daughter. Here, too, are located the cheery, tastefully arranged "courting parlors," famous the country over. The "best fellow in the world" thus finds himself welcome in "Franklin Square." Besides all these activities he finds time to preach excellent sermons at the Beacon Universalist Church, Brookline.

GUY MURCHIE is our pleasant visaged United States marshal and a former Rough Rider. He knows Theodore so intimately that he might address him as "Teddy" if he wished and not come in for a rebuke. At San Juan Hill, this highly thought of Bostonian won the plaudits of all save the enemy. The latter were too much out of breath from exertions due to running before his gallant steed's progress to hail him with acclaim. Mr. Roosevelt, then Lieutenant-Colonel of the regiment, but now the whole show as a matter of fact from the moving picture standpoint, Colonel only-in-name Wood out of the way long enough to intimate that Trooper Murchie had showed magnificent courage and that he would hear of something to his advantage later on. President Roosevelt, some few years afterwards, came on to Boston and had one of the merriest, bang up times of his life. This was when he picked Guy Murchie's little son up in his arms and became the child's godfather.

HERE'S HOW TO STOP GRAFT

Striking Scene from The "Fourth Estate"

HERE is the gripping sensation scene of that powerful newspaper play, "The Fourth Estate," which opens at the Shubert Theatre to-morrow night. It exudes romance and graft, cuts to the heart of things in a great city and is the joint work of Joseph Medill Patterson and Harriet Ford. The extracts given here have been taken direct from the manuscript of the piece by special permission of Liebler & Co.

* * * * * *

THE play opens with McHenry, the managing editor of "The Advance," and Moore, his night editor, discussing various office affairs. They speak of the stir caused through publication in the paper of an article attacking Judge Bartelmy for throwing the Lansing Iron Company into a receivership—a payable piece of graft. Dupuy, agent of the interests, threatens the Advance with loss of advertising and secures the discharge of Brand, the reporter who wrote the story. Nolan, the new owner of the paper, who is his days of penury was thrust into jail by the judge for leading a strike, reinstates Brand, making him managing editor in place of McHenry. Then Judith breaks her engagement with Brand on account of his attitude toward her father. Nolan finally decides to call things off, Judge Bartelmy diplomatically adding the publisher's wife to act in society. He agrees, however, to let Brand go on with his attacks if the latter can get the Judge with the goods." The managing editor shadows Judge Bartelmy, learns that he has been bought and accuses him. The Judge offers him $10,000 to stop the contemplated expose, but falls into a trap set for him by Brand, and is photographed in the act of passing over the money. The opening of the fourth act finds the Advance almost ready to go to press, with story and photograph. The finale follows.

Act 4, Scene 1.—The Composing Room of "The Advance."

(Enter Judith to office, followed by Durkin.)

DURKIN
I think Mr. Brand is busy, Miss

JUDITH
(Seeing him through glass partition.) There he is! (Leaves her cloak and hurries on to composing room.)

DURKIN
(Following.) You can't go in there, Miss.

M'HENRY
That's justified. There—your first page, Brand, and it means Bartelmy to Sing Sing.

JUDITH.
Wheeler! (Rushes down to form where McHenry and Brand stand.)

BRAND
Good God, Judith!

JUDITH
Wheeler, your not going to use that picture!

BRAND
Boys, take the form away.

JUDITH
No! No! Don't spoil it—wait—wait! (Throws herself on form.)

BRAND
Judith—please—

JUDITH
No—no—no—you—you—not this—it! They can't have it!

BRAND
Go to your desk, Judith.

JUDITH
Wheeler—for me—

BRAND
I don't care. Go back! You—you stay here, Judith—alone.

JUDITH
Listen to me, Wheeler. I know every thing. He has told me everything. You understand what it means to me. You must spare him for me.

BRAND
That is impossible, Judith.

JUDITH
But it is the human thing to do. Oh forget these ideals—be just a man—a man who loves a woman and protects her. You do love me, I know, in spite of everything you have done.

BRAND.
Yes, I love you.

JUDITH:
And Wheeler, I've not changed. I can see how right you mean to be in what you are trying to do, but in this you are wrong. Whatever my father may have done, his intentions were honest. He had been involved by others, and are! I hate you—beyond everything when he tried to extricate himself it I hate you!

BRAND
(with top!

JUDITH
Yes, I'll stop—I'll stop—I can't move you—I can't find words any more! (Her voice breaking.) And I've failed! I've failed! (Sinks into chair and buries head in hands.)

(Enter Nolan, Mrs. Nolan and Sylvester.)

NOLAN
Wheeler, I'm afraid I've got a big disappointment for you. I've been thinking this matter over pretty seriously and I've come to the conclusion that we've made a mistake—a mistake in judgment. I'm sorry—but—

DUPUY.
(Entering hurriedly.) Mr. Nolan, we haven't a moment to spare. They go to press in five minutes.

NOLAN.
Don't you think we had better forget this?

BRAND
No, sir.

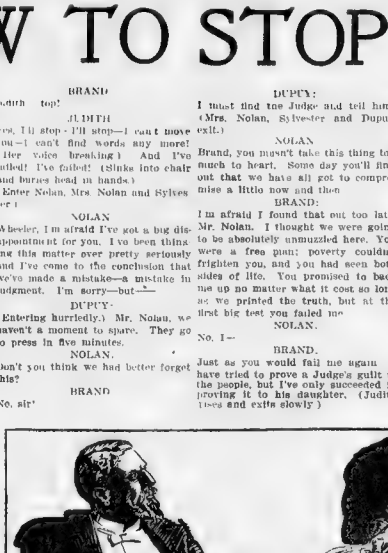
DUPUY:
I must find the Judge and tell him. (Mrs. Nolan, Sylvester and Dupuy exit.)

NOLAN
Brand, you mustn't take this thing too much to heart. Some day you'll find out that we have all got to compromise a little now and then.

BRAND:
I'm afraid I found that out too late, Mr. Nolan. I thought we were going to be absolutely unmuzzled here. You were a free man; poverty couldn't frighten you, and you had seen both sides of life. You promised to back me up no matter what it cost so long as we printed the truth, but at the first big test you failed me.

NOLAN.
No, I—

BRAND.
Just as you would fail me again. I have tried to prove a Judge's guilt to the people, but I've only succeeded in proving it to his daughter. (Judith rises and exits slowly.)



The Judge passing out the bribe and unconsciously being photographed in the act of doing so.

MRS. NOLAN.
Now, Michael, are you going to stand this? Mr. Brand acts as if he owned the Advance, and treats you as if you were the office boy!

NOLAN.
Come, come, mother.

MRS. NOLAN.
He thinks he's a great reformer and knows it all. Other people have a right to their opinions, and I don't see why you and your family should be made to suffer on account of him, as we've had to ever since you took him up!

NOLAN:
We won't run it, Wheeler.

BRAND:
Is that an order?

NOLAN:
Yes, kill it. (Judith raises head.)

NOLAN:
I know this thing has hit you pretty hard, but in time you'll see that what I have done is best for all of us. I'm sure of it. Oh, I want you to come up to the house to-morrow afternoon. I'm going to show you what I think of you.

BRAND.
You're going to raise my salary?

NOLAN:
Well, yes——

BRAND.
You're going to pay me to suppress the truth and print lies?

NOLAN:
Oh, come now, perhaps things will look brighter to you to-morrow. (Exits. McHenry enters and goes to make-up table.)

THOSE IN THE SCENE.

Wheeler Brand, a young newspaper man ..... Charles Waldron
Donald Bartelmy, judge of a U. S. Court ..... Dodson Mitchell
Edward Dupuy, a newspaper lobbyist ..... Clarence Heritage
Michael Nolan, proprietor of "The Advance" ..... George Thompson
Mrs. Nolan, wife of the publisher ..... Harriet Ross
Sylvester Nolan, their son ..... Tom Hadaway
Ross McHenry, managing editor of "The Advance," afterwards night editor ..... Joseph Woodburn
Judith Bartelmy, Judge Bartelmy's daughter ..... Selene Johnson
Durkin, office boy ..... Charles Kilby

BRAND:
I'm still managing editor

M'HENRY:
You don't mean you're going to run that story, Brand?

BRAND:
I'm going to run this story.

M'HENRY:
Do you know the risk you're running?

BRAND:
Yes, I know—good night.

M'HENRY:
Brand, you're either a fool or a big man. By God, I can't tell which. (Exits.)

(Enter Judge Bartelmy.)

JUDGE:
I thought Mr. Nolan was her

BRAND
He was.

JUDGE:
Then he has given you directions about that article?

BRAND.
Yes.

JUDGE:
Then you understand it is not to appear.

BRAND:
I understand that it is to appear.

JUDGE:
Do you intend to disobey orders?

BRAND.
That story goes to press.

JUDGE:
Do you know what this means?

BRAND:
Yes, this leads to the exposure of your whole record, Judge Bartelmy, and you can't face it.

JUDGE:
No, I can't face it. If you print that article you will drive me out of the country, but you will ostracise yourself from your profession, once let it be known that you deliberately disobeyed orders and you will never hold a responsible position on a newspaper again.

BRAND:
I've counted the cost and am willing to pay.

JUDGE:
But, Brand, hundreds and thousands of men have done worse than I have. Why should the lightning strike me?

BRAND:
I've been working ten years for just even children could see what the big thieves are doing.

M'HENRY:
It's tough, old man, it's tough!

BRAND.
(After deep thought.) Mac, you go home. I'll run the shop the rest of the night.

M'HENRY
What—

BRAND
I said: "Go home."

M'HENRY
Yes, but—

BRAND
(Leaning over form.) Mac, we're not going to run it.

M'HENRY:
What! We're not?

BRAND.
No.

M'HENRY.
Why—what's happened?

BRAND
Orders from Nolan.

M'HENRY
The old story, eh?

BRAND
Yes.

M'HENRY
What'll we do?

BRAND.
(Still over form.) This is such a fine thing, I don't see how I can kill it.

M'HENRY.
Gee—that's a good picture! That's the best front page ever made up in America!

BRAND:
I wish to God it had been anyone but you. You committed the one unpardonable crime of your office—you sold your decision.

JUDGE:
What of it? In my opinion my decisions were for the public good.

BRAND:
But why put a price on them?

JUDGE:
If the parties concerned were willing to pay, why shouldn't I make the most of my opportunity? No, Mr. Brand, you evidently don't understand that nearly all the important enterprises in the country have been built up by men who made their own laws. These petty moralities are only for the herd. I tell you America is great because of what you call graft.

BRAND:
I'd like to get a signed statement from you to that effect. You line your pockets at the expense of thousands of poor people and at the same time you salve your conscience with the idea that you are illegally doing good. Judge Bartelmy, the power of men like you must be destroyed. This nation moves slowly to correct her evils, but she does move as surely as death.

(Judith stands listening back of form.)

JUDGE:
Have you forgotten my daughter? Do you realize what suffering this will cause her?

BRAND:
I've seen her for the last time.

JUDGE:
That rests with you. It's not too late I can forget this and I promise that she can, but if you drive me off the bench and out of the country, if you put upon me this terrible humiliation, this lasting disgrace, by God, I'll build a barrier—(enter men)—between you and Judith that you will never be able to surmount. Spare me and I will place this woman that you love in your arms.

BRAND:
Boys, here's your first page. Railroad it. (Men take form up to steam table.)

JUDGE:
(Seeing his daughter.) Judith, in spite of everything he's sending that story to press. But I'll see Nolan. I'll have him stop the issue.

BRAND:
You'll be too late. It will be on the street in twelve minutes.

JUDGE:
Come, Judith—we've no time to lose. (He turns to find her hesitating between them.)

JUDITH:
No, I'm going to stay here.

JUDGE:
What?

JUDITH:
Now I know the truth.

JUDGE:
Brand, in a few years this will have blown over. The mob has a short memory for injuries and even shorter memory for benefits. After a time I shall come back—to a secure position of unofficial power. And you, after your beloved people have wearied of you, will drop back into the obscurity of a hopeless, futile agitator.

BRAND:
I'll take my chance.

JUDGE:
Judith, you're giving yourself to a dreamer.

JUDITH:
Dreamers, my father, are the people who move the world. (Judge exits.)

BRAND:
You understand, Judith—I am an outcast from my profession now.

JUDITH:
(Brokenly.) What will you do, Wheeler?

BRAND:
There's a man's work somewhere for me in the world. Perhaps it is only to stand on a soap box on a street corner.

JUDITH:
(Holding out her hands to him.) Perhaps it will be in Congress.

BRAND:
(Lifting his head with a rapt look.) Or on the barricades. (They embrace.)

CURTAIN.

SOME FUNNYISMS

"SOMEONE called me a 'bum' the other day. I looked the word up in the dictionary and found that it means a 'tramp'. then I found that 'tramp' means 'traveler.' Now, I understand what Roosevelt meant when he called Taft a good traveler."

"I UNDERSTAND that Police Commissioner O'Meara is going to put a few colored men on the police force.

"That's the most absurd thing I ever heard of.'

"Why?"

"Because it's hard enough to find a white one these nights."

THE International Custom Cutters have ultimated the ultimate. They have decreed that corset coats and skin tight trousers will be de rigeur for men for the coming year.

According to their designs, the fashionably dressed man will look like an S and feel like an ass.

These corset coats will be worn very full. In fact, the fuller you are the more likely you will be to wear one. The corset coats will have a small split in the back, but the trousers will be worn without a split, unless you try to sit down in them.

THE people of Phoenix, Ariz., are going to give Colonel Roosevelt an ostrich dinner. Most appropriate.

The ostrich's habit of, when pursued, hiding its head in the sand, might be an excellent example for the Colonel. With his head in the sand his greatest danger would be removed. He couldn't talk.

I CAME home on the Boston & Maine funny line.'

Santa Claus gave them the cold eye.

I'VE written a beautiful poem. It goes like this

"It's not the coffin that carries you on
It's the coffin they carry you off in.'

I DREAMED last night that my mother-in-law died.

This morning I told my wife about it, and she said

'Yes, I heard you laughing in your sleep.'

I WENT to a circus one day and the tent was so crowded that I had to stand during the whole performance. Still I could see everything from where I stood, just as well as if I had been right inside the tent.

"WELL, how old is your wife, may I ask?"

"She's forty, Nat.'

'Why don't you take her to Salt Lake City and get two twenties for her.'

"WHERE was the first telephone?"

"In the Garden of Eden."

"Well, what was the first telephone number?"

"Two—eight—one—Apple.'

THE only time I ever knew father to be really angry was the day Barnum's circus was in town. One of the girls in the ladies' dressing room stuck her finger through a little hole in the tent, and it happened to hit father in the eye.

"I SEE BY THE PAPERS"——By Aaron Hoffman

(All Stage Rights Reserved by Mr. Hoffman.)

I SEE by the papers here the latest society wrinkle is a progressive dinner party. The guests eat one course in each house and proceed to the next course in automobiles. Thus a progressive dinner party can stretch over a hundred miles. Just think of serving a dinner with the oysters ten miles away from the soup. The Boston Set declare that this method of going from house to house for a dinner is delightfully novel. It may be delightful, but it isn't new. Tramps have been doing that way for many years, only they have been doing it on foot. Of course, it is evident that such a progressive dinner by automobiles has its dangers. Imagine getting a puncture halfway between the entree and the roast. And suppose that you had finished the roast and when on the way to complete the dinner you were arrested for speeding and sent to jail and then had to wait thirty days for your dessert.

IN bitterly opposing the reciprocity treaty between Canada and the United States, England is committing another blunder and further justifying the name of John "Bull."

What England is afraid of is that free trade between the two countries will eventually result in annexation of Canada by the United States. And it wouldn't be a bad idea for Canada and the United States to be one country.

The way things are between us now, conditions are far from satisfactory. It's pretty tough on the United States to have the most beautiful falls in the world and to be compelled to go to a foreign country and pay toll to get a good look at them.

THE Harriman roads have appropriated seventy-five million dollars for double tracking the country. We suppose they also made the usual appropriation for double crossing.

BY actual count last night, a subway car was found to contain fifty seats, seventy-two straps, two hundred and eighteen people and a conductor who was shouting "Plenty of room in the centre of the car."

SOME wedding, that Gould-Decker affair. Quite the classiest thing we've had in Nuptials de Luxe in some time.

It required the services of three ministers, a hundred plain clothesmen, half the Street Cleaning Department, and the whole police force of New York to make them one. It's a wonder they didn't call out the militia also.

It must be great to have a wedding like that.

How soothing it must be to the tumultuous hearts of the enraptured couple to have a wedding that is not out of the ordinary. What is considered necessary to have a wedding a success. Luckily the poor people and lassies can get the same sort of a successful wedding by waiting until 6 o'clock at night and getting married in the [illegible] Washington street at the same hour, also an excellent place for a wedding as that description. THE EASIEST JOB Sleeping Demonstrator of New Mattresses Electing a Senator in Massachusetts THE HARDEST JOB

By SNITZ MOORE AND ZELLA DE MAR

(Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

ONE would think that actors playing burlesque parts twelve or fourteen times a week would get enough of joking on the stage, and would feel inclined to be more or less serious when away from the theatre. Not so with Snitz Moore and Zella De Mar, who are with Robie's Knickerbockers, soon to come to Boston. Here is some of their fun on the side:

ZELLA DE MAR—I saw you over in Lynn the other day looking at a burlesque show.

SNITZ MOORE—Yes, I had a day off and went to the theatre.

ZELLA—That's funny. An actor gets a holiday and goes to a show!

SNITZ—Just like the motorman who had nothing to do, so he took a trolley ride.

ZELLA—Yes, and every time a comedian finds an hour hanging on his hands he starts in to pull a lot of jokes.

SNITZ—But what I want to know is, what is the difference between a comedian and a joke?

ZELLA—And why do you ask a foolish question like that?

SNITZ—Well, the other day I went on the stage and told a lot of jokes. Nobody laughed. When I came off the manager walked up to me and said: "Snitz, you are not a comedian—you're a joke."

ZELLA—Ah, the manager is something of a comedian himself, eh?

SNITZ—No, the manager is the joke, because he is paying my salary for being a comedian.

ZELLA—After all, what is a comedian?

SNITZ—A comedian is a man who comes out on the stage and says something that the author thinks that the manager thinks that the public thinks is funny.

ZELLA—Well, suppose the audience does not think it's funny!

SNITZ—Then the manager blames the author and the author blames the comedian, and the comedian blames the audience.

ZELLA—That's very true. But the hardest audience I ever had to please was in the deaf and dumb asylum when I sang a solo.

SNITZ—You must have had about as hard a time as when I did my famous pantomime act in the Institute for the Blind.

ZELLA—Do you remember the time we did a turn for the boys in prison?

SNITZ—Indeed I do.

ZELLA—You got mad because nobody laughed.

SNITZ—Yes, and what did I say?

ZELLA—You spoke right up and said: "Well, if you fellows don't like this show you don't have to stay."

SNITZ—That's right, and one fellow answered right back: "I've got to stay—I'm here for life."

ZELLA—Yes, I remember that poor fellow. He stole a loaf of bread to keep his family from starving and they sent him to prison.

SNITZ—That's the way they do things. Had he stolen a million from a savings bank they would have sent him to Europe.

ZELLA—It was pretty sad to see those poor boys up in prison. Just after we got through our act the minister came in and started to preach.

SNITZ—Yes, and do you remember the hymn he sang?

ZELLA—I remember it well—it was one of those old-fashioned hymns that go right to the heart. (Sings) We are going home to-morrow—we are going home to-morrow.

SNITZ—Yes, and most of those poor fellows won't be going home for ten years.

ZELLA—But, tell me, if you were a judge, and they brought a man before you for beating his wife, what sentence would you give him?

SNITZ—I wouldn't give him a sentence at all. I'd give him a pension—I'm married myself.

ZELLA—Suppose a man applied to you for a divorce. He comes to you and tells you that his wife is in the habit of meeting other men on the street corners and staying out all night. What would you say to that?

SNITZ—Well, I'd consider that perhaps that was the only fault the poor woman had.

ZELLA—Let me ask you one more question. Let us suppose that you are the Mayor of this great city. The taxpayers come to you and say that the city treasurer had lost thousands of dollars belonging to the public by depositing the money in phony banks—what would you do?

SNITZ—I'd consider that was a pretty expensive phoney.

ZELLA—Talking about politics, what do you think of the new law that makes it a crime for a man to sleep in the park?

SNITZ—Why, I never heard of such a law!

ZELLA—Sure there is such a law. Isn't it a crime to cheat a hotel out of the price of a room?

ZELLA—By the way, how is that "peach" I saw you out walking with the other day?

SNITZ—That wasn't any "peach," that was my wife.

ZELLA—Somebody told me that your wife was a somnambulist.

SNITZ—Nothing of the kind. She's a Presbyterian.

ZELLA—You were speaking of your father last night. What did he do before he died?

SNITZ—He spent his last hours dancing at the top of a lamp post.

ZELLA—What a queer position! Did he hold it long?

SNITZ—Oh, he hung around there some time.

ZELLA—And how did your father get in such a strange position?

SNITZ—Oh, he had some friends, and they all helped a little. You see a man goes up quite fast when he has a crowd back of him and they all give him a boost.

ZELLA—I suppose the lodge took charge of your father's funeral?

SNITZ—No, my mother wouldn't let them for it.

ZELLA—Why not?

SNITZ—Well, you know she's a great crank on temperance and she got sore because the president of the lodge said that before the services he'd like to have the members pass around the hat.

ZELLA—Tell me, Snitz, what do you think is the easiest position in the world?

SNITZ—Being a demonstrator of a new mattress. All you have to do is sleep and show the people how well the mattress works.

ZELLA—And what is the hardest job in the world?

SNITZ—Electing a United States Senator from Massachusetts—especially after the election is over.

ZELLA—Suppose the people of this great State were to elect you Senator, what would you do?

SNITZ—Go to sleep for six years like the rest of them.

ZELLA—Did you ever hear of a gimlet boring a (w)hole family to death?

SNITZ—No, but the other day I saw a [illegible] coming a lot of chickens.

ZELLA—That must be a pretty poor [illegible] that make [illegible] think of a riddle. Can Napoleon?

SNITZ—Can Napoleon? I don't know, can he?

ZELLA—Of course! But to be serious, how did you ever come to get married, Snitz?

SNITZ—My wife poisoned me.

ZELLA—Your wife poisoned you? Why, how ridiculous.

SNITZ—Sure, she gave me a love poison.

ZELLA—Oh! you mean a love potion.

SNITZ—That's it—a love potion. Every time you drink it it makes you love. An old lady gave it to my wife and my wife gave me some to drink. I fell in love with her right away. It is wonderful stuff. She still keeps some of it around the house, so that every time I get mad she just gives me some and I immediately get glad again and love her just like at first.

ZELLA—That must be a wonderful potion to make anybody fall in love [illegible] away.

SNITZ—Oh, yes, and it always works, you bet.

ZELLA—I would like to see that remarkable potion.

SNITZ—But I can't find it. You see, my wife went away to the country about a week ago. I had some friends up to the house and I told them about this remarkable love potion. They said: "Let us see it!" So I went upstairs to look for it. I looked for about two hours, but couldn't find it any place. At last one of the boys called up to me. "Snitz," he said, "I guess your wife has taken that potion to the country with her!" I never was so mad in all my life.

I

What is the matter with the ornate and pretentious New Theatre on Central Park West? Why is it that from the first it has failed to interest the people of whom it was supposed to be primarily created? Why is it that the people who were supposed to be attracted to it, and to support it, have remained away in droves, and wantonly withheld their patronage? It is too late. The New Theatre, a Millionaires' Playhouse, has been heralded throughout the land and has been exploited in this country that has come to mean a meaning—a meaning that is not complimentary, against the drama in general. The unstairs of the New Theatre seemed to teach a lesson of the dangers of being "among those present" when socially opulent—had all the elements of a function. The PEOPLE to whom it nominally belonged, read with bated breath of gold and diamonds, and general millionairishness. Many paid out their money to see it all, as a curio, and perhaps one view was enough.

To be jostled in the foyer by the loungers of the "upper circle", to be swept aside by the trains of Lady Clara Vere de Vere and her like, to sit above or amid all the names that one sees on the society columns of the daily papers all this had a certain fascination. But the novelty was old, faded, dead in a week. It was the Metropolitan Opera House idea without the Metropolitan Opera House solid foundation of money and monopoly. The Metropolitan House, like Standard Oil, is a great institution. You can go or you can stay away, but you can't get grand opera anywhere else. And the New Theatre stood on a different basis.

There are about three other legitimate theatres in New York City. And, as though that were not enough, there is a long list of vaudeville houses. Lower down in the scale there are the moving picture shows. On the whole, in New York, it is cheaper to live than it is also nearly as easy as to live with. Conceivably, one might get along without eggs; the idea of a drama-less metropolis is inconceivable.

In the thirty-five legitimate theatres every style of drama may be sampled—even the classic. That managers are mercenary was [illegible] community of "leisure [illegible] afford to do without [illegible]

[illegible] very hard-headed and brain-[illegible] in that regard there are, of course, notable long-haired and far-away [illegible] people quite willing to patronize in poetic style. But [illegible] are not the people [illegible] Some of them are, of course, but the great majority spots genuine [illegible] as it is to be spotted [illegible] the [illegible] theatres, not [illegible] are played for [illegible] kind of a play running for [illegible] don't turn up your nose and sniff [illegible] Such a play, it is absolutely [illegible] sensational in its [illegible]

The New Theatre went ahead blindly [illegible] certain conviction seemed to be in popularity. "Give the people what they want and then they'll want it," seemed to be the motto. That might have been, too, had it not been for the trifling [illegible] of thirty-five legitimate theatres [illegible] the New Theatre, like the Metropolitan Opera House, owned the people, they [illegible] it would have been packed to its [illegible] doors every night. But it didn't.

[illegible] the patrons of the Central Park West house—to its subscribers, I mean—it mattered little what was produced. They [illegible] admire the exquisite lobbies [illegible] Vere de Vere, they sat in the "[illegible] boxes, smoked their unique and [illegible] cigarettes, and they were the makers of dead faces. For the drama itself [illegible] as such, and to appreciate [illegible] one did not differentiate [illegible] Maeterlinck, and Pinero was in the same class as Shakespeare.

[illegible] and through a box or [illegible] "Le Nozze" [illegible] coldly and unemotionally. "Parsifal" conveyed no more to them than "The School for Scandal." How do I know? I have mingled with them in the lobbies and listened to their vapid chatter. At the big educational theatres abroad it is very different. There you may listen to arguments and criticism. There you may indulge in enlightenment and gain appreciation. [illegible] you may savor the joys of the pro and the con. There you may meet Tom, Dick and Harry, unabashed by diamond necklaces. There you may feel that you are at home; there you may indulge in the pleasure of intimacy.

Of course, the New Theatre was up against a hard proposition. It adopted the footing of the Metropolitan Opera House, forgetting that the drama is not opera. Most of its mistakes were sad, and some of them seemed wilful and voluntary. It paid out hundreds of thousands of dollars for decoration, but it forgot—actors. Lately, its stock company has shown distinct signs of improvement. Constant work has done these actors a great deal of good. But it started wrong. It started with the snobbish notion that American actors were not good enough; it enlisted the services of others.

In this country, of course, it should be the American actor who was predominant in such an institution as the New Theatre. Any other policy is a frightful exposition of weakness. If the American actor is not good enough, then there could be no successful New Theatre. The speech of the average American actor is burred and indistinct. There is no doubt at all about that. What a benign chance for the New Theatre! Could there have been a more gorgeous opportunity? To unburr this speech, to clarify it, and to say, "Here! see what we millionaires have done with our little dollars for the American stage"—that would have been going some.

But—nothing of the sort. Frescoes and statues, hangings and pictures, all that silly people can buy with silly money, could be found in Central Park West. Actors with ready-made accents were hired like ready-made clothes. For the stage nothing was done. The American accent, of course, did occur in the New Theatre, but for the most part it was a Babel of accents, and there was no standard. Of course, there should have been a standard. Even a bad one would have been better than none at all. It was absolutely essential. The English, in its American purity, should have been the goal of the founders of the New Theatre, particularly as it was supposed to be educational, and not mercenary. This was the grave mistake that the New Theatre made—the mistake that will have to be rectified in any subsequent house.

Theatres are not needed in New York City. Actors are. There could be (there are) too many theatres; there could not be too many actors. Personally, I don't like schools of acting, because I do believe in emotional inspiration. But in an institution like the New Theatre some school is necessary, because there has got to be a standard of speech. The poor old English language has a hard time of it in this cosmopolitan centre. The mercenary theatre doesn't worry at all about that. It couldn't be expected to do so. But the New Theatre must and should worry about it. Velvet carpets are all very well, but a velvet speech is better. One can buy the former; one must acquire the latter.

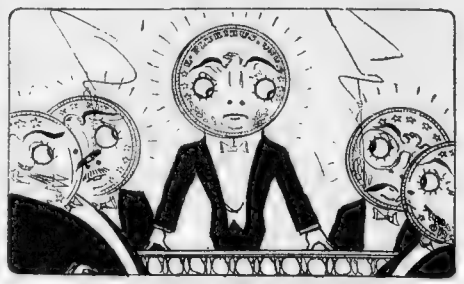
As a matter of fact, the PEOPLE had little to learn from the New Theatre that couldn't have been acquired more pleasantly elsewhere. The productions for the most part were indescribably dull and oppressive. The aim at times seemed to be high; at other times it seemed to be actually unintelligent. The productions of "The Blue Bird" and of "Sister Beatrice" were apparently actuated by lofty intentions. The latter production was the finest and most artistic that the New Theatre made. The former was less commendable than that I saw in London at a theatre which lacked the resources of the New York establishment. In most of the New Theatre's productions there were hitches and mistakes that seemed unpardonable. Things went wrong that in such an establishment should never have gone wrong.

The drama is something that cannot be monkeyed with. It either is, or it isn't, and all the gold and glitter in the world cannot make it, and often cannot even help it. The very best Shakespearean performance I ever saw occurred at West Point. It was "The Merchant of Venice," produced by the late Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry before the West Point cadets without a stitch of scenery. Nothing but curtains and signs were used. Yet the performance was exquisite in its sincerity. At the New Theatre, with its gorgeous trappings and its lavish detail, the note of sincerity was invariably missed. It was all artificial—just a symbol of the far-reaching effect of money. It showed the PEOPLE what money could buy—which is precisely what the people who lack money want to forget. Like monkey-dinners, and vegetable parties, and North Pole suppers—freaks of the super-wealthy—the New Theatre has made a certain appeal to a certain class. That it has realized its mistake since is certain.

The quality of its work has improved, the theatre itself is far more seemly than it was. But it is too late. A new idea must take the place of the old one, a new and a cautious idea, bearing in mind the fact that the people need relaxation, which can be made educational, but not relentlessly so. The size of the house had [illegible] to do with unsatisfactory results than is generally supposed. It would not be too large if the crowd materialized! It is too large when the crowd does not materialize.

The whole thing has been exceedingly instructive—it has been an expensive lesson. But millionaires can't make drama. They can do a good deal, but drama, which is vital and real, an offshoot of life, is outside their ken. That they meant well is certain; that they reasoned ill is equally certain. The production of plays that mercenary managers don't want is futile and illogical, though it has a worthy sound. Sometimes mercenary managers make mistakes and "don't want" good things, but this is the exception and not the rule.

With the New Theatre it seemed to be the rule. Hence these tears.



"Gold and diamonds, and general millionaireishness."

The Grumblings of a Grouch.

By Berton Braley

THESE ginks that chirp and carol joyfully
Don't seem to make an awful hit with me.
For when I kick they say, "Ah, do not curse.
There's always some one else whose lot is worse."
Which same is true; yet, if MY molars ache
Do you suppose that it is going to make
The agony much less for me to know
That toothache is a very common woe?
Not on your life! MY troubles are my own,
And other people's worries don't atone
For what I have to suffer. Listen here.
It doesn't quench MY thirst when YOU drink beer.

SOMEDAY, when I am feeling very bold,
I'm going forth to dangers manifold
With fiery eye and stern unyielding lip;
And on that day I shall not give a tip.
The waiters and the hat boys—they're a pest—
The manicures and barbers and the rest,
The errand-boys, the messengers, the maid—
For once their fell demands shall not be paid.
For when I tip I feel that I somehow
Have put the brand of lackey on the brow
Of him who takes the largesse—yet I still Continue tipping—and I always will.

IT'S fun to knock the doctors and their craft,
We love to talk about their "little graft,"
And how the whole profession is a sell
Geo, how we roast the doctors—when we're well!
But when the fever parches up the throat
Or when the twinge of pain we come to note,
We humbly call the doctor to our side
And look upon him as beatified.
And when the bill comes in—the illness past—
The doctor laughs a laugh that is the last;
Which goes to prove—and this is always true—
That jokes depend upon the point of view.

"WHEN you and I behind the veil are passed Oh but the long, long while the world shall last."
So Omar sang, and thought he proved a lot
Showing that first we ARE and then ARE NOT.
Well, what of that? We're living here, just now
And for the time we're living, anyhow,
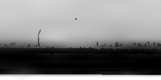
We're more important than the quiet dead
And all the unborn folks for years ahead.
This talk of people and how small they are
Has always given all my nerves a jar;
For you and I, though quite unknown to fame
Have got it on the dead ones, just the same.



THIS love is sure a puzzle; for it makes
Such foolish combinations and mistakes,
Yet somehow seems, when all is said and done
To run things in the way they should be run.
Love mates the eagle with the homing dove,
And one would say he'd made a bungle of
The proposition, but we watch and lo!
The crazy combination is a go.
And there you are; you can't explain a bit.
Love rules the world—not intellect or wit.
And when the despot fixes on your fate
You've got to take the count—and say it's great!

"SUDDENLY Neville saw Valerie West. Somebody had set her on a table amid the silver and flowers and splintered crystal. Her face was flushed, eyes and mouth brilliant, her gown almost torn from her left shoulder and fluttering around the lovely arm in wisps and rags of silk and lace. Querida supported her there. They pelted her with flowers and confetti, and she threw roses back at everybody. When she was in the act of hurling her last blossom she caught sight of Neville where he stood with Mazie on a chair, behind him, her arms resting on his shoulders. And the last rose dropped from her hand."—From "The Common Law," in the March Cosmopolitan.

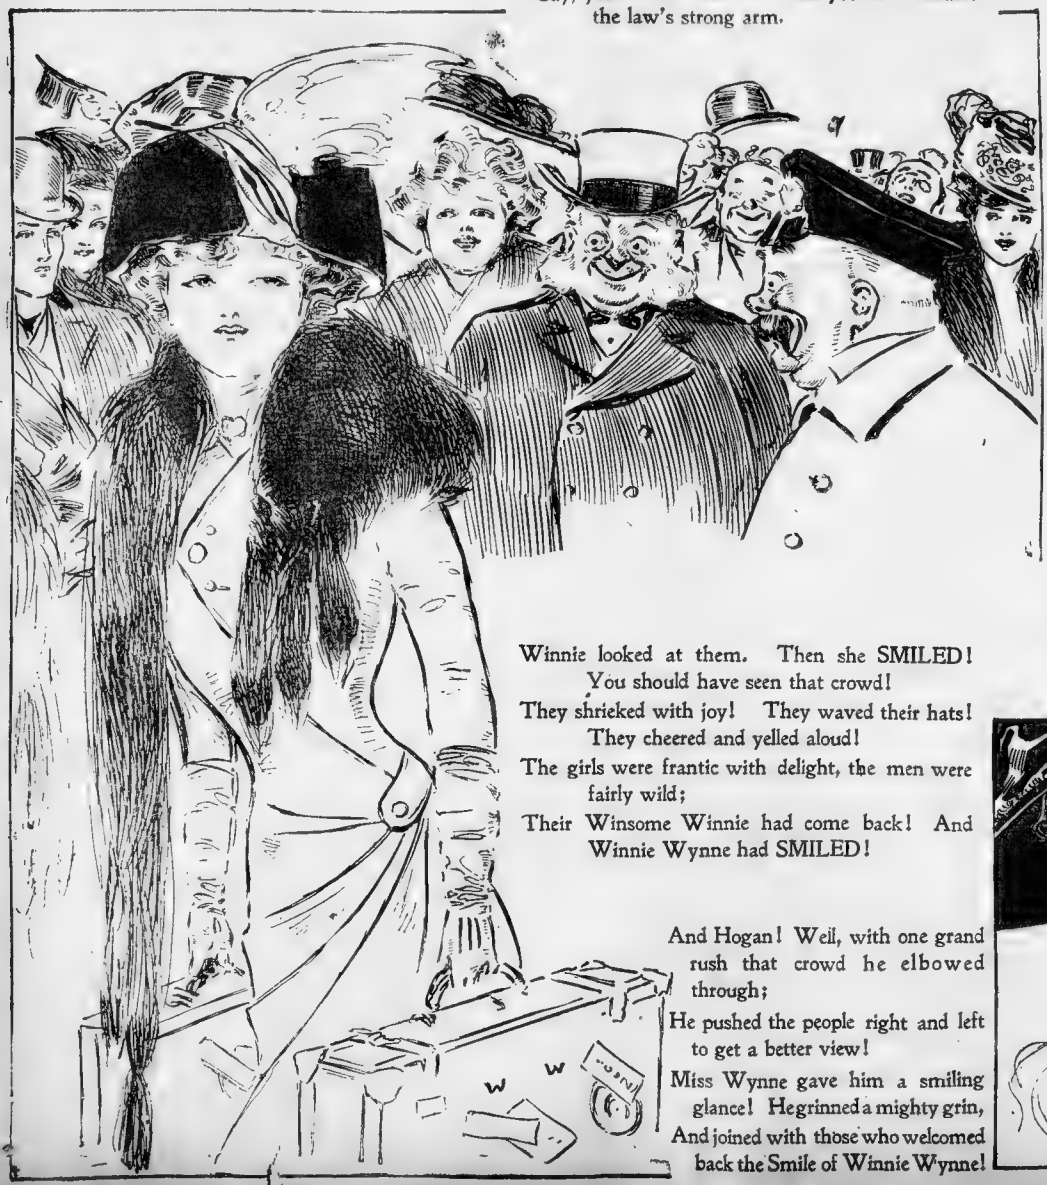
Officer Hogan, on his beat, swaggered with conscious pride;
One of the Finest, it was meet he should put on some side.
He saw a big crowd gathering; he sternly said, "Disperse!"
(Like General Pitcairn!) But the crowd kept growing worse and worse!

"What's all the trouble?" Hogan cried. "Look out, now! Don't get gay!
Here, quit your shovin'! Move on, you! Yer blockin' up the way!"
"Wait, officer!" a young man said. "We don't mean any harm."
"Say, you're too fresh! I'll run you in!" declared the law's strong arm.



"A friend of mine is coming home, the steamer's docking now!"
The young man cried. "If you bluff us we'll make an awful row!"
"Gwan!" shouted irate Hogan. That'll be 'bout all from you!
"I'll run you in, and then I'll run yer precious friend in, too!"

But these threats were unheeded; there arose a sudden din.
"See! There she is!" "Oh, welcome home, you darling, ducky, Win!"
"So glad you're back!" "We've missed you lots!" "A thousand greetings, dear!"
"How well you look!" "You've not grown stout!" "I am so glad you're here!"

Winnie looked at them. Then she SMILED! You should have seen that crowd!
They shrieked with joy! They waved their hats! They cheered and yelled aloud!
The girls were frantic with delight, the men were fairly wild;
Their Winsome Winnie had come back! And Winnie Wynne had SMILED!

And Hogan! Well, with one grand rush that crowd he elbowed through;
He pushed the people right and left to get a better view!
Miss Wynne gave him a smiling glance! He grinned a mighty grin,
And joined with those who welcomed back the Smile of Winnie Wynne!

WAS Queen Elizabeth, England's greatest ruler, a man?

Bram Stoker, the well-known English author, has collected a mass of interesting evidence and documents tending to show that she was. His discoveries are contained in a book entitled "Famous Impostors," published by Sturgis & Walton, New York.

Mr. Stoker was led to investigate this subject by hearing a confident tradition, which had existed and been generally accepted by the natives of Bis-y ever since the supposed Elizabeth lived among them. Bisley is a little isolated village among the Cotswold Hills, in the west of England, where Elizabeth lived during her youth. The house in which she lived, Overcourt Manor, is to-day preserved in virtually the same condition as when she lived in it. A little stone coffin still stands in the garden, in which it is said the real Princess Elizabeth was buried.

The tradition is that about the year 1540, when the real Princess Elizabeth was seven years old, she was taken ill with a fever and died. King Henry VIII., the terrible "bluff King Hal," was about to arrive on a visit. Nobody dared to cause him displeasure. Too often it meant the headman's axe for the offender. The Princess' governess, Mistress Ashley, decided to provide a substitute for the dead child. The only one she could find was a boy of the same age. The King paid a brief visit, and was satisfied.

As the changeling grew up he made every effort to keep up the deception which had been practised, for if he had been exposed he would have lost his head. He succeeded in becoming one of the greatest sovereigns of history. Mr. Stoker has examined nearly all the recorded facts of history and has found none that disprove the tradition and many that confirm it. The facts that tend to support the theory that Elizabeth was a man fall into three groups: 1. Her lifelong devotion to her governess, Mistress Ashley, and her "Cofferer," Sir Thomas Parry. 2. Her refusal to get married, despite the fact that the most brilliant men in Europe sought her hand. 3. Her well-known masculine characteristics.

Many historians have remarked that there appeared to be a secret between Queen Elizabeth and Mistress Ashley and Sir Thomas Parry. She remained faithful to them, and continued to heap benefits on them to the

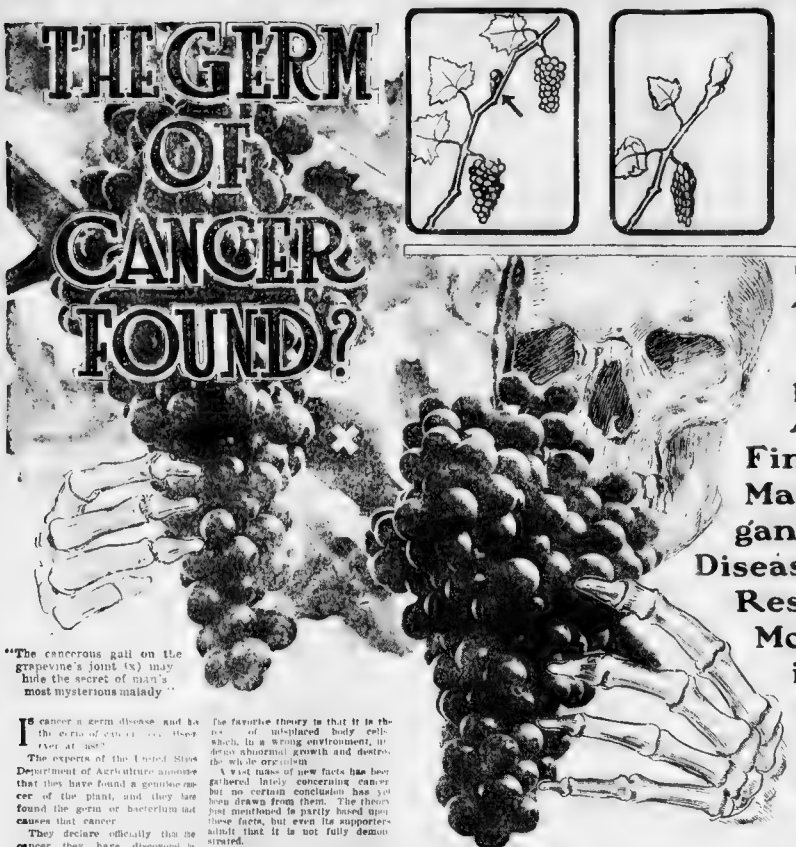
THE GERM OF CANCER FOUND?



"The cancerous gall on the grapevine's joint (x) may hide the secret of man's most mysterious malady."

Diagram Showing the Progressive Stages of Grapevine Destruction When It Is Attacked by "Crown Gall," or Plant Cancer

The United States Department of Agriculture Finds Living, Malignant Organisms Within Disease Growths That Resemble Man's Most Mysterious Malady and Attack Trees, Grapevines and Other Plants

The Same Gall, or "Cancer" in Its Advanced Stage, When the Living Organisms That May Be Real Cancer Germs Are Most Active

A Photograph by the Department of Agriculture Showing the Cancerous Form of Gall Growth at the Joint of a Grapevine

IS cancer a germ disease, and has the germ of cancer been discovered at last?

The experts of the United States Department of Agriculture announce that they have found a genuine cancer of the plant, and they have found the germ or bacterium that causes that cancer.

They declare officially that the cancer they have discovered in plants is very similar, perhaps identical, with that which afflicts human beings. In any case, it is declared to be a growth of exactly the same type.

Now, this is of vast importance to humanity. Cancer the greatest plague that afflicts humanity, is still an insoluble problem to science. Neither its nature nor its cure is understood. It is obvious that the first step toward a cure of disease is to understand its origin or cause in nature. When that is done, a way is cleared to prepare a remedy according to certain well-proved principles.

No one has been able to say just what causes human cancer. No one has been able to prove whether it is caused by a germ or not, although advanced medical investigators have been inclined to say that it is not.

The favorite theory is that it is the rest of misplaced body cells which, in a wrong environment, indulge abnormal growth and destroy the whole organism.

A vast mass of new facts has been gathered lately concerning cancer, but no certain conclusion has yet been drawn from them. The theory just mentioned is partly based upon these facts, but even its supporters admit that it is not fully demonstrated.

Medical science has been concentrated upon cancer because it is now recognized as the greatest menace to mankind. It is even feared that it may be the means of destroying all human life on earth. It is true that it is of present second to tuberculosis as a cause of death, but, nevertheless it is a greater menace.

Tuberculosis is on the decrease. Cancer is on the increase. We know how to cure tuberculosis. We do not know how to cure cancer. Men can eradicate consumption if they give the necessary time and money to the object. They cannot thus conquer cancer with their present knowledge, even if they should devote their whole efforts to it.

Research has established the regions of the human body in man and woman which are most subject to cancer. This is important, because it warns people where to expect the disease. Research has shown that cancer can be transplanted from man to animals and from one animal to another. It has shown that while cancer is not strictly hereditary, certain families are more subject to the disease than others. It has shown that practically all living animals are subject to the disease.

Most of the investigators have decided that cancer is not a germ disease, because, although they have found many germs in the tumors, they have not found one that is invariably present. The difficulty of finding the specific germ, by the way, is partly explained by the statement of the Government experts that the parasite they have found in plant cancer is present in very small quantities and very hard to isolate.

Another very recent discovery concerning cancer was that fish suffered from it to a remarkable extent. It was then suggested that the fish might be the source of all cancer in man.

At last the origin has been traced to the plant world, still further down in the scale of life.

Now the spectre of cancer seems to leer at us from the smiling cluster of grapes, from the modest daisy and from the ruddy tomato. But we must face this thought in order to conquer disease.

The discovery of the cancer germ in plants, it is expected, may lead to the isolation of the germ in human cancer. That will point the way to preparing a cure for the disease according to well-known principles. The remedy will probably take the form of a vaccine or an anti-toxin prepared from the germ.

The germ discovered by the Department of Agriculture is a bacterium and has been isolated from the daisy. It is the cause of a plant disease, known as "crown gall," which has long been recorded as very mysterious. The malady in question attacks many kinds of plants being conspicuously an enemy of grapevines. It forms tumors closely resembling those malignant growths which in human beings and lower animals are known as cancers.

It appears, in a word, that plant cancer—variously known as "crown gall," "black knot," "root tumor" and by various other names—corresponds in all important respects to cancer in men and animals. It is called "crown gall" because of the fact that it most commonly assails the crown, or top part, of the root, just where the plant begins to develop from the latter. Thus, for example, the crown of the common garden beet is especially liable to develop such an excrescence. The disease may, however, and often does, appear on the stems of the grapevine or other plant, some distance above ground.

Up to the present time no germ has been identified as accountable for cancer in human beings and animals. On this account many physiologists have been inclined to believe that there was no specific germ. But the unsatisfactory character of this argument is shown by the fact that up to the present time it might have been applied equally well to plant cancer. In truth, for many years scientific investigators have been making the utmost efforts to discover the microbe of "crown gall," though without success.

One remarkable thing about the disease is its readiness to assail plants of many different species and genera. In this point, however, it is not unlike the cancer of human beings, to which most other animals seem to be more or less liable, even including fishes. Many kinds of fruits and vegetables are attacked by the gall malady, which produces in all of them much the same symptoms.

There was plenty of material to work upon, but the germ so earnestly sought persistently eluded recognition and identification. It is now known that the reason why was simply that the responsible microbe is not at all abundant in the affected tissues, and is sometimes even rare. It is always hard to see, and apparently it multiplies only inside of the living cells, which are stimulated by its presence to divide with great rapidity. Such division signifies very rapid multiplication, resulting in an overgrowth of a morbid character—in other words, a tumor.

A tumor of this kind is of the same malignant character as a cancer in a human being. No cure for it has hitherto been known, and, accordingly, the principal recommendation made to grape-growers, for instance, has been that they plant vines of gall-resistant varieties; in other words, varieties which have shown themselves least liable to the disease. Among human beings there are some families which are exceptionally liable to cancer, the disease appearing in generation after generation, while other families are seemingly immune. With plants, it must be supposed, it is much the same way.

Now, investigation of this interesting subject went on for quite a number of years without any very definite results until, in 1907, Dr. Erwin F. Smith and Dr. C. O. Townsend, pathologists in the Department of Agriculture, gave notice of the discovery of a certain bacterium which had been conclusively proved to be responsible for tumors of a cancerous description on the roots of daisies. They had succeeded in isolating this germ, to which they gave the name of Bacterium tumefaciens.

Having once got hold of the organism they bred it on gelatin, thereby obtaining it in unlimited quantities for experimental purposes. They used it for inoculating healthy plants of many different kinds, such as tobacco, tomato, potato, sugar-beet, hop and peach, and in every instance they produced galls. In other words, cancers, at the point of inoculation. Successful inoculations of grape vines were likewise made.

Nothing could be easier. The process was exceedingly simple. All that was necessary was to make a small wound, introduce a trifling quantity of the disease "culture," and presently the growth started. In the same way, later on, tumors were produced on plants of carnation, raspberry, apricot and apple. All of them were much alike, and one conclusion definitely drawn from the experiments was that the malady which had given so much trouble to growers of fruits and vegetables was always the same complaint, no matter what kind of plant it assailed. It was simply plant cancer every time.

Was Queen Elizabeth a Man?

end of their lives in spite of serious charges against them.

"This conduct," says Miss Strickland, a high authority, "naturally induces a suspicion that secrets of great moment had been confided to him—weighty secrets that probably would have touched not only the maiden name of his royal mistress, but placed her life in jeopardy, and that he had preserved those inviolate. The same may be supposed with respect to Mrs. Ashley."

Elizabeth's rejection of the many proposals of marriage made to her seems very remarkable in one who took pleasure in the society of men and women, and was by no means an ascetic. This has always been a puzzle to historians. In a letter to Lord Admiral Seymour, Elizabeth says:

"I have not the slightest intention of being married, and if ever I should think of it—which I do not believe is possible"— etc.

Similar phrases occur again and again in her letters. Why should she have so often referred to the impossibility of being married?

If boundless ambition, unswerving determination and merciless severity to her enemies are masculine characteristics, then certainly Queen Elizabeth was masculine in a high degree. She sent her most favored suitor, the Earl of Essex, and her cousin and fellow sovereign, Mary Queen of Scots, to the headsman's block. It is true that on hearing that Queen Mary had actually been executed she displayed great emotion, and ordered the arrest of Sir William Davison, who had carried out her warrant, but there is every reason to believe this conduct was due to policy, like all her other acts. When we remember that on her mother's side Queen Elizabeth was only the granddaughter of a London merchant, while Queen Mary was allied to the greatest royal houses in Europe, we can appreciate Elizabeth's courage.

Again and again she boxed the ears of a courtier who displeased her. She intimidated the wisest and boldest of her counsellors, such as Lord Burleigh, by her loud voice and terrifying manner. When the greatest power in Europe—Spain—with many allies threatened her with annihilation, she put courage into her soldiers and sailors by ringing words and martial bearing. No emergency ever found her lacking in courage and resource. Even on her deathbed her spirit never forsook her.

"The constitution of her mind is exempt from female weakness, and she is endowed with a masculine power of application," wrote Roger Ascham, the great scholar of the day.

Could a woman have displayed all the qualities mentioned? Many persons will doubtless say that she could, but certainly these facts tend to support the view that "she" was a man.

How Rich Mrs Chauncey Found Her Ideal Man—

AND MARRIED HIM RIGHT AWAY!

Rapid Fire Ending of a Beautiful American's Love

Chase With Princes, Earls, Generals and Diplomats in the Discard and a Dashing English Army Officer the Winner.

Lady Newborough, Sister of Mrs. Chauncey, Who Is Now the Hon. Mrs. Cecil Bingham.

The Hon. Mrs. Cecil Bingham, Until Recently Mrs. Samuel Sloan Chauncey.

AT last the fascinating mystery is solved.

Why did not Mrs. Samuel Sloan Chauncey, for more than ten years the most adored American beauty and hostess of London and Paris, marry one of the score of noblemen of the highest rank, to say nothing of millionaires, who were constantly at her feet—including Lord Rosebery, Lord Kitchener and "Silent" James Henry Smith?

Answer: Because she was saving her unwon heart against the day when its mate should appear and offer itself.

Nobody ever suspected it. Nobody realized it—until a quiet, almost clandestine wedding in a mildewed little London church had transformed the rich and beautiful American widow into Mrs. General Cecil Bingham, late commander of the First Life Guards and a brother of the Earl of Lucan.

This was the middle-aged soldier with a young heart, and looks and manner so youthful that his intimates called him "Cis," who, out of a clear sky, came, loved, conquered and made her his own—a courtship as rapid-fire as one of his own rattling guns.

Probably no other American girl's life has been so filled with episodes so characteristic of romance in fiction. Less than twenty years ago the death of her father in Louisville, Ky., leaving to his wife and two daughters property amounting to only a few thousand dollars, made her future look dubious enough—for she was already a recognized Southern beauty—the "lovely Alice Carr, of Louisville," and had been bred and educated to expect the best the world affords.

The mother, however, proved equal to the emergency. It was her duty to arrange with as little delay as possible a fortunate marriage for her elder daughter, and she did not neglect it. Turning her little property into available cash and providing the lovely Alice with Paquin gowns and all the other accessories of high-bred beauty, she took her to Palm Beach and St. Augustine for the Winter.

As the practical mother had foreseen, Miss Alice was the beauty "catch of the season." She returned to Louisville the affianced bride of Samuel Sloan Chauncey, the Brooklyn millionaire, a man twice her own age, but who proved as devoted a husband as a girl ever won. His fine house on Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, became the home also of the young wife's mother and little sister.

In less than two years Mrs. Chauncey was a widow, immensely rich, with a little daughter named after her. She soon found herself acclaimed as the most beautiful of American widows, with suitors in numerable. These she escaped by going to Europe with her mother and daughter and "little sister" for an extended tour.

In Paris and London Mrs Chauncey's beauty, and her hospitality, soon won for her a social position equal to that of her American sisters who had become peeresses, Lord Newborough, of the English Court circle, fell in love with "little sister" and married her. The Carrs of Louisville, were soon permanently intrenched in the best European social circles.

Naturally, the London cables began to sing songs of Mrs. Chauncey's social triumphs in the American newspapers. Thus we learned how she had charmed King Edward with the "cake walk" and by singing old Southern plantation songs. And, presently, began the series of reports of her engagement to marry one or another of a score of Europe's most aristocratic and otherwise eligible bachelors—reports that persisted year after year right up to the announcement the other day of her very quiet marriage to the Hon. Cecil Bingham, with whom the slightest rumor had never connected her name.

The persistence and devotion with which these notables buzzed about the rich and beautiful widow, and the uselessness of that devotion—manifested in the exit of one after another of them—was amazing, making a mystery that grew deeper and deeper as the years passed by.

Nobody seemed to guess the truth—that Mrs. Chauncey's heart was still the same unwon heart that had been beat in the lovely bosom of the "lovely Alice Carr of Louisville," and would yield only to its destined mate.

Lord Rosebery, late Prime Minister and still England's chief political factor in the ranks of the nobles, grew so marked in his attentions that for several months the rest of the field of suitors for Mrs. Chauncey's hand and fortune despaired. Presently an unofficial announcement of their engagement was cabled to American newspapers. Everybody seemed to believe it was a match.

"Unofficial" denials made no difference. Lord Rosebery's devotion was too apparent. As for Mrs Chauncey, who would believe that she could resist such an opportunity? Nevertheless, Lord Rosebery at length made a rather brusque denial to his friends, and Mrs. Chauncey sent a concise denial of the report to the American press.

As nobody knew then that the beautiful widow's heart had to be considered in such a matter, it was believed that premature and superfluous publicity scared Lord Rosebery off.

In the field of noble suitors, Lord Dalmeny, Lord Rosebery's son and heir, "also ran," but without causing much alarm.

Prince Miguel de Braganza, son of the pretender to the Portuguese throne, and who was later to marry Miss Anita Stewart, was crazy about the charming widow, and she was so gracious to him that an engagement was freely discussed on both sides of the Atlantic.

A rather sensational quietus was put on this report. The Portuguese Pretender flew into a rage about it. No "royal mesalliance" in his family! Figuratively speaking, Prince Miguel—in spite of rather unroyal poverty in his family—was taken by the ear and led firmly out of the danger zone.

When General Kitchener came back from the wars to be covered with glory and to be made a lord, Mrs. Chauncey was fairly hurled at his head; though her friends were well aware of his dislike for society, and his horror of women in general, and pretty women in particular, they promoted the affair with enthusiasm. At first she pretended to be interested.

"You must not expect him to be very polite," said Mrs. Adair, who had helped to organize the social festivities in Kitchener's tent at the Durbar. "They say he hates pretty women."

"You make me quite anxious to have a peep at the monster," said Mrs. Chauncey.

They met, and the great soldier, finding that she had brains as well as beauty, was so docile in her frequent company that the eventual report of their engagement was not to be wondered at. Indeed, it was said that Kitchener was deeply in love. Once again, however, an engagement report had to be denied.

We now know that Mrs Chauncey's heart was still a wo[illegible]

If she really said, as reported, that she could [illegible]ing herself to the point of [illegible] his reputation as a man hater was [illegible] a graceful way of [illegible] down easy?

It is certain that Andrew Mcley, the millionaire London merchant and philanthropist would have been cold to verify the report that Mrs Chauncey had rewarded his long period of devotion. The same was said of James J. Van Alen, next to Wm. Waldorf Astor [illegible] most unpopular of Americans.

And because Mrs Chauncey sat in the royal box at Albert Hall with "Silent" James Henry Smith—who had paid a huge sum for the box in the name of a sweet charity [illegible] their engagement also had to be denied [illegible] his marriage to Mrs Hohenlander Stewart occurred not long afterward.

And others too numerous to mention.

At just what stage the triumphant Hon Cecil Bingham appeared on the scene is uncertain. Probably he had all along been slowly working his way into that unwon heart.

The news of the marriage after it had been accomplished, created quite a sensation, so unexpected it was. The happy couple had flown beyond the reach of inquisitive friends—to Italy on their honeymoon, which still shines upon them.

In April they will return to London and welcome their rather startled friends at General Bingham's house in Berkeley Square.

Men She Didn't Marry—and Why

LORD ROSEBERRY—Because Society and the newspapers of two continents were so sure it was "all settled."

LORD KITCHENER—Because it would have ruined his reputation as a "hater of pretty women."

PRINCE MIGUEL DE BRAGANZA—Because (partly) his father, Portugese Pretender, forbade the banns.

EARL OF GRANARD—Because her friend, Miss Beatrice Mills, had already won that prize.

HON. DONALD FORBES—Because it was only a "silly rumor."

LORD DALMENY—Like his father, Lord Roseberry, he merely "also ran."

JAMES J. VAN ALEN—Because (perhaps) he was too old, too arrogant and too un-American.

ANDREW MCRLEY—Probably because the London millionaire philanthropist could not win her love.

JAMES HENRY SMITH—It was only a rumor started when he engaged the royal box at Albert Hall and she was his guest.

AND—Other royalties, noblemen and commoners, entirely too numerous to mention.

Fashion's Spring Novelties.

The Enormous "Snuffer Caps," the Three-Decker Skirts, the All-Bead Gowns, the Extreme Sailor Collar

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, illustrating it with sketches and photographs of her own original models.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at No. 17 West Thirty-sixth street, New York City.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

KNOWING the American liking for novelties, I will talk to you first to-day of the new three-decker skirt. The skirt is one of the devices for novelty this Spring, being formed of three straight, scant flounces of cloth, set one above the other, the first attached to a wide band of stitching or embroidery in the same color as the cloth, below the waist. The straight plain flounces are of equal length, and with a band of stitching or embroidery attached to the belt, form the entire walking skirt. All are made upon a drop skirt of taffeta or messaline.

With this is worn a candidly short jacket. There is no quarter-length compromise with the longer coat. It is a short jacket cut away into points at the front and sloping upward in the back from these points. The short jacket graduated to a greater length in front is a keynote of the new Spring costumes.

A third novelty shown in the gray broadcloth costume reproduced on this page is the pair of huge revers, of white cloth thrown into relief by the wider, supporting revers beneath, of black and white striped silk. The jacket hangs in a straight line in front and is half-fitting in the back. One row of buttons on either side a row of loops meshed braid, like that to which the upper flounce of the three-decker skirt is attached, finish the front.

In the same picture appears a fourth novelty, showing that the young woman here pictured is wearing the latest mode. It is a tall coal scuttle hat, so called because it is of the shape of an inverted coal scuttle. As though by an afterthought, the gray straw of which the hat is made is plaited over on the right side in a large fold. A flat velvet bow of the new purplish shade of red ornaments the right side. A high willow plume of the new popular shade of red tops the hat, as does the plume of a Knight of Pythias in parade.

The Spring instead of banishing the metallic effects of the Winter costume will strike a deeper note in that material. The odd, cuirass-like gown on this page is one of the Spring models for a dinner or theatre gown. It is made entirely of gold beads. It is cut in a modified Empire style, the waistline being indicated by a slight curving inward of the line of the gown. The sleeves, reaching to just above the elbow, open to reveal the whiteness of the wearer's arm, the space being covered only in part by narrow beaded cords.

The gown is made over a black slip. A handsome embroidered panel of white beads in conventional design, edged with an inch-wide band of black velvet, extends from the shoulders at the back to nearly the hem of the tunic, and is finished by black bead fringe. The band is extended on the right to the under arm seam. The skirt and short sleeves are finished by a band of black velvet corresponding to that which completes the panel. Tufted fringe of gold beads finishes the half décolletage. The effect has an Oriental magnificence.

Let me digress here while treating of the beauty of these metallic effects to tell of some curious rings I have seen worn by Russian women who borrow their ideas of personal decoration from their barbaric ancestors, but have softened and subdued it by their own exquisitely individual taste. One of these curiosities is the double ring. There are two sorts of double rings. One sort is worn on two fingers, a delicate hoop of gold connecting the two parts of the ring. The other is worn on one finger, but the parts are separated by the space of the knuckle and the length of the first joint of the finger. The rings are of different sorts, the lower one being of solid gold with one small diamond surmounting each of the triple parts. The upper one is a double band of pearls joined by lengthwise rows of pearls. The gold ring and pearl ring are united by gold chains.

New gauzelike metallic tissues will be very much used for the making of toques and "snuffer caps," and will appear in many millinery touches in the Spring hats. Many of the newest cabochon ornaments which are destined to figure on hats and toques have a basis of silver. Some of these are in pincushion form, the likeness being increased by a covering of Valenciennes lace. There will usually be added a border of beads, gold or silver, or turquoise, or coral tinted the last variety being very specially favored. Ornaments entirely covered carried out in coral beads of several sizes are a feature of the coming season, in trimming of both gowns and hats. There are a multitude of the quaintest and prettiest of shells, modelled in the same metallic tissue, generally silver, and bejeweled with lines of tiny coral beads.

The star fish be chosen for still another millinery adornment, the starfish form being entirely covered with closely colored beads in a great variety of shades. Beads put in an appearance on almost every material and garment.

Another notable novelty is soon to be introduced, whose name, "Sicilian gauze," will perhaps suggest something to you of its texture. It is closely woven, having something of an alpaca-like mesh and something, too, of the durability of that exceedingly serviceable fabric. But it is semi-transparent, which fact gives an apparent lightness to its draped folds. It is used for hat coverings, and is especially effective when swathed in the folds that encircle a turban. A decided advantage of Sicilian gauze is that its price is not prohibitively high.

I have also been looking at some wonderful new ribbons, to which I want to give you the earliest possible introduction, for this particular, and particularly pretty, form of trimming will be in ever-increasing evidence on Spring and Summer hats. Plumes and quills are entirely modeled in cleverly formed and manipulated ribbons, which, in such cases, will often blend two strikingly contrasted colors.

In this connection, let me remind you that the coming coronation is already casting its shadows, or at any rate, its shades, before. On every side I note the blending of the coronation colors, blue and red, which, though they sound and sometimes actually are, rather more bold than beautiful, can be entirely attractive and artistic, if a fuchsia or Indian red be carefully chosen and united with just the right shade of dark yet bright blue.

There is another ribbon which will delight the heart and ease the task of the amateur milliner, while its assistance will be by no means despised, even by the expert artist. For, interwoven in its either edge, is the finest of gilt wires, a mere thread, in fact, but strong enough withal to keep bows and ends and loops permanently and prettily erect without depriving them of any of that suppleness of effect which is so desirable, and which it has hitherto been somewhat difficult to secure when upstanding loops of wire had to be attached.

Found—the First Picture Ever Painted by Rembrandt!

GREAT interest has been aroused among art connoisseurs in Europe by the discovery of what is said to be the earliest picture by Rembrandt, perhaps the greatest painter that ever lived.

The newly discovered picture is in the collection of Sir J. C. Robinson, a famous English art collector, who is especially an authority on Rembrandt.

This picture is a study of still life, representing books grouped around armor and a skull crowned with laurels. It is dated 1631, or six years earlier than the earliest of his hitherto known works. These are "The Money Changer," now in the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin, and "St. Paul in Prison," now in the Royal Gallery in Stuttgart. These are dated 1627. Both have been identified in recent years, the first by Sir J. C. Robinson.

The newly discovered painting is of large dimensions and painted on an oak panel made up of four longitudinal planks of unequal width clamped together. Evidence that Rembrandt painted such a picture is to be found in the inventory of his effects, drawn up at the urging of his creditors on July 25 and 26, 1656, in which appears the following entries:

"No. 25. Een still leggent leven (still life) van Rembrant geretukeert (retouched)."

"No. 27. Een vanitas van Rembrant geretukeert."

"No. 28. Een dito van den solven met een scepter geretukeert."

"No. 120. Een vanitas van Rembrant geretukeert."

The expression "van Rembrant geretukeert" indicates that these were early works by Rembrandt himself, which he had retouched. Had they been the work of pupils or other painters, the placing of the words would have been "geretukeert van Rembrant"; and most likely the artists' names would have been given, as in so many other instances in the catalogue. The description of No. 28 with the words "van den solven" (by the same) is even more conclusive on this point.

Whether the picture in the possession of Sir J. C. Robinson is to be identified with the "Still Life" (No 25) of the inventory, or either of the "Vanitas" subjects—the laurel-crowned skull would justify this description—is uncertain. It cannot be the picture numbered 28, since no sceptre is included among the subjects depicted. The one thing which is certain is that the still life does bear signs of retouching, though these retouchings are not extensive, the chief alteration being the lettering underneath it.

Sir J. C. Robinson's picture is separated from the earliest known Rembrandt by a space of six years of rapid development. It cannot be proved on internal evidence to be by the master, because it was painted before he had acquired a personal style. But there are these points to consider. It is evidently the work of a very young and naive painter, whose head is filled with such ideas as would result from early university schooling. It shows remarkable talent, a strong feeling for light and shade, and a certain knowledge of reflected lights, and is free from the Italian influence of which Rembrandt showed traces for a time, after he had become a pupil of Lastman, at Amsterdam.

Passages, like the pile of books on the table, occur in his earliest known works. The signature is unusual, but shows nothing to justify the suspicion that it was added at a later time.

The production of Rembrandt in the six years before 1627 has yet to be accounted for. Perhaps Sir J. C. Robinson's "Still Life" will serve as a touchstone for the hitherto unidentified pictures, and the publication of it may bring to the light the other "Vanitas" pictures of the inventory—or even other works painted before 1627.

Doctors Who Murder With Germs

Recent Revelations of the Criminal Use of Typhoid, Diphtheria, Even Cholera Microbes Arouse Reputable Physicians to Urge Stringent Control of All Deadly Disease Cultures

THE amazing case of Dr Pantchenko in Russia, of Dr. Bennett Clarke Hyde in Missouri, and several others of less notoriety, have aroused an international movement to regulate the sale of deadly disease germs.

Strange to say, the most deadly, the most insidious, the most elusive agency for committing murder is distributed with practically no legal precautions.

Any doctor can purchase disease germs in sufficient quantities to cause thousands and thousands of deaths without giving any adequate explanation for what purpose he requires them. More than that, any person claiming to be a scientist or having some acquaintance with medical men can usually obtain the germs without difficulty.

Every pathological laboratory contains stores of disease germs, nearly sealed up in test tubes, sufficient to depopulate whole cities and even nations.

Dr. Pantchenko, in Russia, obtained sufficient cholera and diphtheria germs in this way to destroy thousands of persons.

Dr. Clarke Hyde, in Missouri, obtained sufficient typhoid and diphtheria germs to kill thousands of people, and Dr. Randall Williams, in England, collected enough deadly germs to depopulate London.

The fact that these terrible agencies of death are placed at the disposal of doctors without restriction speaks volumes for the confidence which the public places in the medical profession. It is generally felt that doctors, on account of the high traditions of their profession, and of their experience with suffering humanity, have a higher moral standard than ordinary men, but it is also beyond question that there are doctors of bad and criminal character. It is most disquieting to think that the power of wholesale death should be placed in these evil hands.

The London Lancet, the leading organ of the medical profession in England, proposes in view of such occurrances as those mentioned, that a law shall be passed regulating the sale and distribution of disease germs. According to this plan a central committee of doctors in London will have control of the matter. Certain laboratories will be authorized to distribute germ cultures and no others will be permitted to do so.

The laboratories having this power will require every man applying for germ cultures to give his address and to state exactly what purposes he needs the germs for. All the facts will be entered in a register at the laboratory, and the doctor will be required to sign a receipt. Germ cultures will not be delivered in unusually large quantities. If the laboratory becomes suspicious of the doctor's character, it can require him to return the cultures.

It is true that any doctor can obtain disease germs from a patient and cultivate them himself, but the fact is that germs are likely to lose their virulence unless cultivated with the utmost scientific care. In all the cases that have excited alarm the doctors obtained their cultures from laboratories.

In the case of Dr. Pantchenko, some of the greatest persons in Russian society were involved. He was accused of poisoning young Count Vassili Bouturlin, at the instigation of the latter's brother-in-law, Count Patrick O'Brien de Lacey. The latter wished to get rid of the young count in order that his wife might become the sole heir of her father, General Count Bouturlin. The general is one of the greatest personages in Russia, an intimate friend of the Grand Dukes, and possesses a fortune of $3,500,000.

Count O'Brien de Lacey, who is obviously of Irish descent, stands high in the ranks of the Russian nobility. He is descended from one of many families that were scattered from Ireland on the downfall of the Stuarts, and have since found a place in the aristocracy of nearly every European country.

Strange to say, the Count O'Brien de Lacey is a cousin of the equally notorious Countess Tarnowska, who was convicted at Venice of inciting her lover Prilukov, to murder the wealthy Count Kamarowski. The father of the Countess was Count Ourik, a Russianized form of "O'Rourke."

The strange explanation has been offered that these Russianized Irish people have "Celtic eyes." The believe that no one can resist "Celtic eyes." When Dr Pantchenko was giving damaging evidence against Count de Lacey, the latter turned his eyes on him and immediately began to retract his evidence. So powerful were the Countess Tarnowska's eyes that after a man had committed murder for her, he was willing to commit suicide at her desire, and another is now waiting to marry her as soon as she gets out of prison.

To return to the terrible Dr. Pantchenko. He confessed that he had poisoned forty people with cholera, diphtheria and other germs. He had a regular tariff, based upon the wealth of the victim. In one case his fee was as high as $250,000. He said, however, that in the last case he acted under the hypnotic influence of Count O'Brien de Lacey.

He made it his business to kill future heirs to large estates, rivals in love, insistent creditors, politicians who interfered with the ambitions of others and, in fact, any person of importance. It is even reported that he may have poisoned some members of [illegible] family.

His method was to inoculate the patient with cholera but ill after he had been called to the bedside of the victim in a professional capacity. As the victim was usually a near relative of the one who wished to remove him, it was usually possible to have the doctor called in. The doctor was a man of fascinating personality. He travelled from place to place pursuing his fearful calling and when he came to a town the man who wished to remove a relative would say to him:

"You must see that wonderful new doctor who has just come here."

Dr. Pantchenko is credited with having caused the recent terrible epidemic of cholera in Russia through his excessive use of germs in one of his cases.

Pantchenko said that Count O'Brien agreed to pay him $10,000 for the removal of his brother in law, $50,000 for his father in law and $300,000 for his mother in law.

He said he needed the money to satisfy the requirements of Madame Muravieva, a beautiful actress, with whom he was associated.

In April, 1910, with his victim, young Count Bouturlin, he visited Cronstadt, where [illegible] guinea pigs were kept for purposes of research. Soon after [illegible] died.

Punctures made by hypodermic syringes were found in the victim's body. Pantchenko said that he killed him with two doses of diphtheria germs. The cholera germs were apparently kept in reserve. He kept vast quantities of many kinds of germs on hand ready for emergencies.

Highest medical experts in Russia testified that the victim might have been killed by the injection of diphtheria germs. The symptoms were different from those of an ordinary attack of diphtheria and very difficult to identify. Dr Heinrich, of Cronstadt, testified that Pantchenko had obtained from his laboratory ten tubes of cholera germs. Another medical expert, Dr Zabolotny, testified that Pantchenko had obtained six tubes of diphtheria germs from him.

Another very eminent physician, Dr. Zhukovski, of the Institute of Experimental Medicine, swore that Dr Pantchenko had obtained six tubes of diphtheria toxin from him and had inquired about the minimum fatal dose.

The doctor confessed his crimes once, withdrew the confession and then affirmed it again with modifications. Whatever the plights or wrongs of this amazingly complicated case, it was made certain that this man of dubious character had been able to obtain unlimited quantities of deadly disease germs. He had quite recently obtained cholera germs sufficient to give the disease to a population of 100,000, and diphtheria germs enough to kill fifty persons.

The case of Dr. Bennett Clarke Hyde in America was as remarkable as that of Dr. Pantchenko in Russia and in some ways similar. Dr. Hyde was a physician in high standing in Kansas City. He married his wife's uncle, Colonel James H. Swope, one of the richest men in Missouri, in order that she might become his sole heiress. At the same time he is believed to have caused the death of two other members of the Swope family and to have given typhoid fever to nine of them altogether.

In Dr. Hyde's office, after the epidemic in the Swope family had started, a typhoid culture tube was discovered from which it was found that half the culture had been removed.

There were also tubes of diphtheria germs and pus germs, both of which had been opened and their contents partly removed. Medical experts to find active typhoid germs if injected into a person's arm would probably cause death. The pus germs would cause abscesses to break out in various parts of the body.

When Dr. Hyde's father-in-law, Mr. [illegible] Swope, fell ill of typhoid, he gave her hypodermic injections of caused her arm to swell to twice its usual size.

As an illustration of Dr. Hyde's character, it was mentioned that when the typhoid epidemic in his family was at its height, he gave a gay smoking concert to his colleagues of the medical profession.

Hyde was accused of killing Colonel Swope with cyanide of potassium. Possibly typhoid and diphtheria germs had failed to work on him. Old people are frequently very resistant to the effect of germs. He had bought large quantities of cyanide and the druggist had remarked that it had no medicinal properties.

Dr. Hyde, it was charged, gave typhoid germs in candy to one of his victims, Miss Stella Swope. She developed the disease.

He then fed other members of the family by infecting the water cooler with typhoid germs. After a long trial he was found guilty and sentenced to ninety-nine years in prison.

So terrified were the members of the Swope family by what had happened that Mrs. Logan Swope declared that if Dr. Hyde were acquitted, none of them would dare to live in America. This attitude well typified the terror that nearly everybody must feel who is at the mercy of a doctor criminally disseminating deadly disease germs.

An extraordinary case of the misuse of tuberculosis germs was the death of Sax Lehaidy, "the Little Sugar Boul," the richest young man in France. In order to avoid his military service he was persuaded by the crowd of parasites surrounding him to pretend sickness. In order to substantiate this claim they placed tuberculosis sputum on his handkerchief, and from this he contracted the disease and died.

Tuberculosis germs employed by a doctor were also the cause of the death of Miss Emma King, a handsome young woman of Brooklyn. The doctor injected large quantities of the germs into her in order to test the Koch consumption theory. The injections wrecked her health to such a degree that she committed suicide to escape her misery.

"Hanged by the Neck Till—Cured"

HANGING by the neck from a rope has become a recognized form of treatment for certain nervous diseases at the National Hospital for the Paralyzed and Epileptic, in London.

In wry neck in particular "hanging" has given good results, certain cases totally unrelieved by other more conservative methods of treatment responding well to this strenuous cure.

The apparatus used consists of a strong metal tripod, eight feet high, with a pulley at the apex. Over this pulley is passed a rope attached to two large metal stirrups, well padded with leather, one of which fits beneath the patient's chin and the other beneath the protruding back part of the head. The patient's head is in exactly the same position as that of a person's foot whose toes are resting on the bar of one stirrup iron while the heel rests on the bar of another.

The principle of the treatment is that the weight of the patient's body is used to stretch the contracted neck muscles which cause the head to be held on one side.

"We begin the treatment," one of the hospital staff explained, "by gently pulling on the free end of the rope until the patient is raised up on his toes. After being kept in this position for a few seconds he is given a few moments' rest. The second time he is raised a little higher, so that more strain falls on the neck muscles. The process is continued every morning for a fortnight, the dose being gradually increased until toward the end of the treatment the patient can stand being suspended clear of the ground for, twenty to thirty seconds. Immediately after each morning's treatment the patient is at once put back to bed, where he stays until the next morning's treatment.

"While this hanging cure has given good results in certain selected cases it must not be understood that we treat all wry necks in this way."

PERHAPS the most interesting discovery ever made in the field of biblical archaeology has just been announced

It is the discovery of the ancient palace of the wicked Queen Jezebel and the miserable King Ahab in the ruins of Samaria, the ancient capital of the Northern Kingdom of Israel

The ruins are contained in a "tell," or vast mound Here are doubtless the remains of the tower from which the conquering Jehu caused Jezebel to be thrown down to the street, where her mangled body was devoured by the dogs, as prophesied by Elijah

This is the palace to which the prophet Amos refers when he speaks of "Them, that lie upon beds of ivory and stretch themselves upon their couches and eat the lambs out of the flock, and the calves out of the midst of the stall" (Amos III., 9, 10). Evidently this palace was largely furnished with ivory couches, which according to the ancients caused sensations of intense delight

These ruins are teeming with records of the most thrilling period of Old Testament history, when the conflict between the worship of Jehovah and the impious rites of Baal reached a sanguinary crisis. Jezebel was a daughter of the Tyrian king Ethbal, and introduced the worship of Baal and Astarte on an enormous scale into Israel.

Among the ruins are many inscriptions containing Bible names, and there is frequent reference to a vineyard, which it is believed may be Naboth's vineyard. It was Ahab's tyranny in seizing this that led to the great conflict between the weak king and his dominant queen on one side and the Israelites who worshipped the true Jehovah on the other

It is even hoped that manuscripts may be found here paralleling, or supplementing, some of the narratives of the Old Testament.

The discoveries in Samaria have been made by the Harvard University Expedition in charge of Professor George A Reisner and Clarence S. Fisher, the expenses of which were paid by Jacob H. Schiff, the well known New York financier and philanthropist.

The work at Samaria has been going on since 1908 It had been known from historical records that King Herod had built a great palace on this hill, calling the city Sebaste, meaning Augusta in Latin, in honor of his imperial patron Augustus

In the upper strata of the hill were found remains of this palace, a well preserved Roman altar and a statue, probably of Augustus himself.

But it was underneath the Herodian remains that the most interesting discovery was made of a massive Hebrew structure. This has been shown to be the palace of King Omri and King Ahab, consisting of a series of chambers grouped around courts Remains of the ancient Hebrew watch towers were first found, and after further exploration during the past year it was proved that this palace covered no less than one and one-half acres, and that its different parts were built on at four different periods, those of Omri, Ahab, Jehu and Jeroboam II An alabaster vase inscribed with the name of Osorkon II., of Egypt, the contemporary of Ahab, was found. This is considered convincing proof that this was indeed the "ivory palace" of Ahab mentioned in the Bible

Perhaps the most interesting discovery is that of some seventy-five fragments of pottery inscribed with records or memoranda in the ancient Hebrew script. This is not the comparatively modern square Hebrew character with which most persons are familiar, but that ancient writing closely allied to the Phoenician, which is found on the Moabite Stone and the Siloam Tunnel Inscription. The character of these inscriptions has settled one disputed point about the Siloam Inscription It shows that it could easily have been written in the time of Hezekiah, as it purports to be, for here is writing of the same type used at Samaria more than a century and a half earlier, for Ahab lived in 896 B. C. and Hezekiah in 727

These inscriptions are written in ink with a reed pen, in a flowing hand, proving that this was the common form of writing at that period. The words are even divided from one another by dots or strokes, making it much easier to decipher them

It is evident that the inscriptions were written upon jars of wine and oil, and even a date is added, evidently the year of the king's reign. The name of the owner is given, as well as the person or place whence the oil or wine came.

Here are some of the inscriptions, proving how exact the ancient scribes were in their methods

"In the tenth year From Abiezer. For Shemaryo. A jar of old wine for Ana. From the Tell"

"In the tenth year For Shemaryo. From the Tell A jar of fine oil"

"In the tenth year Wine of the vineyard of the Tell. With a jar of fine oil"

"In the tenth year From Saq For Gadyo A jar of fine oil"

In the tenth year. From Yasat A jar of fine oil From Akhinoam"

"In the eleventh year From Shemida For Kheles, Aphsakh, Baala, Zeker"

"In the eleventh year From Sarar. For Yedayo, Maranyo, Gadyo."

"In the ninth year From Shaphtan. For Baalzamar A jar of old wine."

"In the ninth year From Yasat. For Abinoam. A jar of old wine"

"In the eleventh year For Badyo The vineyard of the Tell."

These jars were evidently stored for their owners, but where no owner is mentioned the wine probably belongs to the king's palace.

It will be noticed that in several of these inscriptions the "Tell" or "Vineyard of the Tell" is mentioned It is evident that this vineyard must have been one that was especially well known No vineyard in all history was so well known as the "Vineyard of Naboth," and it gained its fame in the reign of King Ahab It is more than probable that this is the famous vineyard the story of which is related fully in I Kings, XXII

The Bible tells us that King Ahab saw the vineyard belonging to Naboth, the Jezreelite, "hard by the palace" and tried to get Naboth to exchange it with him for another But Naboth refused, which made Ahab very angry When Jezebel, who, as a Tyrian princess, had little sympathy with the ideals of the Israelites, heard that Naboth refused to give his vineyard to the king she asked Ahab ironically "Dost thou now govern the Kingdom of Israel?" or, in other words, "What is the use of being king if you can not have whatever belongs to any of your subjects?"

But Ahab himself would do nothing, so Jezebel took the matter in hand and began action by writing some letters, certainly in the very script that has now been discovered. She sent these letters to the elders and the nobles, telling them to engage two false witnesses (men of Belial) to testify against Naboth, stating that he had blasphemed God and the king. And she sealed these letters with the royal seal

The elders did as they thought the king had commanded, and Naboth was condemned to death by stoning, and was executed When Jezebel was informed that her orders had been carried out, and that Naboth was dead, she told Ahab to go and take possession of the coveted vineyard.

It was at this juncture that the Prophet Elijah appeared before the trembling Ahab, saying "In the place where the dogs licked thy blood, even the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine." And concerning Jezebel the Prophet also said "The dogs shall eat Jezebel by the wall of Jezreel. Him that dieth of Ahab in the city shall the dogs eat, and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat." This was the most terrible fate that could happen to any one, in the eyes of the Israelites

King Ahab was defeated by Benhadad, King of Damascus, and was slain by "a certain man who drew a bow at a venture." When he was brought to be buried in Samaria, the dogs licked up his blood as a servant was washing his chariot, which is regarded as a fulfillment of the prophecy of Elijah.

The Bible Story of How King Ahab Stole

AND it came to pass after these things that Naboth the Jezreelite had a vineyard, which was in Jezreel, hard by the palace of Ahab king of Samaria.

2 And Ahab spake unto Naboth, saying, Give me thy vineyard, that I may have it for a garden of herbs, because it is near unto my house; and I will give thee for it a better vineyard than it; or, if it seem good to thee, I will give thee the worth of it in money.

3 And Naboth said to Ahab, The Lord forbid it me that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee.

4. And Ahab came into his house heavy and displeased because of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite had spoken to him: for he had said, I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers. And he laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread.

5. But Jezebel his wife came to him, and said unto him, Why is thy spirit so sad, that thou eatest no bread?

6. And he said unto her, Because I spake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and said unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money; or else, if it please thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it; and he answered, I will not give thee my vineyard.

7 And Jezebel his wife said unto him, Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel? Arise, and eat bread, and let thine heart be merry: I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite.

8. So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal, and sent the letters unto the elders and to the nobles that were in his city, dwelling with Naboth.

9. And she wrote in the letters, saying, Proclaim a fast, and set Naboth on high among the people:

Supposed Song in Honor of King Ahab and Jezebel.

THE English scholar and author, Professor S R. Driver, has recently pointed out that the 45th Psalm appears to refer to Ahab's palace of ivory and his bride from Tyre, and suggests that it was a song sung on behalf of King Ahab, in praise of the fascinating but wicked Queen Jezebel.

It is a famous Psalm, beginning: "My heart is inditing a good matter: I speak of the things which I have made touching the king; my pen is the pen of a ready writer."

The Psalm was perhaps composed in honor of the wedding of Ahab and Jezebel. If this view is correct it means of course that the Psalm was composed after the time of David. In the Psalm there is a reference to "the daughter of Tyre," apparently meaning Jezebel. She is adjured to "forget her father's house," referring perhaps to her attachment to Tyrian customs and religions. These are the verses which are held to refer to Jezebel:

8. All thy garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia, out of the ivory palaces, whereby they have made thee glad.

9. Kings' daughters were among thy honourable women; upon thy right hand did stand the queen in gold of Ophir.

10. Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; forget also thine own people, and thy father's house.

11. So shall the king greatly desire thy beauty: for he is thy Lord, and worship thou him.

12. And the daughter of Tyre shall be there with a gift; even the rich among the people shall intreat thy favour.

13. The king's daughter is all glorious within: her clothing is of wrought gold.

14. She shall be brought unto the king in raiment of needlework; the virgins her companions that follow her shall be brought unto thee.

15. With gladness and rejoicing shall they be brought, they shall enter into the king's palace.

16. Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children, whom thou mayest make princes in all the earth.

17. I will make thy name to be remembered in all generations: therefore shall the people praise thee forever and ever.

Naboth's Vineyard.—From I. Kings, Chapter XXI.

10. And set two men, sons of Belial, before him, to bear witness against him, saying, Thou didst blaspheme God and the king. And then carry him out, and stone him, that he may die.

11. And the men of his city, even the elders and the nobles who were the inhabitants in his city, did as Jezebel had sent unto them, and as it was written in the letters which she had sent unto them.

12. They proclaimed a fast, and set Naboth on high among the people.

13. And there came in two men, children of Belial, and sat before him: and the men of Belial witnessed against him, even against Naboth, in the presence of the people, saying, Naboth did blaspheme God and the king. Then they carried him forth out of the city, and stoned him with stones, that he died.

14. Then they sent to Jezebel, saying, Naboth is stoned, and is dead.

15. ¶ And it came to pass, when Jezebel heard that Naboth was stoned, and was dead, that Jezebel said to Ahab, Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refused to give thee for money: for Naboth is not alive, but dead.

16. And it came to pass, when Ahab heard that Naboth was dead, that Ahab rose up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession of it.

17. ¶ And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

18. Arise, go down to meet Ahab king of Israel, which is in Samaria: behold, he is in the vineyard of Naboth, whither he is gone down to possess it.

19. And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the Lord, Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the Lord, In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine.

20. And Ahab said to Elijah, Hast thou found me, O mine enemy? And he answered, I have found thee; because thou hast sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the Lord.

21. Behold, I will bring evil upon thee, and will take away thy posterity.

Remarkable Discoveries by Americans in the Ruins of Ancient Samaria.

WITH Ahab's death Samaria entered a new period of history. Elijah anointed Jehu King. He was the avenger who was to lead back the people of Israel to the true religion, to slay the sons of Ahab and the wicked Jezebel.

Jezebel continued to hold court as queen after her husband's death, and thought that she might still save the day by the effect of her witcheries on the population. When she heard that Jehu had arrived she "painted her face and adorned her head, and looked out at a window" for the purpose of defying and taunting the conqueror. Jehu passed beneath her window in his chariot, and as he did so she taunted him with treachery. Jehu ordered the servants to throw her out of the window. They threw her down and "some of her blood was sprinkled on the wall and on the horses, and he trode her under foot." When Jehu afterward went to have the body picked up for burial only some of the bones were found. The prophecy of Elijah had again been fulfilled, for the dogs had gnawed her flesh. But Jehu was not yet satisfied, and the seventy surviving sons of Ahab were slain at his order. And this same Jehu tore down the Temple of Baal, trying in all ways to reform the people and bring them back to the worship of the God of Israel.

The Biblical account says that Jezebel was in her palace in Jezreel when Jehu passed. It is now believed that Jesreel was part of the city of Samaria.

Whatever her sins, Jezebel was evidently a woman of great courage and determination. She was a daughter of the King of Tyre and Sidon. Both these places were inhabited by people of Phoenician races, who were addicted to the vile worship of Baal. Having gained power over Israel through her marriage to Ahab, she made a determined effort to introduce her religion into the land.

The first effect of her influence was the immediate establishment of the Phoenician worship on a grand scale in the court of Ahab. At her table were supported no less than 450 prophets of Baal, and 400 of Astarte, the companion goddess of Baal. The prophets of Jehovah, who up to this time had found their chief refuge in the northern kingdom, were attacked by her orders and put to the sword.

Baal was the supreme male divinity of the Phoenician and Canaanitish nations, as Astarte was their supreme female divinity. We find the worship of Baal established among the Moabites and their allies, the Midianites, in the time of Moses, and through these nations the Israelites were seduced to the worship of this god under the particular form of Baal-peor. In the times of the kings the worship of Baal spread greatly, and, together with that of Asherah, became the religion of the court and people of the ten tribes. Though this idolatry was occasionally put down, it appears never to have been permanently abolished among them. In the kingdom of Judah also, Baal worship extensively prevailed.

The worship of Baal among the Hebrews seems to have been appointed with much pomp and ceremonial. Temples were erected to him; his images were set up; his altars were very numerous, were erected particularly on lofty eminences and on the roofs of houses; there were priests in great numbers and of various classes; the worshippers appear to have been arrayed in appropriate robes; the worship was performed by burning incense and offering burnt sacrifices, which frequently consisted of human victims. The officiating priests danced with frantic shouts around the altar and cut themselves with knives to excite the attention and compassion of the god. The struggle between Jehovah and Baal is the great moral theme of Old Testament history.

In the ruins of the palace of Ahab and Jezebel the investigators hope to find some of the correspondence of these two monarchs, perhaps the most sinister figures in Bible history. It is reasonable to expect to find some reference to the letter which Jezebel wrote to the elders demanding the death of Naboth.

The space excavated so far is but 275 feet square, and this is a very small portion of the great mound of Samaria, which doubtless contains thousands of records of far greater importance than the shards of oil and wine jars.

It is absolutely certain that the annals of the kings of Israel were kept, and where else would they have been preserved if not in the capital of Israel, which was the City of Samaria? In the passage from Kings, cited above, reference is made to the "Chronicles of the Kings of Israel," a book which was certainly in existence at the time when the writer of the "Book of Kings" of our present Bible was at work. This is not to be confused with the biblical Book of Chronicles, which does not contain the details as to the ivory palace and other doings of Ahab referred to by the compiler of the Book of Kings. If it is found we shall at last have one of the original books of biblical times.

If but a single leaf of one of these old chronicles can be recovered from this mound of ruins it would more than repay the excavators for all their pains. It would be unique and priceless, helping perhaps to give us a clearer view of these troublous times not fully covered in the biblical account, because the writer of "The Book of Kings," as the latest critics believe, took it for granted that his readers would have access to the well known current chronicles of the day.

The finding of the first Hebrew royal residence opens the way to so much that the mind of the scholar hesitates to formulate all that may possibly be found at this spot, where at least four of the great monarchs of the Northern Kingdom lived.

It must not be forgotten that the age of Ahab is only a century away from that of David. The division of the land of Palestine into two kingdoms—one with Jerusalem as the capital and the other with Samaria as the capital—occurred only fifty-six years before the time of Ahab. Solomon and all his glories were still fresh in the memory of some of those still alive, and any part of the literature of this important period may be discovered when the rest of the mound of Samaria is excavated.

That there are certainly some documents on clay, if not on papyrus, is indicated by the finding of a piece of the clay envelope of an Assyrian letter, with a part of the name of the man to whom it was addressed still there. The finding of even a fragment like this indicates the great probability that in the mound may be a great mass of these letters; in fact, all of the records of the Northern Kingdom of Israel, for the Assyrian language was used at that time in correspondence between Palestine and Egypt, as has been proved by the Tel-el-Amarna letters. She covered in Egypt a few years ago. Such letters would parallel the Bible narrative.

Names of Famous Bible Characters Found at Samaria.

UPON the inscribed vessels already discovered at Samaria occur many Hebrew names which are the same as those mentioned in the Bible. One of them is "Abiezer," mentioned upon the oil jar in the foregoing quotation. These names occur in the Bible narrative in and near the time of David, who only preceded Ahab by a generation or two. It is possible that many of the names on the fragments at Samaria refer to the same men as those mentioned in the Bible, although it is not likely that all do, as the names must have been more or less common among the Israelites. Assuming that the same name in some cases indicates the same person, we have in Samaria a collection of objects that belonged to biblical characters.

The following is a complete list of names found on the fragments at Samaria which are identical with biblical names, together with a reference to them from the Bible.

ABIEZER—Mentioned in Joshua, XVII., 2, as one of the sons of Manasseh.

ABIEL—Found in I. Sam., IX., 1. "Now there was a man of Benjamin, whose name was Kish, the son of Abiel." Kish was the father of Saul, the first king.

AHIMELECH—Mentioned in I. Sam., XXI., 1. Then came David to Nob to Ahimelech the priest."

AHIJAH—Conspicuous in the Bible as the son of King Jeroboam, the first King of the Northern Kingdom of Israel (I. Kings, XVI., 1).

AHINOAM—The name of Saul's wife (I. Sam. XIV., 50). "And the name of Saul's wife was Ahinoam, the daughter of Ahimaz."

ELAH—Found as far back as Gen. XXXVI., 41 where he is mentioned as one of the dukes descended from Esau.

ELIJAH—The name of the prophet who succeeded Elijah, but the wine jar bearing this name probably belonged to some other Elijah.

ASA—King of Judah for forty years, and probably the man bearing this name was an immigrant from the Southern Kingdom.

ZECHARIAH—Mentioned in II. Chron., XXIV., 20. "And the spirit of God came upon Zechariah, the son of Jehoiada." This is, of course, not the prophet of the same name, whose prophecies we have.

BAAL-MEON—Occurs in Numbers, XXXII., 38, as one of the sons of Reuben.

GADDIEL—Mentioned (Num. XIII., 10) as belonging to the tribe of Zebulun.

CANAAN—Mentioned in Gen. IX., 18, as a son of Ham.

ELIAM—The name of the father of Bathsheba, mother of Solomon, formerly the wife of Uriah (II Sam. XI., 3).

JEDAIAH—Occurs in I. Chron. IV., 37, as the name of the father of Allon.

JEHOIADA—The father of Benaiah, one of David's captains, according to II. Sam. VIII., 18.

ELIASH'B—Mentioned in I. Chron. XXIV., 12, as one of the descendants of Aaron.

JOASH—A king of Judah, and contemporary of Jehu.

MEHBAAL—One of the tribe of Benjamin, according to I. Chron. VIII., 34.

NATHAN—The famous prophet who reproached David for the death of Uriah, and the name became so famous thereafter that probably many were named after this prophet.

ADDA—Mentioned (I. Kings, IV., 6) as the father of Ahinadab.

ARIEL—Occurs in Ezra, VIII., 16, as one of the Levites summoned to return to Jerusalem.

UZZA—The owner of a garden, according to II. Kings, XXI., 18.

SHEMARIAH—Mentioned as one of David's captains in I. Chron. XII., 5.

One of the Expensive Newest Spring Straws Duplicated by Miss Landor in the Cheapest Material.—

By Eva Landor

If every woman could make her own hats there would be no work for milliners. As a matter fact, though, millinery is one of the subtlest of arts, given to a few women in great measure, like the ability to paint wonderful pictures, but there are so few women who possess this talent even to a slight degree and there are so many hats to make, that those who are at all gifted in this direction may very easily make a nice living out of it.

To open a fine establishment on Fifth avenue, of course, requires capital, but it isn't necessary to start on so elaborate a scale.

Intuition was all the capital I possessed when I decided to take up millinery as a means of livelihood, and it served me in such good stead that eventually I was able to equip a regular millinery shop, and now I have a good following. The important point to remember, however, is that I began with nothing, and made something out of it and every woman can do the same. This is how I did it.

Any woman who has had the training of doing domestic duties has acquired enough skill of hand to make a hat. This is the way I reasoned it out when I began to create hats for myself. I began by experimenting with old hats. There are tricks in every trade, and you will never have time to find out the tricks of the professional milliner, but while you work you may originate some way of trimming or making a hat which will be more interesting and more beautiful than the regulation way. Still, it is well to learn as much as you can from the professions.

I always begin a hat with a trip to the store to try on the trimmed hats for sale there. One must follow the general trend of the fashion to avoid being fantastic but the scope of the fashion is large enough for any imagination. So first I got a general idea of the shape I wished to make. Then I decided upon the colors.

I gathered together all the possible materials and experimented a little first as the idea grew in my brain. If I had not enough of the desired color I dyed something to match.

To make hats for the Summer from rice-sacking is neither new nor original. There probably have been isolated cases of rice-sacking hats since the first cargo of tea crossed the great ocean, but one may venture to boast that such hats are not in general circulation.

Rice-sacking is the straw mat in which tea chests Chinese and Japanese mattings and other Oriental imports are wrapped. The mats which are used to cover mattings are best for millinery purposes, because they are larger and usually in better condition when they come to you and can be had at any store where mattings are sold for five cents (top price).

Your grocer will present to you an empty rice sack or one which came around a tea chest if you will ask him to save it for you.

I chose a sack which was in good condition, not broken or stained, for the first hat, because it was to be left in its original color, cool green and yellow green.

I found that by creasing a circular paper pattern in eight equal parts and making a pleat at every one the fullness would come just

I cut and fitted a pattern for the brim band. When both the crown and brim pattern fit and suited me perfectly I spread them out on the rice sack and marked around the edges with a lead pencil, then I stitched a double row of stitching around the edges on the sewing machine, one row half an inch from the edge and another half an inch inside. If you do not stitch the sacking before you cut it out it will fray and tassel and ravel in a way to make it impossible to finish.

The strip for the band or brim, as you will, must be cut on the bias so that it will fit and be easily bent to the shape of the head. Put one row of stitching at the point where you wish to bend it under. Dampen it with a cloth and lay the cloth over it when you press the edges under. The dampness will prevent the straws from breaking where the bend comes.

When the brim band is ready I pleated the top like the pattern, laying the paper pattern on to mark the places for the pleats with pins. It may take some patience to make these pleats exact and to adjust the crown to suit as rice sacking is stiff and unruly and one must attack it with a firm and determined hand to make it go as you will.

But stout thread and a strong needle will make the pleats firm, and after that all you have to do is to sew on the brim and put on the trimming.

I trimmed mine from the "pronerly trunk," using some black silk tassels from an old opera cloak and a piece of old black velvet ribbon.

I did not use a frame in this hat, but lined it with a piece of taffeta ribbon which is gathered in the middle with a draw string at the crown to prevent the head from disappearing into the crown. This is an easy way to help anchor a hat, and if the band fits snug enough there is no need of anything more.

I was so well pleased with this achievement that I decided to attempt a stiff hat to go with a rose-colored street dress. I would have to color the rice sacking to get the desired result. So I got a tube of easy dye, cardinal color and experimented upon scraps left from the automobile cap. I found upon trial that easy dye dissolved in a little hot water and then diluted with wood alcohol would give the deepest results. The alcohol is very necessary for straw materials. You put it on with a scrubbing brush or any stiff brush and let it dry in the sun.

I cut the crown for this hat exactly as I did for the automobile one.

stitching two rows around the edges before cutting it out but the frame made it possible to shape the crown rounder and different to the other one.

To make the brim I stitched both the lower or outer edges on the machine, leaving the edge which touches the head and is joined to the crown open and free to full up. You can carefully shape a brim to any flare that is becoming to your face in this way.

Trimming the hat for the amateur is the most difficult. You have to try it on again and again. Soft silk is often the hardest to make stay put, but here you must persist, because making a becoming shape is like modeling a figure, but trimming it is like putting on the drapery.

It is done at last and then you cover the part of the wire frame which is to answer for a hat band with taffeta and sew it in. After that all there is to do is to put in a narrow bias fold of taffeta to cover the raw edges on the underside of the brim.

You can make roses of silk if you have nothing in your property trunk which will do.

The total outlay of the rose-colored hat was only five cents for a rice sack and fifteen cents for a tube of easy dye. Other materials were what I had on hand. I am satisfied that a hat with equal amount of style and taste would cost twenty-five or thirty dollars in a good shop where exclusive styles are for sale, and I easily sold them to my friends for ten and fifteen dollars apiece, thus realizing a handsome profit on them.

Very handsome hats can also be made by sewing ready-made braids together. They are for sale everywhere and range in price from ten cents a bolt up.

Old Panama hats make excellent foundations for striking and becoming new ones. If there is a blemish in the brim, cut it out, turn over the corners, pin them up and you will have a hat which will be the despair of the thrifty who cannot understand how anybody could cut a Panama but up!

(Next week Miss Elizabeth Parker, who made enough money to buy a duck farm by raising wild ducks and guinea hens, will tell how she did it and how any woman may do the same.)

Now She Wears Bouquets on Her Sleeve—Her Heart, Too!

A VERY pretty floral idea has come into vogue in London and Paris. The up-to-date girl is wearing a bouquet on her sleeve!

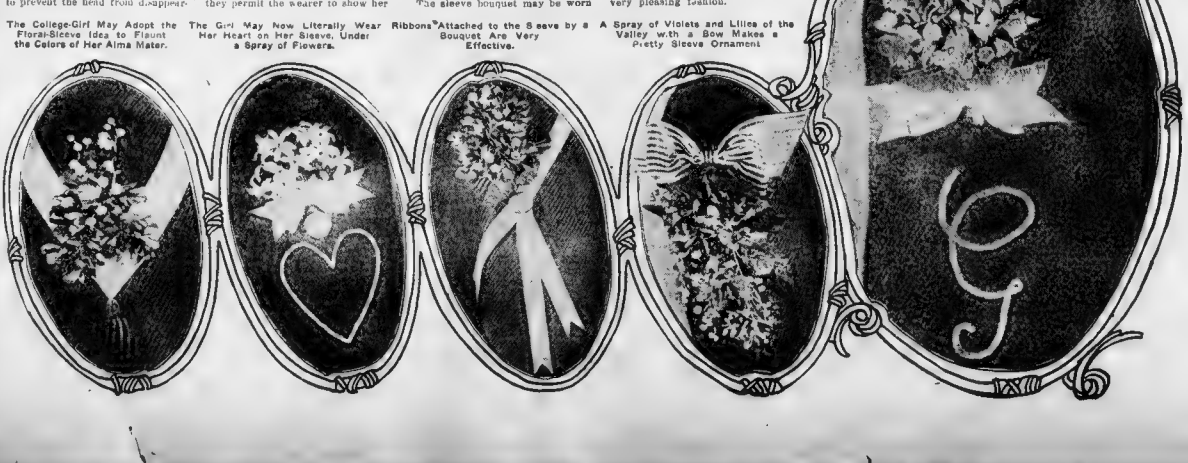
The "buttonhole" will no longer be found in the buttonhole, nor the "corsage" in the corsage, but instead these floral embellishments will be attached to the sleeve. Combined with pretty ribbon favors of various colors, these sleeve bouquets are really very effective, and they permit the wearer to show her allegiance in whatever direction it may happen to lie.

If she is a college girl, she wears the colors of her college. If she is a suffragette, she wears the insignia of that movement. If she is just an engaged girl, she wears the initials of her fiance embroidered in silk and choses her bouquet to match.

The photographs on this page show what artistic effects may be obtained.

The sleeve bouquet may be worn on either arm, because it is worn near the shoulder and does not, therefore, interfere with the free movement of the arm.

The idea will no doubt soon be adopted here, although the sleeve bouquet is hardly suitable for subway travel. Maybe, though, some one will come forward with a sleeve bouquet "shield," built upon the principle of the vaccination shield, and then even the perils of the subway need not prevent the general adoption of what seems to be a very pleasing fashion.



The College-Girl May Adopt the Floral-Sleeve Idea to Flaunt the Colors of Her Alma Mater.

The Girl May Now Literally Wear Her Heart on Her Sleeve, Under a Spray of Flowers.

Ribbons Attached to the Sleeve by a Bouquet Are Very Effective.

Dodging Death With The Russian Sword Dancers

Miss Edna Neil, One of Pavlowa's Corps de Ballet, Who Was Injured in the Sword Dance.

How Mordkine's Sword Was Whirled Out of Its Scabbard and Into the Skull of a Spectator.

In the Audience a Man's Skull Pierced, and Girls in Pavlowa's Corps de Ballet Frequently Injured by Whirling Blades of Frenzied Muscovites

A Frenzied Moment in the Russian Sword Dance, When Several Accidents Have Injured Other Dancers.

One of the Russian Sword Dancers Whose Sword Has Twice Wounded Girls in the Ballet.

Pavlowa and Mordkine in Their Famous and Dangerous "Pas de Deux."

IN all the history of the ballet there is no evidence of audiences more fascinated than those who crowd the theatre to see the Russian dancers—with Anna Pavlowa and Michael Mordkine as the twin stars of this pet luxury of the Czar's imperial theatre.

From early childhood these dancers are supported and trained at the expense of the government. Their whole lives are spent in dancing, in daily practise of the most arduous kind and in their public performances. Critics declare them to be artists of the highest rank in their line—but, added to their proficiency in all styles of dancing, is the semi-barbarous spirit of their Muscovite ancestors, which in certain dances seems to incite them to frenzy.

Such a dance is a ballet in which the male dancers carry swords at their belts. And when they leap about the stage and whirl with a velocity that makes them seem like a blur upon the scenery, those swords become a deadly menace, in spite of all precautions, not only to themselves and each other, but to persons in the audience.

The first realization of this fact was brought home to the public when, a few weeks ago in Hamilton, Ont., the sword at the belt of Mordkine flew from its scabbard into the orchestra and pierced the skull of a spectator—Robert Shiverick. It is not yet certain that the wounded man will recover from his injuries.

Yet the danger to the dancers themselves is much greater—as is told elsewhere on this page by a member of the Russian corps de ballet, who, herself, was quite seriously injured by one of those flying swords. It is a grisly revelation of the danger to the audience when this dancer actually advises against the giving of the Russian sword dance "unless a strong wire netting is hung between the dancers and the spectators."

There are two accounts of the accident through which Mr. Shiverick may lose his life—and, accordingly, two separate dangers to dancers and audience whenever the sword dance is given. One account referred to above—is that the sword flew from its scabbard while Mordkine, owing to the velocity of his whirling, transformed himself into a human sling.

The other account has it that the sword, flown out in Mordkine's hand, separated from its hilt. This story is told by one of the dancers.

Mordkine and four other men dancers were doing the Russian sword dance of triumph—a wild Muscovite celebration, full of animation and barbaric ruthlessness. Mordkine represents the King of Arabia, and, with four of the chiefs of other countries, dances about captured slave men and women.

As the dance increases in frenzy, the sword blades fairly hiss as they slash through the air. As the star performer in the scene, Mordkine's sword play was, of course, most vigorous of all.

Suddenly the blade separated from the hilt and the next instant there were shrieks from the front rows of seats in the orchestra. Several ladies fainted. Near them was seen a man swaying about in his seat and tugging at a sword blade whose point was stuck fast in the thick bone of his forehead.

The wounded man suddenly collapsed, with the blade still in his forehead. There was a brief panic, while two men sitting near the unconscious victim pulled against the back of his seat, and a third wrenched the sword from his skull.

The moment the blade was removed, the man recovered consciousness, jumped from his seat and ran up the aisle to the lobby. His face was covered with blood. Again he collapsed. An ambulance was summoned and he was taken to the hospital. There he was identified as Robert Shiverick, a Hamilton business man. He was operated on and several pieces of bone removed from his head. His condition was pronounced very serious.

Mordkine also wears a sword in his most famous dance with Pavlowa—a pas de deux in which the broad-shouldered, athletic Russian seems to toss the graceful figure of Pavlowa about like a leaf on the breeze. At one stage of the dance, each, with an arm stretched out to the other, they whirl across the stage like a veritable human whirlwind. Several times during this dance the sword has proved a problem full of danger.

Elsewhere on this page Miss Edna Neil, a member of Pavlowa's corps de ballet, tells how she and others of the dancers have been injured in the sword dance.

WHY WE DREAD THAT SWORD DANCE

BY EDNA NEIL, One of Pavlowa's Corps de Ballet.

THE sword dance performed by the Imperial Russian Dancers, as viewed by most of us in the corps de ballet, is a nerve-racking and really dangerous affair.

It is a case of dodging flying swords while at the same time going through exacting details of steps and pantomime.

While we were on our recent Western trip one of the Russian girls narrowly escaped with her life. It was in the scene where the Arabian King Mr. Mordkine and the four chiefs were wildly threatening with their swords the heads of a group of captive slaves.

One of the chiefs let his sword fly a few inches too far to one side, and the result was a deep gash just over the girl's eye. She jumped back out of view of the audience and was placed, unconscious, on a couch.

The doctor who was summoned said that had the sword struck her a quarter of an inch lower down, she would have been instantly killed—her brain pierced through the thin bone at the back of the eye socket.

My turn came a few nights later. The dance was the same—the dangerous sword dance. I stood a little to the right of the couch on which Mordkine sat in all his glory as an Arabian king. Presently the swords were hissing through the air.

I was nervous, but did not move an inch out of my allotted space. The man who had wounded the Russian girl was near me. It seemed to me that he was wielding his weapon with more than his usual zeal—and all at once it left his hand and struck me a sharp blow on my right foot.

The blade went through my stocking, cutting the skin and seriously injuring the bones of my foot. I was laid up for several days. The injury still gives me some pain in walking and much pain when dancing.

I believe that Mordkine and the other men in the sword dance take every precaution in their power to avoid such accidents. But the thrill of the scene depends on the barbarous and excited action in it, and the nervous tension is too great to make it possible for the swordsmen to do away with the chance of accident.

In my opinion the audience at least should be protected by some sort of screen between it and the sword dancers.

The Homely Mussel as a New Food Staple

IT is safe to say, in the first place, that very few people know what "myticulture" is. And no wonder, inasmuch as it is the name for an art unpracticed up to date in this country. It signifies mussel-raising.

The Government Bureau of Fisheries is anxious to give it encouragement, because there are practically unlimited quantities of mussels on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States, quite as good to eat as the best of oysters, but going to waste owing to popular ignorance of their value for the table. At the present time the only market for these mollusks is in New York City and its neighborhood, where they are sold pickled, one dealer supplying the bulk of the demand with something like 400 gallons a day.

Recent experiments by Government experts have proved that mussels dipped in egg and cracker crumbs and fried are equal to fried oysters. Steamed and served with salt, pepper and butter, they are first rate. As fritters they cannot be beaten. Roasted, they are excellent. Croquettes made of them are described as admirable, and mussel chowder is a dish for the gods—superior, indeed, to clam chowder, because mussels are much more tender than clams.

Here, it appears, is a great source of food supply which is being almost wholly neglected—a circumstance to be lamented in these days when there is so much complaint of the high cost of living. There are plenty of places on Long Island Sound, along the shores of New England and elsewhere on our coasts, where mussels are obtainable in such quantities that a man can collect fifty tons of them in a day. Undoubtedly these natural beds would be dredged out in the course of a few years if the edible qualities of the bivalves once obtained recognition, but it is an easy matter to propagate them artificially in unlimited numbers by several methods of which the Fisheries Bureau has recently been making a study.

The experts declare that mussels as a nutritive food material are far superior to oysters, equal to clams and with one-third the value of lean beef. The males have white flesh and the females red flesh, so that the two sexes are easily distinguished. How rapidly they will breed under favorable circumstances may be judged from the fact that the female lays from 6,000,000 to 12,000,000 eggs at a spawning.

There are plenty of residents on or near the shores of New England and along other parts of our seacoast who could have all the mussels they wanted for the mere trouble of collecting them. If shipped in quantities to market they would be much cheaper than oysters. Put up in cans at home they would furnish a most palatable and nutritious food.

The Fisheries Bureau says that such canning may easily be done by any intelligent housewife who will obey the following directions:

Clean the outsides of the mussels with a stiff-bristled brush, rinse them in clean water and put them into a large, close covered kettle with a little water—one cup to each gallon of mussels. Put the kettle on the stove and boil fifteen minutes, or until the top shells have opened. Pour out the liquor that has collected in the bottom of the kettle and set it aside in a separate dish.

Shuck the mussels, rejecting the "beards," or horny tufts. Filter the liquor through a fine-meshed cloth. Then pack the "meats" in pint or half pint jars of the ordinary household type. To each quart of filtered liquor add one heaping teaspoonful of salt. Bring the liquor to a boil, pour it over the "meats," filling the jars to the brim and quickly clamp or screw on the lids. Place the jars in a wash boiler or other receptacle containing water and boil half an hour. Then remove the jars. Thus put up the mussels will keep many months preserving their natural flavor.

Mussels Are Superior to Oysters in Nutritive Value.

My Secrets of Beauty

No. 112—The Secret of Remaining Young

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri

THERE is touring your country a marvelous woman of sixty-eight, who does not look more than forty. Why?

The reasons she gives are chiefly psychological, reasons of the soul, the spirit. This woman of wonder when asked why she is young, though a great-grandmother, makes strange answer.

Every one has answered for Sarah Bernhardt according to his own leaning. Vegetarians have said she ate little or no meat. But she does eat meat when she likes. Prohibitionists have said she drank nothing more stimulating than water, but I have seen her lift a glass of champagne to her ever smiling lips and drink deeply and thirstily of it.

There was a foolish rumor that she lived chiefly upon lemons to make her everlastingly youthful, but she, when some one seeing her drink lemonade had asked her if it was the fountain of youth made her stereotyped new English answer, "Perhaps."

Those good folk who think that less than eight hours' sleep in the twenty-four means suicide, or jail, or the insane asylum, have theories about her long, undisturbed sleep. The truth is she keeps little and then not regularly nor soundly; that, in fact, she has always slept as little as possible.

She has snapped her fingers at

"When traveling by rail I stand on the platform to enjoy the outside air."

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

theories and deduced from her long, rich life these facts

TO REMAIN YOUNG.

Eat what you like when you like, but not as much as you like.

I never worry about things that cannot be helped. I laugh at them.

I never think of the past. It is over. Nor of the future. It may never come. Only of the present, which is here to enjoy.

Those who live much out of doors remain young, at least in spirit, and that is the real youth. I have lived out of doors as much as I could, and when I have been housed in hot hotel rooms or warm cars I have thought of the out of doors. When traveling by rail I stand on the platform to enjoy the outside air. I have had pictures of hunting scenes and of restless seas and eternal mountains about me to give me the sense of the strength and the vastness of the out-of-doors.

"I sink back into a reclining chair and give myself up to it as wholly as though it were to hold me the rest of my life."

"I would never ruin my voice by constricting the diaphragm."

"Perhaps lemonade is the fountain of youth."

"Eat what you like when you like, but not as much as you like."

MME. CAVALIERI, knowing and admiring Mme. Bernhardt, takes her prolonged usefulness and interest in life, as a text for her article to-day. She analyzes the great French woman's methods of preserving her health and retaining the semblance of her prime. Mme. Cavalieri interestingly comments upon these methods, the article being one of the most valuable of the valuable series she has long been contributing to this newspaper.

hardened. My life, aside from my work, has been a whirling succession of fads. I have painted pictures and sculptured images. I have ascended the air in balloons. I have written essays, stories, my memoirs, even plays. All this to amuse me, to make me light, to prevent that strained

I have always had one chief, absorbing interest in life, my work. Everything else was secondary to it. But, and this is most important, having found my work I regarded it not as a penalty, but a pleasure.

I have had other interests, "side" (little) interests, of life. They have kept me from being one sided. In other words, I have played a little, as well as worked a great deal. The little interests have kept me from becoming one sided, work be done for sparse eyebrows and eyelashes.

I have many times told exactly this in this newspaper. I would be glad if my correspondents would clip the formulae that interest them, save them and spare my other readers who have done so the need of seeing them repeated. I should like to give you new ideas and new formulae.

Again and again I have said that the best reinvigorant of the scalp is massaging it. The extra supply of blood thus given to the scalp freshens it and provides better soil in which the hair will grow.

Massage the scalp every night until it begins to seem tender. Rub into the roots this preparation:

Crude oil, 1 oz.
Bay rum, 1 pint.

This is another corrective for falling hair.

Cocoanut oil, 1 oz.
Cologne, 2 ozs.
Tincture Nux Vomica, 2 drams.
Tincture of cantharides, 1 dram.
Tincture of capsicum, ½ dram.

If the hair is dry this tonic is stimulating.

Sweet almond oil, 3 ozs.
Oil of rosemary, 1 dram.
Oil of cinnamon, 30 drops.

Shake thoroughly before using.

It is a mistake to suppose that oily hair is necessarily thick and strong. Often excessive oiliness of the hair is a disease.

Should the hair be oily and yet falling, this tonic is especially adapted to it:

Alcohol, 3 ozs.
Cocoanut oil, 1 oz.
Tincture of nux vomica, 2 dram.
Tincture of cantharides, 1 dram.
Tincture of capsicum, ½ dram.

For thin eyebrows massage is a helpful as for thin hair. But the massage should be lighter so that the surrounding skin shall not be drawn. In fact, I prefer patting to stroking the brows, for a strong stroke may pull the delicate hair from its roots.

I have known thin eyebrows to grow thick and beautiful through massaging them lightly every night with a little olive oil.

Another tonic that has been used with success is:

Vaseline, ½ oz.
Tincture of cantharides, ¼ dram.
Oil of rosemary, 6 drops.

This tonic has been applied with a camel's hair brush to the rims of the eyelids to promote the growth of the hair:

Vaseline, 10 grams.
Boric ac d, 20 centigrams.

Care must be taken to avoid the mixture getting into the eyes. A steady hand only should apply it.

As the scalp must be kept clean by massage, brushing and shampooing, so must the eyelids be kept free from encrustations and the brows from dust by brushing.

"How We Braved Death to Find The World's Rarest Bird"

To Follow the Leucosticte to its Lofty Haunts it Was Necessary to Ascend 10,000 Feet Among Snow-Capped Mountain Peaks.

The Nest and Four Eggs of the Leucosticte, Just Discovered. Hundreds of Scientists Have Risked Their Lives Trying to Obtain These Specimens

Close View of the Leucosticte

The Gray Crowned Leucosticte America's Rarest Bird and its Rocky Abode in the Lofty Peaks of the Sierras

The Remarkable Feat of Two American Bird Lovers Who Climbed 10,000 Feet and Got—a Bird's Nest and Four Eggs!

By MILTON S. RAY

EIGHTY years ago, Swainson, the ornithologist, discovered the gray-crowned leucosticte, the bird which inhabits the loftiest peaks of the Sierra Nevadas, but although hundreds of scientists have since attempted to obtain the bird's nest and eggs, their efforts have been in vain.

For two successive years Dr. Sterling Bunnell, of the University of California, spent the Summer months along the Sierran crest in the quest, and braved death ascending the dangerous peaks, but he failed to obtain what he went after. Other professors have had the same experience, and the egg of the leucosticte has come to be regarded as rare as that of the roc or some fabled halcyon.

Last Summer my friend, H. W. Carriger, and I determined to try our luck. We selected Pyramid Peak as the scene of our efforts.

Bird life was abundant up to 8,750 feet elevation, but became scarce at 9,000 feet altitude, and at 9,250 feet naught remained but the noisy Clarke nutcrackers, cawing from among the dreary, wind blown hemlocks and dwarf pines that mark the limit of the timber.

As this was an early Summer, the broad fields of snow were traversed without much difficulty, and we were soon clambering up over the gigantic mass of huge granite boulders, which, piled in chaotic confusion, extend to the apex.

Leucostictes were flying above and around us on all sides, uttering continuously that melodious twitter which is somewhat like that of the bluebird. We observed that some of the birds had a peculiar manner of ascending to some height, hovering for a moment and then abruptly dropping several feet with outspread wings.

The leucosticte is ever active, either on foot or wing, among the rocks, along the cliffs, or while feeding on stranded insects upon the snow. Endowed by nature to resist the fierce gales which prevail almost continually in these high altitudes, this bird possesses great power in its broad stretch of wing. The flight is rapid, in long, graceful, sweeping curves, and the birds mount hundreds of feet, even against the strong head winds, without much apparent effort. The males are certainly beautiful examples of bird life, in their brilliant coloring of rich chestnut brown, streaked on the back with dusky and tinged on the wing and tail coverts with light scarlet. The forehead and fore part of the crown is black, while the balance of the crown consists of a broad, conspicuous patch of gray. Much of this gay plumage is lacking in the females, however, who are much paler and duller colored. In size the bird is about equal to the bluebird, which it also resembles somewhat in flight, although it is much swifter on the wing.

After two and a half hours of continuous field work we came to the conclusion that by our present methods we were not making satisfactory progress, and on holding a conference decided to collect a specimen or so for the purpose of dissection. Carriger took aim at a bird on a nearby snow patch, but missed, scattering the snow about in all directions; and when, a few moments later, this or some other individual lit on a rock close by, Carriger was joyfully amazed to note that its bill was filled with grass stems. On seeing the bird disappear among the rocks and then reappear with an empty bill, he rushed to the spot, but failed to find the hoped for nest.

We felt, however, that it was too great a risk to continue our investigations in the vicinity of the nest, as the birds might desert it; so we rounded the peak to the east side, but the longer we worked the more we began to realize that the nest found was placed in an exceptionally favorable location and that the chances of finding another similarly placed were exceedingly remote. As it was now after five o'clock we started back to our camp on the Forni Meadow. After reviewing our experiences we felt that everything now depended upon a successful return to the nest we had already found and which we calculated would contain eggs [illegible] later.

We returned to Bijou on the [illegible] of June, and it was from here on the 19th, with two photographers, Heinemann and Dulike, that the writer started on the return trip to the peak, which was made by Glen Alpine Gorge. We went as far as Tallac by motor boat which saved us seven miles over sandy roads. It was eleven when we filed out of Tallac; and the pack, head winds and hilly road made traveling slow and laborious. On every lake we passed, myriad white-capped waves were racing before the wind; while all around, the swaying forest trees creaked and groaned in a way that was decidedly depressing. Grass Lake was made at dusk and we unrolled our blankets for the night among wind-sheltering rocks.

After a wild night the wind at dawn died down and the sun ushered in one of those royal Sierran mornings, calm, clear and magnificent. As early as four o'clock we saw the seemingly impossible had occurred, and that the propitious time for the ascent had come. Hastily packing such supplies as were necessary, we set out over that rough, glacier-hewn gorge, Desolation Valley. After we had passed Avalanche Lake, the region became trailless and, for safety travel, was made abreast for often great rocks, becoming loosened and gathering momentum, go tearing down, carrying destruction in their path.

We reached the summit of Pyramid at 11:40, and started down to the nesting site. The locality appeared bereft of its former bird life and it was with drooping spirits, although not entirely without a keen feeling of expectation that I approached the nest. The situation of the latter we had marked by a monument of rocks so it was an easy matter to locate it. As I came near the nest, a leucosticte, flying out from some rocks close by, re[illegible] my hopes and it was an anxious moment when I came to the crevice among the granite slabs and peered in. In the dim light among the feathers of the nest I could just discern the eggs. When I joyfully informed my expectant companions of the victory, the news was greeted with three [illegible] cheers, and no small [illegible], for it meant specimens [illegible] scientific world had been found and that the two trips to the peak and back—120 miles, taking two weeks' time—had not been in vain.

The camera was now set at once for pictures. After taking nine of the bird as she approached the [illegible] on different occasions, we turned our attention to the nest itself. As this was three feet in between and beneath the boulders, it was impossible to photograph it in situ, so we had to content ourselves with [illegible] photograph of the nest entire [illegible] of the nest after it was removed from the cavity. The latter was made of fine grasses and roots with the addition of a few feathers. The nearest available material of this sort was over half a mile distant. The eggs, which were four in number, are pure spotless white ovate pyriform in shape, and having the smaller end sharply pointed they are at once distinctive. We found the location to be 150 feet below the top of the peak, the altitude of which is 10,020 feet.

Why Your Blood Gets Thin — By Our Family Doctor

PALENESS, pallor or anemia, is a condition or disease due to deficiency of certain of the elements of the blood, or to a lowered amount of the fluid itself. It may be manifest as a local disturbance—as persistent pallor of the face—or it may be a symptom of a general systemic affection, which is influencing the entire bodily action and giving rise to symptoms which are more or less common.

We have two important constituents of our blood are, first, a thin, colorless fluid, and second, many small, rounded bodies of cellular structure, called the corpuscles.

There are two principal varieties of these bodies, the red and the white. The first are of a variable reddish color, and it is from these that the blood gets its characteristic hue. These small circular bodies are all-important factors in connection with anemia. It is estimated that they form about 45 per cent, by weight, of the entire amount of blood. They are formed from the red marrow of the large bones and it is their duty to store up within their substance, the hemoglobin, or coloring matter, which contains a certain proportion of iron.

The function of this coloring materia, is to combine with the oxygen gas, circulating in the blood, to form such combinations as become of direct use to the tissues. Thus it is seen that the amount of hemoglobin contained within your red blood cells is the index to the condition of the blood—for reduction in amount and quality of this substance is indicative of a general lowered state of the blood itself and accounts for the accompanying paleness, or anemia, of the body tissues.

From the foregoing it is easily appreciated how a deficiency in number, or a lowered vitality of the individual corpuscle, renders the blood incapable of properly performing its function, with the result that our tissues are insufficiently nourished and anemia results.

The cause of anemia, besides being a secondary condition, following loss of blood, as in hemorrhage, due to injury; as a subsequent symptom in prolonged disease, as kidney trouble; as a result of improper or insufficient food, and as a symptom due to the poison of malaria and certain toxic drugs, usually lies in a reduction of the red coloring matter in the corpuscle, and gives rise to chlorosis, or anemia, the condition most frequently observed among young girls.

The symptoms are quite common and readily noticeable among many of the poorly nourished, hard working girls of to-day.

The following, for adult use, are beneficial preparations:

Each one of the above four lines of figures spells a word. This most fascinating puzzle can be solved with a little study, as follows: There are twenty-six letters in the alphabet, and we have used figures in spelling the four words instead of letters. Letter A is number 1, B number 2, C number 3, etc., throughout the alphabet. IF YOU CAN SPELL OUT THESE FOUR WORDS WE WILL SEND YOU A BEAUTIFUL COLLECTION OF FIVE GOLD EMBOSSED HANDSOMELY COLORED EASTER POST-CARDS. All you have to do is to enclose with your answer 2 two-cent stamps to cover cost of packing, handling, etc. USE YOUR BRAINS. Try and make out the four words. ACT QUICKLY. Write the four words on a slip of paper, mail it immediately with your name and address and 4 cents in stamps. And you will promptly receive as your reward this EASTER SURPRISE PACKET, which is a handsome assortment of five beautifully colored, embossed Easter post-cards. Act promptly.
